Texas Stock and Farm Journal: The present outlook for the cattle industry in Texas is very encouraging. Even admitting that low or lower markets will prevail for the next few months, the shortage in the country, gradually increasing export trade, supplemented, it is to be hoped by an increasing home demand, should all combine to prevent decrease in values for some time to come. At the worst for the cattle business, like any other, requires now, as much as ever, good judgment and careful management to insure the balance on a year's operations being at the right side of the ledger.
