CONGRESSIONAL.

SENATE.

Respect to Fillmore—Railroad Measures.

WASHINGTON, 10.—Conkling, after speaking of the life and character of the late ex-President Fillmore, offered the following resolution—"That the Senate has heard with deep regret of the death of Millard Fillmore, formerly Chief Magistrate of the U. S., and Vice President, and that a committee of three Senators be appointed by the Chair to attend the funeral in behalf of the Senate;" the resolution was unanimously adopted, and the Chair appointed, as a committee to attend the funeral, Fenton, Hamlin and Bayard.

Oglesby presented a joint resolution from the Illinois State legislature, asking for the passage of laws to prevent unjust discrimination and charges by R. R. companies; referred to the R. R. committee.

Wright, from the committee on the judiciary, reported and recommended the passage of a bill declaring it to be the true intent and meaning of the Pacific R. R. acts of '64 and '66, that for the construction of the central branch of the U. P. R. R., lands and bonds were granted for one hundred miles next the Missouri river and no more, and prohibiting the issuance of bonds or patents for lands for any extension of said road, or of the Hannibal and St. Joseph railroad in excess of one hundred miles next to the Missouri river; placed on the calendar.

HOUSE.

Bills Passed—Appropriation Bill, Sanborn Contracts, &c.

A bill for the apportionment of Wyoming Territory for legislative purposes passed.

A bill to prevent the useless slaughter of buffaloes on the western prairies passed.

The House went into a committee of the whole on the legislative, executive and judicial appropriation bill. Beck addressed the committee, and reasserted the correctness of the statement made by him and disputed by Garfield in regard to the estimates and appropriations for the current fiscal year. He asserted that the appropriations were $319,000,000, exclusive of $4,000,000 extra for the navy, while the estimates only amounted to $308,000,000, so the appropriations for the year exceeded the estimates $15,000,000. He asserted that the appropriations for 1871-72 were $301,000,000, including $154,000,000 for the sinking fund, interest on the public debt and all other items; the appropriations for 1872-3 were $299,000,000 including $159,000,000 for the sinking fund, leaving $140,000,000 for the regular service, while the appropriations for the regular service for '73-74, exclusive of the sinking fund, etc., were $172,000,000, or $327,000,000 more than in '72-'73. He declared that he had demonstrated that the sinking fund was included in all the figures given for the expenditures since 1870, and he rebuked Dawes for retracting, at the request of Garfield, his statement in regard to the sinking fund, and intimated that he did it to have the party reproached.

Dawes explained that he examined the figures, and he still believed Garfield was right in his correction, except that he, Garfield, had accidentally stated the sinking fund at $43,0000,000 instead of $29,000,000.

Beck, resuming, charged that the officials were withholding the $72,000,000 of unexpended balances, and illegally drawing upon them. He also referred to the Sanborn contract, the law for which, he said, had been engineered by Garfield.

Butler, of Mass., defended the Secretary of the Treasury from the imputations of Beck in regard to the unexpended balances. Referring to the allegations of Beck, that Garfield engineered the bill for the Sanborn contract, he said that the newspapers stated that he, Butler, had engineered it, but they honored him over much, for he knew nothing about the contract until after Sanborn got it. If Sanborn had asked him his advice, he should have advised him not to take it, as there were envious, malicious, lying men who would accuse him of wrong doing. He then proceeded to defend the contract, and the operations under it, declaring that it was the only way to collect taxes from the parties who had been proceeded against under it, and declaring that the charges against Sanborn were made by corrupt persons, instigated by delinquent tax payers.

Eldridge asked if it would not be more in accordance with Republican institutions and a Republican administration to have removed incompetent officials, and placed those in their places who would have done their duty.

Foster, a member of the committee on ways and means, said he offered the resolution under which the report about the Sanborn contract had been made; he was also authorized by the committee of ways and means to report a bill to repeal that law. He understook to say that three-fourths of all the collections made under those contracts would have been made by the ordinary internal revenue officers.

Hawley, of Conn., related a case of a firm at Hartford, who, under pressure, paid back taxes under the Sanborn contract, which taxes, both the collector and commissioner of internal revenue, decided, both before and after, the firm was not liable for. The law might be just, but its execution was infamous which defended this transaction. Foster said that under the law, these contractors, instead of assisting the revenue officers in the discovery of back taxes, had been assisted by the officers. He alluded to Butler, as attorney for Sanborn, an accusation which Butler denied.

Hale, of Maine, denounced the whole system of spies, informers and special agents. It looked to him as if the treasury department was for their benefit, instead of their acting for the benefit of the treasury department.

Davis regretted the whole discussion as premature, and expressed surprise at Butler rushing into the debate when his name had been in no way connected with the Sanborn contract, except by the press, for which Butler professed to have no regard. He denounced the policy of farming out the revenue as corrupting in its effects.

Roberts, of N. Y., and Phelps expressed a similar opinion.

Garfield defended himself against the imputation of Beck, and gave his story of the bill, showing that the committee of the House had rejected it, that he, himself, took the bill to Boutwell to ask his opinion of it, and that the latter opposed it; that in a committee of conference the Senate conferees insisted upon its retention, it having originated in the Senate as a rider to the legislative appropriation bill, and that the House conferees opposed it to the last. He knew of no act or portion of act that had been more persistently insisted on by one body and opposed by the other than that, it was therefore a gross injustice to say that he had engineered the measure or that any member of the appropriation committee had engineered it. After further discussion between Garfield and Beck on the question of the appropriations and estimates, the committee rose and the House adjourned.

EASTERN.

Funeral Arrangements.

BUFFALO, 10.—The several committees met this evening and arranged for the funeral of ex-President Fillmore, on Thursday afternoon, from St. Paul's cathedral, when the body will lie in state during the forenoon, with a guard of honor of U. S. troops from Fort Porter.

Praying Ladies in Brooklyn—Chosen Pastor.

NEW YORK, 10.—A number of ladies in Brooklyn quietly inaugurated the saloon visitation to-day, going to a saloon in Bridge street, and praying with the astonished proprietor; they promised to revisit him.

Bishop Cummings was, to-night chosen pastor of the First Reformed Episcopal church.

Great Excitement—Religious Convention — Temperance Mass Meetings.

DAYTON, O., 10.—There was intense excitement in the city to-day. Three detachments of ladies, followed by a turbulent rabble, stormed thirteen saloons; the conduct of the saloon keepers and their adherents inflamed the public mind against them.

A convention to secure the recognition of the Christian religion in the U. S. Constitution was in session all day; resolutions were adopted condemning the decision of the Supreme Court of Ohio on the subject.

COLUMBUS, O., 10.—The temperance mass meeting at the City Hall to-night was an immense affair, and more than the usual interest was manifest.

CINCINNATI, 10. — Temperance mass meetings were held to-night in the Wesley chapel and in the Fifth Wesleyan church.

Jayne Before the Ways and Means Committee.

WASHINGTON, D. C., 10.—Jayne resumed his statement before the committee of ways and means this evening. Referring to the statement that he had made too much money, he declared that he could make much more by a single transaction, namely, taking a check for a large sum to leave a city where he was unpopular with those whose frauds he undertook to detect. In reply to a question, Jayne said he employed Gen. Butler as counsel, in the Phelps-Dodge case, on a question of law, and paid him fifteen hundred dollars; he also employed him in three or four other cases. He declared that in a large majority of cases in his charge the custom house officers were in collusion with the merchants, and while some of these officers had been removed, others were still in office.

Temperance Movement in Chicago.

CHICAGO, 10.—Six temperance women appeared on West Randolph Street, to-day, and visited three or four beer saloons, where they prayed and exhorted, attracting a curious but, in the main, orderly crowd; at one place the proprietor forbid them to enter, and they held service on the sidewalk.

Will Sell no More Liquor.

ITHACA, N. Y., 10.—The temperance women, to-day, secured a pledge from all the druggists in this city to stop selling liquor.

WESTERN.

Three of the six kings tributary to King Koffee have given in their submission to British supremacy. The Ashantee throne is considered at an end, and the kingdom hopelessly disrupted.

Peace With Ashantees—On What Conditions.

Stanley, the Herald correspondent, telegraphs from Lisbon that the negotiations between Sir Garnet Wolesley and the King of the Ashantees are completed. The King agrees to pay 50,000 ounces of gold, and renounces all claim to the Adansi and other territory; he consents to withdraw from Appaloma and the coast provinces, to keep the road free of brush from Coomassie to the river Prah, to protect commerce, prohibit human sacrifices, and keep the peace for ever. If circumstances permit, a garrison will be kept at Prahsu.
