FREDERICK H. AUERBACH.

The news of the death of Frederick H. Auerbach comes as a shock to the people of this State, who realize a severe loss in the sudden taking away of one of the foremost men among them. Only a few days ago, Mr. Auerbach, although he had reached the sixtieth milestone, was apparently in the best of health and good for another score of years to active life. He had gone on a business trip to New York, and not until a few hours before the sad news of his death came was there any intimation of illness; then the tidings which startled his relatives and friends speedily culminated in the news that the attack of appendicitis, which had come upon him suddenly and for which an operation had been performed, had wrought its deadly work, and a highly esteemed man, honored and admired for his business ability and integrity, and beloved for his kind and charitable disposition and actions, had passed into the great beyond.

For over thirty years Mr. Auerbach has been a well known merchant in this State, and during the entire time his name has been a synonym for business capacity and honor. He was the founder of the mercantile establishment of F. Auerbach & Brother, and in connection therewith held, up to the hour of death, the position of the leading Hebrew business man in the State. It was not alone on his qualifications as a business man in the pursuit of his private affairs that he reached the high place he occupies in the esteem of the people; but the versatility and force of his public-spiritedness brought him into intimate association with almost every leading enterprise here for the benefit of the community in general; his clear judgment, his warm enthusiasm, and his abiding faith in and love for Utah as shown in his works more than his words, all were recognized and brought to him a fullness of public confidence of which any man might be proud. Further than this, his marked kindness and magnanimity, displayed in liberally and widely distributed charities of which he made no ostentation but which he preferred to perform in a quiet way, reveal an element in his character which merited the affectionate feeling with which he was generally regarded. In his departure, the Chamber of Commerce of this city loses its president and one of its chief supporters and most active workers; the State is deprived of one of its foremost men in business and other affairs; and many who have been the recipients of his bounty must bid farewell to a noble benefactor.

The bereaved brother and other relatives of Mr. Auerbach have the deep and sincere sympathy of the whole community in the loss they are called to sustain. And while the burden is heavy, there is consolation in realizing the fact that the threescore years of life which "Fred" Auerbach passed on earth have been full of energy and usefulness, and that the world is better for his having lived in it.

MORMONISM DISCUSSED.

Mormonism is a subject much discussed in the world at present. It is evidently of interest in very wide circles. It is noticeable, however, that some cannot approach it without bitterness and without repeating the most notorious falsehoods; others are kindly disposed and willing to discuss it impartially and with regard for truth. And what is particularly noticeable about this is that the former generally are people identified with Christian denominations, who should be filled with the spirit of the Master, while the latter are found among those whose pretensions are less pretentious.

For instance, the well known German magazine, Illustrite Zeitung for August 15, devotes a column to the history of the Mormons and Utah. The article is illustrated with a very good portrait of President Wilford Woodruff. There are some serious mistakes in dates and facts, but the author is disposed to believe. He closes his contribution as follows:

Salt Lake City is today one of the most and most solor cities of America and Utah rejoices in the greatest wealth among the Western States. Utah's admittance to the United States is a brilliant proof of the liberal policy of the Washington government, which pulses behind the excellent qualities of the industrious and competent laborer on the shores of the Great Salt Lake.

In an entirely different spirit a Mormonism discussed in a French tract published at Cherny. But the author of this is a pastor of an "evangelical church." He commences by stating that his standpoint is truth as given in the word of God, and then he proceeds to relate the long ago exploded fable of the Spalding manuscript and tells horrible tales about Brigham Young, designing angels and other myths. The author says he is inclined to believe that some Mormons are honest, but to time case they are curse.

This is a fair example of the way in which the subject of Mormonism is being discussed in the world, both at home and abroad. The perverted standard-bearers of truth generally hide themselves from it in the darkest corners of falsehoods and ignorance. No wonder they cannot see it. Christianity at first met a similar reception. The "publicans" rejected the publishers. It was nevertheless made one of in the structures, while the builders themselves were rejected.

BONDS PAYABLE IN COIN.

Several Salt Lake City subscribers to the NEWS affix their signature to the following request, dated September 1:

Will you kindly state through the columns of your valuable paper whether the bonds of the United States are payable in gold or in coin.

If any are made payable in gold, when were they issued and how much?

All the outstanding bonds of the United States are made payable in gold coin, by the terms thereof, are made payable in gold. An attempt was made at the time of the last issue to obtain an authorization for a gold issue, but Congress refused, and the bonds of that time were made as all others sold by the government, and as required by law, payable in coin. Because of the effort to make gold bonds, many people got the idea that such were actually issued, but they were not. The statement has been made frequently in speeches that the government was in honor bound to pay its bonds in gold, and this misled many people to the view that most of the bonds were, by their express terms, payable in the yellow metal. But the latter is not the case. The basis for claiming, in the speeches referred to, that they should be so paid was that gold was the coin of their purchase money; but the government can pay in silver coin if it chooses, and the fear that free silver will mean that the payment is to be made in silver coin is one of the bases for the cry of "repudiation"—not that any actual repudiation is intended or thought of. The United States has no outstanding gold bonds; all are payable in coin.

ONE OF THE SIGNS.

The influence of the Jewish race on civilized mankind is of incalculable importance, and the fact is gradually dawning upon those who give the subject any thought. Notwithstanding the adverse conditions under which they have existed almost everywhere—or perhaps on account of these conditions—they alone of all ancient nations have preserved their identity and purity as a race, and their presence in the world has always been a factor in its development, particularly when great changes were on the program.

The gradually increasing power and influence of the Hebrews at the present time are among the noteworthy signs of the age. The ancient promise once given to their ancestor, that in his seed all the nations of the earth should be blessed, may yet be fulfilled in the part they are destined to play in the immediate history of this world. They represent, says a writer on the subject quoted in the Literary Digest, the one eastern nation that is in constant and immediate touch with every part of the West. While they have preserved their own nationality in a way and under such difficulties, as have affected no other nation in history, they have still to a very great extent become mixed up with the social life of every other nation of any pretense to civilization upon the face of the earth. And when in this fact is added the fact that they have come down from the earliest antiquity as an unmixed race, if any evidence is to be given to the theory of heredity, we can not but believe that their influence will be felt in every future development of sociology to a very marked degree.

Unquestionably the mission of the Hebrews is not yet fulfilled. The day of their independence as a nation in the land of their fathers is looked forward to with much confidence, and when this has come to pass and the Lord again dwells in the tents of Shem, then the mission will be better understood and more appreciated. The affairs in the Orient just now certainly seem to indicate that the time may be near for the removal of all obstacles to a return of the faithful Jews to their own inheritance.

ELECTION EXPENSES, 1892.

HARDEN CITY, Rich county, Utah, Aug. 29, 1896.—I have been requested by several of last November's election officers to write and get your opinion on the following through the columns of the DESERET NEWS:

Congress, just before adjourning, appropriated, among many other things, $25,000 to defray the expenses of the last election.

Would you kindly state what, in your opinion, the money will be diverted to by those who had charge at election the last, the registrars and judges of elections? In our county it cost nearly a year after the time of the election, and over six months after Congress made the appropriation.

Trusting that we may be favored with your valued opinion on the matter, I am, very respectfully, A SUBSCRIBER.

Many of the election officers have been paid in full, and all should have been by this time, if they have made application to the disbursing agent, George W. Parks, whose office is at No. 212 East Temple street, Salt Lake City. If registrars or election officers in Rich county, or any other part of the State, are unpaid for their labors performed in 1892, prior to admission to Statehood, there is no reason why they should not be promptly settled with upon applying to Mr. Parks in person or by letter.

ACTION GOT THE BUST OF IT.

In a New York court on Saturday Hubert Hilliard, the actor, made a contest on behalf of the public and against a street railway, in which the railway came out second best. In this instance the railway has been relenting to issue transfers from certain lines to others on a continuous route. Hilliard said he has on the first car, and changed at the junction. When the conductor on car number two came, the actor explained the refusal to give him a transfer and that he had paid. The conductor said he would have to pay again or leave; the actor refused to do either and was arrested. The court ascertained the facts, informed the conductor that he had not the actor was to blame for the stopping of the car and blocking traffic, and released Mr. Hilliard, whom he said had exercised only his legal rights, and therefore could not be summarily "bounced" from a car for refusing to pay double fare. The actor later instituted suit against the railway for damages for the action of its representative.

AS GOES VERMONT.

If, as claimed for Washington politicians, they believe there is some force in the discovery that when the Republican majority in Vermont has been over 25,000 in the September election that party has won the national election the succeeding November, they now have something on which to base predictions in the fact that Vermont has gone Republican by the greatest majority ever known in history—over 30,000. In 1894, the majority was 26,082 and Lincoln was elected; in 1892, it was 22,122 and Grant was elected. In 1892 it was 23,554, and Grant was again elected. In 1890 it fell to 15,558, and Tilden joined the election by a scratch. In 1888 it was 27,251, and Garfield became President. In 1884, when Cleveland gained his first election, it was 22,169. In 1880, when Hartman was elected, it rose to 28,404, falling in 1882, when Cleveland won his second term, to 19,702.

THE CLASSICS CONDENSED.

From foreign exchanges it is learned that the Norwegian parliament during its last session authorized the abolition of Greek and Latin as studies in the high schools of the country. The modern languages in all their branches will be taught as heretofore.

In the parliamentary debates on this subject the uselessness of the dead languages for practical purposes was emphasized, but besides this reason, it was argued that the Latin-Germanic education has inculcated pagan ideas in our modern civilization to the great harm of the morals of the people. The supposed corruption of the cultivated classes was attributed to their familiarity with the classics. On the other hand it was maintained that the study of the Scandinavian literature was exalting, as shown in the morals of the peasant class. The tillers of the soil were active and virtuous while the aristocracy was the opposite, causing all manners of difficulties, political and social.

It is not natural to suppose that these in the eyes of whom such arguments are conclusive have never studied Homer and Virgil, nor have they a right appreciation of the general condition of human nature. It is not true that vice and culture, ignorance and morality always go together.

THE NATIONAL Democratic convention in Indianapolis does not seem to attract as much attention from the public as was anticipated. Nevertheless, it is a gathering of men many of whom have achieved and yet hold great political influence in the states they hail from.
