handkerchief hearing the initials—that he was totally ignorant of it being among the rest.

SEEKING SURGICAL INSTRUMENTS.

An Incident That May Indicate the Direction in Which the Slasher's Next Run

A noteworthy incident that may indicate the trend of Chief Hennessy's thought on matters of assassination came to light last evening from Detective Geogan Newer's Grand Opera House Johnny, Where he has confined to his bed for some time, on account of sickness told Jerome Chamberlin another Sun-day accosted to member the asset City. Hennessy walked into H. W. Fuller's pawn shop on Second South street, while he (Newer) was present and asked for pieces of surgical instruments which had been on exhibition in the window for some time. Mr. Fuller gave him the desired information whereupon he wanted to know if the Ripper sister was the lowest to which the instruments could be bought. Some dickering followed, but the deal was not closed and Hennessy left the shop. After he had merged out Newer says he remarked to himself, "I wonder what in the — a minister wants with a set of tools like this?" Some time after the instruments were sold, but Mr. Fuller, when visited by a News man and Detective Newer last evening, could not recall the name of trustees of the purchaser or even approximately the date of the sale. He is under the impression, however, the buyer was a younger man than Hennessy, although he is not positive on this point. The proposition is brought, that Mr. Chamberlin may not not to be taken with surgical instruments at all, but rather with a butcher knife and razor razor, the evidence that was found in the houses. If the man ever came into possession of the instruments referred to, he probably took them away with him. But the chances seem to be against him ever having bought them either in person or by proxy.

Was Responsible for Hennessy.

Hermann, it appears, was responsible for the fact, Mr. Hansen, also of the Pennsylvania Methodist church. That is plainly shown from what he told Miss Larsen, the monotonity column of Miss Sunnyboy, about February 10, prior to going to Montana and Minnesota. That lady stated today that the publication had been made for nothing, inasmuch as the fellow must not be trusted with a knowledge of any of their affairs; that she must have absolutely nothing to do with him for the reason that if he narrow anything it would result in his exposure to the Hennessy. The Rev. Mr. Hansen is speaking of the incident today said he was not at all surprised at Hermann at that time and does not know why the police looked upon him with such distrust.

Same Still on the Door.

The entrance to the new notorious church building still bears on the front door, a metal plate with the name, "Rev. Francis Hermann." It is understood that the plate will shortly be removed some of the parishioners making a demand to that effect. Whether the building will ever again be used for religious worship is a question the members of the congregation are discussing with more or less vigor. Some so far as to unhesitatingly declare that the structure should be completely sold to the ground, taking the position that the city cannot afford to have it pointed out as strangers as the Emmanuel church within the walls of which scenes fully as bad, if not more, than those enacted in the San Francisco counterpart have been recovered.

Trunk and Switch.

The officers hope within the next twenty-four hours to be able to find the purchaser of Miss Chasen's trunk—the one who bought it from Mr. Engelmann, the secondhand goods dealer who received it from Pastor Hermann. The same hope is indulged with reference to the recovery of the missing guitar.

No Hearing Today.

The work of further canvassing in the church successes today was entirely suspended and may not be resumed again. It certainly will not be if the committee selected concerning Miss Sunnyboy look up to what they are expected to. There is now no thought she was buried in the Sunnyside.

Detectives Waiting for a Reward.

The probability of Governor Wells offering a reward in behalf of the State of the apprehension of the mysterious fiend is considered a good one by officials into private conversion, who say if the money is put up that Harrigan will surely be run down. In the event that a public reward is not offered, then it is believed that the necessary money will be raised by private subscription.

Heavier Coastal Service Needed.

Manager Brown says that the coastal steamers without a parcel in Utah coastal hydraulic service. The demand from people all over the country of some more frequent mail and better connections. In addition to the regular Annapolis Pier service, which has been nearly 12,000 miles more than ever before in the past two years in the shape of service.

Still Repeating Absurdity.

SPOKANE, Wash., May 25.—Some of the members of the Norwegian Lutheran church, of this city, believe that their pastor, Francis Hermann, their former pastor, is the same Hermann who is wanted at Salt Lake City. Hermann was here about two years ago and left a legacy of unchastity. Though his efforts to present church was rent and he completed the pulpit four years, when which he left for Utah. He was here under a Well-known name and has remained several years in the house of the present pastor of the church. He did not know exactly what he was doing while he was going, and he has since been tried by a jury of his peers. Several of the jurors are members of the church. It is known that he is wanted in Utah for the crime charged to him, and he will be taken back to Salt Lake City.

Where Mrs Chasen Was Is Question.

OMAHA, May 25.—Mrs. Theodosia Chasen, the young woman who was in companionship with Rev. Pastor Hermann of Salt Lake, has not yet appeared against Rev. Pastor Hermann of that city, and it is thought by her friends here that she will not be forthcoming. Her friends here have not heard from her since she left Omaha to go to Salt Lake City, Utah, where she was to be married to Rev. Pastor Hermann, Illinois.

Lawn Still on the Door.

The entrance to the new notorious church building still bears on the front door, a metal plate with the name, "Rev. Francis Hermann." It is understood that the plate will shortly be removed some of the parishioners making a demand to that effect. Whether the building will ever again be used for religious worship is a question the members of the congregation are discussing with more or less vigor. Some so far as to unhesitatingly declare that the structure should be completely sold to the ground, taking the position that the city cannot afford to have it pointed out as strangers as the Emmanuel church within the walls of which scenes fully as bad, if not more, than those enacted in the San Francisco counterpart have been recovered.

Trunk and Guitar