Wednesday a train load of sheep was shipped from the Kelton station, Box Elder county, to San Francisco. There were sixteen car loads, containing 700 to 800 each.

The last quarterly mortality report of Salt Lake City, M. Forrest sexton, showed there died in Brigham City that December, two in January and three in February, a total of only eight deaths in three months. The total number of births last year, 1892, was twenty-three, a remarkable increase on the preceding year, 1891, when there were seventy-three births.

John Trudeau, convicted in the district court at Virginia City, Nevada, on charge of embezzling $1867 from Wells, Fargo & Co., while acting as local agent for that firm, was on Saturday sentenced to serve a term of five years in the state prison. Counsel for Trudeau asked for a stay of execution to allow an appeal to the state supreme court, which was granted on the defendant filing a bond for $1000.

Governor Osborne, of Wyoming, recently had his penitentiary visited by the latest, a well known citizen, with the unmentionables, which were thrown in a lady room, and the governor thought a practical joke was being played on him. He changed his mind, however, on finding that $500 was missing from the pocket. He gave the case into the hands of the U. S. marshal.

Last Tuesday, a little daughter of James A. Weaver, of Three Mile Creek, Box Elder county, accidentally fell off a bridge on house six feet wide. Although the child is but three years old this is the third time she has suffered from a broken limb. Dr. Carrington says she is quite remarkable for her brittleness of her bones. They are noticeably free from the pliability usually found in the bones of children of tender years. The bones are thin as a dime, on which account the little sufferer has already lost several of the tiny fingers that should adorn the right hand.

Wednesday last Bishop Henry Tingey informed us that now that their ward meeting house has been disposed of to the school district for school purposes, the people were turning their attention toward putting up a new building, says the Brigham Bugler. A meeting committee, consisting of J. H. Hoffheter, N. P. Anderson and James Iverson, has been appointed to investigate the matter. The site chosen is the vacant lot east of the building just sold and with all bonuses to the ward. The villages of that ward are sent upon saving a handsome, commodious structure, which will not cost less than $5000. It will probably be started late coming summer.

Dr. C. B. Jenkins killed Charles Dittman in the postoffice at Lawrence, Colorado, March 8th and was lodged in the Cripple Creek town jail two hours later. He was brought up from Lawrence by two citizens of the town, to whom he surrendered. Jenkins went into the postoffice to get his mail and was followed a moment later by Dittman. The two men had some trouble over a claim and after a few words Dittman struck Jenkins in the face. The latter drew an ordinary pocket knife, opened it and slashed his assailant in the neck, cutting the jugular vein. He also plunged the knife in his body several times before Dittman was sank to the floor. He died in less than ten minutes.

Thomas Lahey, a bricklayer, was struck and instantly killed by a southbound Missouri Pacific passenger train at Colorado Springs on Friday last. The deceased was walking to his city from Pueblo over the Rio Grande track, when near Lake Burden, he was overtaken by passenger train No. 12, which is due here at 10:57 a.m. The engineer did not blow the whistle continuously from the time he sighted the man until the engine struck him. It is supposed that the heavy wind blowing from the north prevented Lahey hearing the warning. The force with which the engine struck Lahey hurled him to the left of the track, killing him instantly. The train was stopped and crossed brought to the city. An examination shows such hot cut off above the ankles and the back of the skull fractured, the latter causing death.

The citizens of Lafayette, Colorado, have been thoroughly excited over the discovery of a real ghost. The visitor from the other world is supposed to be in holding in an old section house and the office from Lafayette on the line of the new defunct Denver, Utah and Northern Railroad company. The house is occupied by Oscar Mitchelmore and family. The family have the reputation of being spiritualists. One night about two weeks ago the ghost, which is supposed to be one of the gentle sex, was discovered standing at the door of the stairs inside the house by the two ladies of the family, who on seeing her ghostship screamed and fainted. The noise alarmed Mr. Mitchelmore, who rushed into the hall to ascertain the trouble and on seeing the apparition at the top of the stairs recoiled and pressed his shotgun and fired two barrels of buckshot into the white robed to chase Mrs. Ghost. The excitement ran so high that last night a crowd numbering 150, headed by Chief Marshal Dougal and Deputy Rinna went over the haunted house to interview the ghost. Marshal Dougal swears that he could see the ghost and feel the house sway as though rocked by a violent gale of wind.

At Sacramento, Cal., on Saturday night a French woman named Cassey, while under the influence of whisky, lessed herself in her room at a lodging house on the corner of Ninth and L streets, kept by Mrs. T. Jones, turned on the gas and poured two ounces of coal oil over the bedding and all other inflammable material she could find. She then laid down upon the floor and fanned the combustible mass. Tears were over her remains in the house at the time. The building is a high three-story wooden structure, and had a fire there became well started, James says it would have been by the previous date, there would have been an appalling loss of life. Fortunately the fire was discovered through the smoke rushing into the hallway, and the flames were extinguished, but not before Mrs. Cassey had been nearly suffocated. It was discovered afterward that during the night the woman had taken out the gas fixture from the gas jets in all rooms in which she was, and yet she attempted to commit suicide by asphyxiation. Before setting fire to her bed clothing, this resident intimated that she had begun by carbolic acid or by the same application with gas to end her life which she failed. Mr. James, a tenant in the house, smelled the gas coming upstairs and it was largely on account of his efforts that the fire did not reach the upper floors.

Elmer Good, aged 7, was run into and nearly injured by a runaway team belonging to John Seaman. The boy was a son of John Good, living at No. 1231 New Haven street. The runaway which ended by disastrously started from the polling place of precinct No. 29 on Delaware street. The driver, John Nelson, the well known politician, and ex-city street commissioner of the eleventh ward, drove to the polling place and left the team standing. He had two spirited horses attached to a light buggy. Arrived No. 29 he disappointed himself by tracking in the window of the polling place and creating a general stir. When the result is in, and was announced that he was very happy, and with a cheer he jumped into the buggy to drive home and celebrate. At this he jumped into his rig and started home in high spirits. As he turned into Nineteenth street he noticed his whip down on the back seat. He turned his horses and they started on the run. The whip was found beyond control. At the point where the street crosses the railroad tracks one of the wheels caught in the ice in a rut. The wheel was wrenched off and Nelson was thrown to the ground. He was not injured. The terrified team, now unmanned, coasted up the street. At the corner of Jefferson and Market streets the horses turned a very sharp curve. Three little boys were standing directly in front of the runaway team. They were the Misses Good. The two sisters, Julia, aged 12, and Aileen, aged 9, saw the danger and tried out to little Edith, but ere about as if meant a mouthful for tiny, as the pole of the buggy struck him on the head, knocked him down, and the horses ran on their journey of destruction. The boy was carried by the horses and then dragged by the wheelless hub and dropped for half a street before he became disengaged from the wheel. The horses then ran up Market street to Twenty-fifth, and then turned up to Lafayette. At this point they encountered with a cable car and in the impact killed one of horses. The passengers in the car were badly frightened but no one was injured. A drug store was the nearest one, and he was carried within to Lyman's drug store at 1004 Nineteenth street, and the police were notified. Police Surgeon Wheeler was sent for at once. Little Edith was found to be unconscious. Little Aileen was not hurt, but was very much frightened. Little Edith did not come to her consciousness, but he lived for two hours and twenty minutes after the accident.
