OUR WATER SUPPLY.

The scarcity of water in this city at the present time is the subject of much comment, although there is, of course, no actual "water famine," and no prospect of one. The regular fall storms are likely to come before long and settle the water question for another year. Still a condition that makes it necessary to use the water supply sparingly should be met. Salt Lake City cannot afford to acquire a reputation for not having water enough for culinary and other purposes. Street sprinkling cannot be given up during the dry, hot season, as that would mean sickness and an increased death-rate. And if there is not a supply in the city pipes large enough for this purpose, the necessary sprinkling should be provided for from some other source.

A friend of the "News" suggests that the city immediately construct several large wooden boxes for the purpose of holding water to be supplied from the Salt Lake and Jordan canal, in sufficient quantities to sprinkle all the streets of Salt Lake City, placing one tank or box at the corner of Main and North Temple streets; one at the corner of Fourth East and Second South streets; one at First West and Third South streets and one at Seventh East [illegible]

HONORS TO THE BRAVE.

[illegible]

[illegible] Wherever he speaks of his achievements, the brave men and true who were with him through it all receive their share of the mention and praise. He is entirely deserving of the additional honors proposed and in order that they may be extended without needless delay let us, as they say in the conventions, make it unanimous.

WAR SPIRIT IN ENGLAND.

It has often been noticed that the war fever is contagious. When one country achieves glory on land and sea, others seem to be seized with a desire to shine, too, and thus the war spirit is kept up. Just now, according to accounts, Great Britain is showing serious symptoms of unrest. Our cousins across the water have read the story of the wonderful feats of our navy in the contest with Spain, and they are said to be longing for an opportunity to try English gunnery against Russian battleships, if for no other reason, to demonstrate to the world that all the Deweys and Hobsons are not on this side of the Atlantic. Nor can it be wondered at, if a nation that claims to be ruler of the waves should have a desire to engrave on the annals of history a chapter of illustrious deeds as memorable as those just recorded of the United States.

That Russia is on the lookout for the day when she must defend herself seems to be the deep impression of her statesmen. Only recently an announcement was made that the St. Petersburg government had placed an order with an American firm for five new warships. Undoubtedly Russia's present policy is to delay the struggle [illegible]
