TELLING PLAIN TRUTHS.

In late years there has been in this part of the country a tendency of young men to crowd from the industries directly associated with agriculture into professional and mercantile pursuits, until the latter are overstocked, and the former measurably neglected. At the same time the idea has been too prevalent, judging by conditions which are apparent, that it does not require a very large amount of trained and intelligent training to engage in agricultural pursuits, and therefore there is no opportunity to display many abilities or secure a competency in that class of occupation. To this situation is largely due the fact that so many young men are without employment and that such a small percentage of wealth should come directly or indirectly from the soil to actually produce it.

Home discussion on this subject, however, is playing an important educational labor, and increasing fresh and lively interest, leading in another direction, as may be seen in the writings of horticulturists and beekeepers' societies, farmers' unions, dairymen's and forestry associations, and young men who are turning their face toward country life. The time is ripe for increased effort in directing attention to soil cultivation, etc., and much good work is being performed in this line. Among the efficient operators in this field we have had occasion to make frequent mention of the Utah Agricultural College. In an address before the chamber of commerce at Logan, the other evening, Prof. O. A. Mills, of the college faculty, dwelt on the topic referred to, and presented some plain truths in a very forcible manner. In reply to the questions "Is there in Cache valley today a demand for agriculturally educated men? Is there a demand for better butter makers, for better cheese makers? Is there a demand for better horticulturists, for better gardeners?" the professor answered with a most emphatic "Yes!" and makes his reply applicable to all Utah.

Prof. Mills then goes farther into the subject and adds that we "need men to study and to learn how to make four blades of grass grow where now there grows but one; we need men who will study to make 100 pounds of good palatable butter where now there is made but a pound of questionable stuff; we need men to study and to learn how to make ten good, sound apples and pears grow where now we have had ten aggregations of worms and insects; we need men to study and to learn how to breed and feed poultry that spring chickens may be on the market early, and that December and January may be as flush with eggs as are May and June; we need men to study and to learn how to breed and to feed hogs that they may weigh from three to four hundred pounds at about two months old and the hogs reach this age from May to September; we need men to study and to learn how to breed and feed steers that at two years old will weigh from 1,200 to 1,400 lbs. and bring the highest price on the open market, so as to obviate the necessity of importing men to do the feeding for us."

The giving of instruction in agriculture is begun in the common schools of Utah, and Prof. Mills advocates the introduction of such teaching in the public schools in the mostly district of Utah. At present the dependence is on farmers' institutes, which are few and far between, and on experience apart from systematic training. It is urged that there is no occasion for lamentation with such stories of the English taxpayer and science as now go on to show that a mixture of agricultural training can be introduced with benefit to all and harm to none, that in addition to a hundred students for the agricultural course at the college this winter there should be at least two hundred farmers taking the short winter course provided by that institution.

This is a live discussion of topics interesting and important to our industrial development. As to the butter, the cheese, the fruit, the chickens, the beef, etc., every practical farmer knows there is room for much larger production and for better quality, and that there is great need of the thorough education in these branches. If Utah dairy interests, for instance, were receiving proper attention there would be no occasion to report that in Utah markets consumption consequently as "creamery butter," and in Salt Lake City alone now of it are sold every month; or for the common statement that the genuine article is so extensively sold, or mixed through imperfect working, or so mixed as to be far inferior as food to the imitation butter. Some of these plain truths should awaken deep thought in progressive minds, and constituted forces may be applied to bring about a more prosperous and satisfactory situation than now exists. Present indications might well be improvement, provided workers in the noble cause will not grow weary in well-doing.

THE SILVER CAUSE STRONGER.

If the expressions of Senator Sherman in Wednesday afternoon's discussion upon the action of the Senate Finance committee, the silver advocates in Congress have gained strength in a remarkable degree during the past eighteen months. According to his statement, the administration is now in its financial conclusions, in favor of the coinage of silver or no legislation on the currency question. Says Mr. Sherman: "I am bound to say that the Finance committee is utterly helpless. We are equally divided. We cannot reach an agreement. We are not able to report unless the commission is made to free silver."

That this condition should have been reached so soon after the great reverses sustained by the silver cause seems almost incredible. But it would be in the highest degree hopeful if Mr. Sherman will do the one thing that will change the situation, and that is, recognize the actual facts among "the plain people, the laboring people," in whom he evinces great confidence. Yet he says, "the people have plenty of money;" and perhaps he believes it. The people do not believe it, and as the actual demonstration is with them, he does not convince them otherwise. He can if he adopts as the people's view the idea recently promulgated by the New York Post, which asserted, "it must be remembered that the farmer touches very little cash;" or that of the Boston Herald, which explained that "the currency that passes from hand to hand is a very small percentage of business operations," therefore "the bank check is the currency of the country." Neither the farmers, nor "the plain people, the laboring people," appear quite ready to accept any such idea. They neither believe that they have very little cash, though they have but little, nor that their business money is bank checks. As to the latter proposition, it is generally knowledge that the business money of the bulk of the people is that which comes in wages, and in this money practically all of this is paid in paper or metallic money, not in bank checks, and it is so circulated.

The total supply of such money as is used among the people—paper or coin—is about $1,800,000,000. Senator Sherman says this represents the small savings in the savings banks. If so, then the banks practically own as much money as the nation possesses, and when to this is added about $600,000,000 more in building and loan associations, then the debt of these two classes is in excess of all the money in circulation in the country. Even a portion of this amount is locked up in bank vaults. The wages paid in manufacturing industries alone amount to more than $2,000,000,000; in agriculture the sum is nearly as large; then there is the mercantile business, also the railway business, day laborers, etc.; unless the wage payments there is no retail operation, railway fares, etc., which chiefly go on through the medium of small money. When this is all figured up it will be seen that if the whole amount of $1,800,000,000 were in actual circulation it is using not to excessively good use.

A large supply of small money is absolutely necessary to conduct transactions in all the small avenues of trade and industry. The anti-silver policy has tended to restrict the supply, and the people are feeling the pressure. They are increasing in numbers, trade and industry are extending, and with the steady advance in these directions the limited small money supply causes the business to be more tightly drawn. The most of the people are coming to realize, by the actual effect upon them, that discussions who advocate resolution of money for general business operations among the plain people, and therefore would prolong a gold standard twice over, are men who deal in money and bank credit, and in whose interest it is to make currency scarce so that the demand for bank credit will be increased. This result is to the gain of the City, the interest of a legislation who are beginning to see how the "plain people" are currently and feeling at the pinch. That is how it comes to pass that silver advocates have gained strength in the ranks of the single standard financiers, and may expect to continue to do so.

MORIAH HALL'S MAP.

A specially-large and up-to-date map of Utah is one of the works of the public records of Utah, and the public may be given an accurate knowledge of the geography of that area Territory. To supply this want has been the aim of Moriah Hall, Esq., superintendent of schools for Weber county. For the past six months he has assiduously devoted the time he could spare from his official duties to preparing a map of Utah. That evening I Deseret Evening News had occasion to call upon Mr. Hall in his office, and he showed me the map. It is a plain, clear, well-executed work, and is the result of much labor and study. The map itself is 36x52 inches, and is in one color—tint. The county boundaries are drawn in heavy outlines, the other county divisions being shown; the railways are indicated by light red lines; the location of the principal minerals is shown in red letters. Beyond this there is no departure from the orthodox routing. This method has been followed in harmony with an accepted view among the leading educators that the fundamental principles of map work should represent the nature of the country, and contents may be given a wide range of the topography of the country.

While Superintendent Hall has been the prolifing genius and principal worker, the map is not his production alone. The location of the minerals, for instance, was, at his request, carefully revised and corrected by Don Maguire. Specially drawn plats of each county were also made and sent out by Mr. Hall to each county superintendent of schools in the Territory. These were closely examined, and necessary corrections were made by competent men in the immediate locality represented. The map, therefore, should be accurate in all its details. Its maker has received high commendations of his work from leading educators and citizens of the Territory, and no doubt it will be cordially welcomed in the special field which it is intended to fill, as well as in offices and homes where a good map of this kind is almost indispensable.

NEVERTHELESS, the great hurling that the gold men have in the silver issues, they are not so sure of their position but that they grow nervous when there appears to be a slight modification in their ranks. Even Grover Cleveland, the Gold Bug President, makes a proposition for silver if it be unanimous. A 5 per cent government bonds payable in silver, Chicago Economist review gives the Gold Bugs in the method "Shoot of Sherman would make a good 'Southern Citizens' 4 in Cuba, because in that country they still continue to use the old fashioned war weapon which they manufactured with, and do not even now deem it necessary to change them to meet the conditions exist for by modern warfare." And so, the rule that would make an inhabitant of China a good citizen in that country, ought to make a man who lives here a patriotic American. But a good "Southern Citizen" in 1861 and today would be the one who had allowed in the path of progress that he would protest his country against foreign invasion; so a good American is one that proceeds on loss to relieve the country from the calling because of the foreign gold holders—for as he version of the financial fair may prove more disastrous to a nation than the presence of a hostile army.

YESTERDAY a morning enterprisely intimated that it was that in buying watershed lands from a railway company the City Council acted in haste upon an absolute purchase, without any reservation of stone-quarry rights, arguing that such reservation was "always made," even in "the case of a compromise." Today it seems that "if there are any stone lands on the will when they can be bought at special rates." When that enterprisely has to change its position so strongly within thirty hours, its information is only weakened by any hasty hostile parade of reasons and by whining as a criticism it admits it has observed. Nevertheless, we are disposed to accept its apology—if it will try not to be hasty any more.

THE New York Herald quotes a prominent physician as saying that a "paper of best—adhesive, warm and daily use—is the 1 the sweet preservative of feminine beauty; it is glorious mistake 1 think that here can be the sweetest eyes of the fairest cows to say face when their face is fresh and most frequent; they are the inherent relief of comfort, a sort of Dyspepsia lightening to which exercise and position are most easily and rapidly dominated."

THE MAYFI Herald announces that the prohibitory so that place says we will be compelled to close the prohibition Court house if we are protected from violence. The suggestion is very commendable to persons whose sense must be thus compelled of. The Cool people's Mandamus to preserve their reputation as an orderly community, even if it requires a repeated application of force to do so.

PROFESSOR ANDERSON, in his address before the Cache Valley Association at Dover, stated that in his long years' experience with the Indians, in every tribe he had always found a white man at the bottom of it. This statement by the gallant soldier does more than point out an honorable trait of Indian character; it is a certificate of valor for Dave Cox.

AN OPENING GIVEN.

Recently Mr. J. H. Thomas, of North Dakota, visited the Shenandoah Valley, Virginia, and after carefully examining the country located in Winchester, he writes to Mr. V. Hoskins, Land and Immigration Agent, Baltimore & Ohio Railroad, Baltimore, Maryland, as follows: "I have come to query every state and territory in the United States, and am back to my opinion that this valley surpasses all other sections in the Union. The lands are low in price, and possess profitable crops. I thank you for introducing the farm, and point those seeking pleasant and profitable homes to locate in this country."

To the many friends, who so kindly lent me their assistance during the illness of my late husband, I desire to express my heartfelt thanks.

Special mention is due to Mr. Webber and the officers of Z. C. M. I. for their kind assistance and sympathy in other ways; also to the "Deseret Dispensary," for the valuable assistance rendered me in my sad bereavement.

BUSINESS METHODS OF THE DAY.

Those Adopted by Progressive Merchants.

Step into the stores of any of our progressive merchants of today and you will be delighted at the new, clean, fresh appearance of the stock of goods presented for your inspection and purchase at the sketches of old style or shelf-worn goods, who if you should ask the merchants how he secures such accumulations, he will tell you frankly that he sells them before they get to that condition; by going through his stock from time to time and say which is not selling rapidly is marked with a price so low that customers who can use such goods can't afford not to buy—very satisfactory how much he may lose by the transaction, but how much the gain will be it will be felt in business worthless by holding until it has so deteriorated, for instance, of men's clothing, styles of goods change with remarkable rapidity and goods are used part of each season they depreciate in value. Only yesterday, one of the city merchants with an eye to the interests of his customers, with which to buy a fresh, reasonable stock. And for this reason we feel that with our half-price sale on Pants for the past two weeks we have made a handsome money. We will continue sales prices for ten days more and sell at our half price, whatever may remain, and meanwhile cutting the coarse prices at $3, $4, $5, $6, $7, $8, $9 and $10 pants to the mark for $3. We also offer to return them satisfied. We can't afford to offer them only on cash sale. As we know that time is so offer you cash sales to refund, in the large sale we had on Pants for the past ten days, and we expect to sell 200 pairs in the next ten days on this great clothing.
