THE DOINGS OF ALMED MEN.

Mysterious Death of a Man in Colorado.—Killed by a Spring Gun.—Fatal Accident.

A half Indian by the name of C. H. Whitmore was accidentally shot by a spring gun set to kill deer on a ranch owned by A. M. Gilley, near Campbellville, Yuba county, the other night. Mortification set in and he died early next morning.

The Pueblo, Colorado board of trade has decided to put forth its strongest efforts for the next few months to secure the location of new industrial enterprises here and particularly such as will tend to foster and develop agriculture in the Arkansas valley. A meeting of all the members has been called to further this policy of the board. Among the first propositions to be considered is one for a large flour mill and another for a preserving factory. Other manufacturing enterprises will also receive their attention and proper aid.

The Point Rock (Wyo.) Record says a little girl, the daughter of an emigrant coming into the town, was killed near Bald creek the latter part of last week. The party was coming down the side of Bald mountain, where there was no wagon road, and were compelled to make a road part of the way. The little girl, with several companions, was playing on a steep two hundred yards below the camp when a large boulder, which was being rolled out of the way, started down the side of the mountain directly toward the children. The little unfortunate was in the path and was crushed into a shapeless mass.

At daylight on Monday morning a party of armed men went to the well camp of Brown, Lynn & Co., on the head of Paradise creek, Colorado, and while the boilers were at breakfast put a rope around the neck of one, and at the muzzle of six-shooters forced the other to accompany them to a sheep being driven out of Garfield into Rio Blanco county. Great excitement prevails, and Sheriff Thomas of Gunnison has been telegraphed to come and quell the disturbance. The women of the town are loaded in Gardfield county, ten miles north of Paradise and Rifle, Rio Blanco county, and is out in the same locality as the chicken coop trouble. The settlers and cattlemen are excited, and the trouble may yet have serious results. Sheriff Thomas, or the deputies, are collecting force and orders to go to the scene of the trouble from Lynn.

John Rifle and Gerrard Warren of Spokane, Washington, were hot shooting on Monday on the farm of a man named Fisher, nine miles south of Spokane, when Fisher ordered them off. They started to go and when in front of Fisher's house Rifle and Warren engaged in a quarrel. Fisher got his Winchester and when he came out Warren fired at him with his shotgun, but missed. Fisher returned the fire, shooting Warren in the right side. Fisher then fired at Rifle, but missed. He pulled the lever to throw in another cartridge, when Rifle commanded him to stop, which he refused to do, and Rifle fired, the shot striking Fisher in the front of the neck. Fisher was already blind in one eye and the shot destroyed the other eye, rendering him totally blind. Rifle and Warren then walked to town. Warren's condition is said to be such that the wound is not dangerous. Rifle gave himself up and is now in jail.

The dead body of G. B. Brown, commonly known as Spencer Brown among his acquaintances at Pueblo and at Florence, Colo., his home, was found lodged at the mouth of the Arkansas river on Monday afternoon. A heavy contusion on the forehead made it appear almost impossible that Brown was murdered in this city and the body thrown into the river. He was about 50 years old and his home for several years past has been at Florence, where he was in the employ of the local newspaper. He has been a great sufferer by rheumatism for a couple of years past, and on that account has spent a good part of his time here, taking the mineral baths. He was generally well supplied with money, being an ex-soldier and pensioner, and also an industrious man when able to work. During his sojourn in Pueblo he was a regular one of the gambling houses, and the last seen of him alive by his friends was when he left one of those places on Friday morning about 2 o'clock, in company with a supposed friend, but a comparative stranger.

Mrs. Louis Dagner, of San Jose, Cal., attempted suicide on Monday by taking a dose of rat poison. Mr. and Mrs. Dagner are Christian scientists. They believe that all sickness can be cured by certain mental means. Dagner has been one of the most active members in the church and recently was appointed an elder, whose duty, according to their belief, is to preach the gospel to suffering mankind. In accordance with this idea he was to go to some other part of the country and try to make converts. His wife was opposed to this, but he declared he would go and he did so, leaving his wife. Monday morning Dagner left the house and was hardly out of sight when one of the children discovered that the mother was ill and gave an alarm. The neighbors rushed in. The woman had taken poison. Her husband was found and when he returned refused to have a doctor, claiming that prayer would do the whole work. Finally a cup of mustard coffee had the effect of making the woman vomit, and she recovered sufficiently to be around to the afternoon. Later she dealed taking the poison. Her object was gained, however, for her husband decided to resign as elder and is calm at home.
