turned that he had to be taken to the hospital himself.

HEARTRENDING SCENES.

All of these rescues and many others occurred with a period of a few minutes. Meanwhile terrifying scenes were being enacted by the hundred men and women on almost every floor of the great building. How many persons are buried in the ruins is not known, but at least three or four persons were seen to jump when bodies have not been recovered.

A young man, apparently an employe, jumped from the roof on the Forty-ninth street side of the hotel. Another unknown man jumped on the Fifth avenue side, and two more were seen to jump from the roof shortly after that two women jumped from the roof of the court below. It is known that two of these at least are dead. Eye-witnesses say that they saw a woman throw a child from a window and fall a moment later herself, just before the collapse of one of the walls, as yet no trace of these bodies have been found.

J. LeMott Morgan of Birmingham, Ala., who had been watching the parade, with a number of friends from the balcony, ran to the fourth floor and rescued Mrs. Algernon Sydney and her daughter, Mabel. He took them to the balcony, and thence they were taken to the street by firemen.

Abner McKinley, a brother of President McKinley, had four rooms on the second floor of the hotel. Mrs. McKinley and her daughter, Mabel McKinley, occupied the rooms with Abner McKinley. Miss Mabel McKinley had ordered a coach for a drive at 5 o'clock and was dressing for it when the alarm of fire was given. Her mother and her daughter, Mabel, ran to their rooms in the hotel
