Patriotic Program This Evening, at Which Congressman King Will Speak—Other Summer Resort Features.

Utah's contingent to the union of the Grand Army of the Republic—the part of which here is tantamount to the Salt Lake City participants—paraded the streets and marched most furnished by Confederate Veteran Camp and made quite a demonstration at Salt Lake City. Those responsible for Major Lund and Captain Allen. The procession terminated at the Rio Grande Western depot, where the veterans took train for Saltair to spend the afternoon and evening. Perhaps there never was a more patriotic society of Utah which the war for the Union. The ranks of the veterans were well manned, and the procession was appreciated as clearly portrayed by the comments of the people along the line of the parade. Veteran Camp Lincoln, the oldest Union Veterans of the past. The Sixth Grand Army men also showed to the same place as did the G. A. R. men.

At Saltair a dinner awaited the veterans for a treat to the Grand Encampment, and return. Much interest was manifest in the evening, and perhaps more than the usual number came from the city to Saltair. Music was furnished by the Saltair band, and the 2,000 seats of the railroad building.

This evening Hon. W. H. King will address the local members of the Grand and their friends from the platform in the dancing pavilion. His subject will be, Honor and Patriotism in Cuba. Speaking will begin at 8 o'clock. Later there will be an exhibition of fireworks and boat war pictures every displayed on canvas.

TRIBUTE TO JOSEPH BANIGAN.

Kind Words Spoken of the Respected Dead by the Colorado Catholic and Providence Visitor.

Colorado Catholic: In the death of Mr. Joseph Banigan, which occurred at his late home in Providence, not only the Catholics of Rhode Island suffer loss, but the Catholics of the whole country are made to mourn. It was in truth an exceptional man such, unfortunately, there are not many of the same kind. Mr. Banigan had many interests in this part of the country, his investments reaching into the millions. The readers of the Colorado Catholic in Denver and Utah who have known and met Mr. Banigan in a business way will be interested in the following editorial of him from the Providence Visitor, published at his late home:

In the death of Mr. Joseph Banigan, the citizens of Providence and of Rhode Island, and the Catholics of the country, have lost one who was an admirable combination of the business man and the practical Catholic. Mr. Banigan was a man of many millions, and in recent years, as cancer had it, his interests became vast enough to put the large interests to find in various kinds of business did not distract him from the needs of the poor and suffering.

For some years then was no more conspicuous figure in the business world of this state. He achieved success in his particular business efforts and he was always successful. He began life in poverty and he never tried to forget those days. Many of our fellow citizens remember well when he was a fellow citizen, a young man, who enjoyed poverty in later life he practice of his youth.

Heathenized in a practical way, he was his way to worship Nature. He was a lover of Nature and of the Nature's God. He was a master of the rubber trade in all its branches. He knew and was interested in the business in Rhode Island, he knew Rubber the business outside of the exceptional necessary good in its manufacture. But the business capacity made him a lover of work. While others were honoring and honor their monetary, he made himself, for the benefit of any business enterprise and arrayed to a few months the resources of an enterprise, which he was the head. He was a man of many parts, and one in different, but quite in union, to quote, indeed, had his complete success in life were often modified and taken by surprise.

Self-reliance was successful with, he looked upon the rich and was disposed to look at a man as anyone who is work and has to be not wealth could be both. Therefore he was a man who was able to organization and more control patiently. Had he been less great a man, he would have made more money in business, if wealth had been his aim. Wealth which during his life time was in his hands, he gave back to the people and the private home relations supplied it to end. He gave, in his life, when he was their friend, he was not only an employer but he was a lovable friend to their wives and children. He was a man of honor, so well of his word, he was a man of his word, he was a man of his word, he was a man
