Reyes Gonzalez is shearing 10,000 sheep below Chama. Mr. Gonzalez is one of the heaviest sheep men in Rio Arriba. His sheep are said to consist of 40,000.

Bridges entered the large hardware store of E. J. Post & Co., at Albuquerque, New Mexico, and purloined about fifty revolvers, high grade, valued in all at about $1,000.

James Commander of Spring City, tried to stop two dog wheels by inserting his thigh between them on Saturday afternoon. As a result he is wearing his hand in a sling.

The North Star mine, near Silver City, is keeping up its record as a rich and productive mine. The owners have built a shaft and ore houses and a good road to the mine. A large amount of ore is in the dump awaiting shipment.

Ed. Marlow, of Datil, has had his head badly bolt by a drunken man with whom he had some difficulty over the settlement of damages to a burro. The man had hired a team from the stable and abused it shamefully, and Mr. Marlow was trying to collect damages.

Wolves are becoming quite numerous and a nuisance to the settlers in Hartsdale, Sanford county. They satisfy their greed upon the Thanksgiving turkeys, chickens and anything heard of among were killed by Deputy Sheriff Tuesday morning. The sparrows may find plenty of game this way.—Clayton Chronicle.

The people of Mayfield have uncovered a large reservoir in Pavier Mile creek. The water which goes to waste through this creek in one year would irrigate a large section of country. This reservoir will be large enough to store the water until such time as it is needed. They hope to have it completed in time for next year's crop.—Nephi Courier.

There is excitement in Harpers Hole over the discovery of a big iron ledge. This has lain exposed to view for years and has been known as the iron ledge, but no one supposed it contained any mineral of any amount, and so it was the other day, when so many proved the Tuesday boy to contain a very high percentage of iron that will some time be worked with great profit.—Panguitch (Arizona) Gazette.

Wm. Kelley and Patrick McAdd, who own a controlling interest in the Northern Light mine, at Opalo, are said to be preventing the mine from being worked by the owners, by the use of shotguns. The trouble is a submission of the friend engaged in developing. They assert that they are being swindled out of any profits from the working of the mine. More trouble is anticipated.

A frightful runaway occurred on the Park Lake road, about a mile below Lake Catorie, Tuesday afternoon. Coarse Warden, a rancheman, was returning from Leadville when his team was started by a passing train and broke unmanageable. After running at a furious pace for half a mile, they collided with a post. The wagon was wrecked and Warden thrown out and severely injured. One of the horses had its leg broken and was afterward shot.

Willie Lobe Draper, the 15-year-old son of Al Draper, was cutting posts in the cedar hills west of the town, he struck a hacker blow than was necessary and the axe, going through the place of timber, struck his right foot, nearly severing the small toe and cutting a deep gash across the foot. A very ugly wound was it Robert, the which will keep the young man off his feet for a while and probably always affect his foot somewhat.—Mount Pleasant Pyramid.

Great excitement has been created at Chadron, Nebraska, by the discovery of a petrified man about two miles north of that city, near Natural Wall, one of the great wonders of that region. The body was found by Ed. Boatler, a well known collector, while engaged in securing fossils. It is that of a man six feet tall, well developed and in a perfect state of preservation. It was found covered in Bottle clay, and weighs over 500 pounds. The teeth are plainly visible, and the skull, head and lips of tissue of a negro. The finder was offered $1000 in cash for the specimen, but refused.

Matt Montgomery and Reuben Hiney while sinking a shot on a claim at Casper, Wyoming, struck a stony vein three-inch asbestos fibre in a formation three feet wide and made up of innumerable layers of asbestos. It is said to be the best colored asbestos yet found, and is pronounced superior to the best quality of Italian asbestos. Captain Findley, superintendent for the Pilsbury asbestos mines, has commenced with six rock miners on the mountain, and is going right ahead. Casper asbestos will be in the market in carload lots by December 1st.

As Rollin Wallis, the fourteen-year-old son of J. J. Wallis, was trying to take a rope from the horns of a cow, the animal gave her head a sudden nock and she movement. One of her horns caught the little fellow in the thigh tearing a gash up to his abdomen and horribly lacerating him otherwise. Rollin's father being near and seeing the mishap, immediately ran to his son's assistance, and discovering the nature and seriousness of his wounds dispatched another son for a physician while he himself helped the injured boy into the house. Dr. Wooting answered promptly and found it necessary to put in six stitches. This being done the boy was made as easy as possible, and is doing very nicely, although not yet out of danger.—Mount Pleasant Pyramid.

A. J. Grice, in charge of Superintendent Alex. Tripple's residence near the Buffalo smelter, during the latter's recent absence, was bitten on the left eye by a small skunk. He was sleeping on the porch, and was awakened by the skunk pouncing upon his face. Grice knocked it away, knocking it off the porch, and was so confused and blinded by the attack that he did not see it. But the odor was sufficient proof that it was a skunk, which had been prowling about nightly for some time previous. Mr. Grice had seen it repeatedly, and is positive that it is of the species whose site is so dreaded, and said to cause hydrophobia. He is, therefore, somewhat scared, and will go at once to New York, to be treated by the well known Pasteur method of inoculation.—Silver Belt. (Arizona.)

Pain springs, according to a correspondent of the Lost Pioneer, is booming. A new strike has been made on the Early Harvest mining claim, owned principally by Lynn parties, but adjoining Wright's mine and bond by C. Hanson and C. B. Weeks. They have a well defined vein which proves to be a fissure running parallel with the Utah and Emma vein. The depth is about thirty feet and from the surface the vein has continued open to an average width of about six inches of fine carbonate and galena ore full of chloride and black sulphide. This mine looks well and will in the near future become one of the greatest producers of the camp. Mr. Hanson is well pleased with the property and expects to have some men for the purpose of making a raise and is satisfied that he will get there soon.

Mrs. Gertrude Smith has just died at the county hospital, Denver, from a shot wound inflicted by her husband, John Smith, on the evening of August 23. Mrs. Smith had been separated from her husband, who was a jealous drunkard, for some time, and at the time of the shooting was engaged as a domestic in the family of Thomas W. Johnson, on Prospect avenue, just across the Jefferson county line. About 8:30 o'clock in the evening of August 23 she was working in the kitchen when her husband suddenly entered. She ran from him and entered the pantry, he followed, gave her one open and shot her in the middle of the back. He then fired three shots into his own body and died almost immediately. Mrs. Smith was removed at once to the county hospital, where she has died after intense suffering. Mrs. Smith was only nineteen years old, and leaves a baby girl.—Denver News.

Says the Brigham City Bugler—We have received a package containing an interesting collection of specimens of the ocean coast, sent by M. L. Nichols, a missionary of this city, now living in Manoel, L. I. There were seven snails, one showing as many different colors of the shell from the time of blow ming down to when the snail is ready to be picked. In the first stages the body is about the size and in shape the seed pod of a poppy; then it begins to swell and fill out, and a glimpse of the pure white colors within is had through the spreading external green covering, and finally a fine little handful of fancy colored shells out, being about the size of a snowball, accidently falling to ground and exposed to view. It is attracting Three specimens form an exceedingly interesting and instructive subject to study to those who have access to microscopes enough to view a dwellers cotton farm.

After six months of negotiations with representatives of 200 heads of families in Holland, T. C. Henry and his brother have closed for the most important land deals that has been known in Colorado for years. Papers have been signed for the purchase of 11,000 acres of farming land in the Rio valley, and an option on 50,000 more, in addition to in possession of C. S. Vanaver Hough and H. F. Manders, who are in Colorado as the agents of the farmers. The new colony will locate in the San Luis valley, in the line of the Rio Grande road, between Monte Vista and Alamosa. The land is under ditch, and is said to be unsurpassed for agricultural purposes. The first body of emigrants will leave Rotterdam by steamer tomorrow, and will come directly to this place. A telegram received at the Rio Grande headquarters yesterday states that there will be 225 persons in the party. On January 1, a second party of 400 will sail for the promised land. The entire number represented in the deal will make the trip before the close of 1893. It is estimated that the colony will number fully 10,000 persons.—Denver News.

A Mexican woman, the wife of a section hand at Ogilby, was bitten a few nights ago by a species of small rattlesnake locally known as the "coalwater," and would have died but for prompt assistance. She was engaged in putting her three young children to bed when the reptile struck her on the ankle. The three cars of quarantined railroad passengers were at Ogilby that night and on learning of the Mexican's misfortune some of them determined to save her life if possible. The nearest physician was 12 miles distant at Yuma. M. J. O. Dunlop, editor of the Phenix Gazette, took the matter in hand, and at all to induce the woman's husband to suck the poison from the wound. He was afraid to do so, and then Mr. Dunlop bound a silk handkerchief around the woman's leg below the knee and tested it tightly with a stick. One of the passengers had a bottle of whisky and the woman was kept under the influence of the liquor. Dr. Carter the quarantine officer arrived the next morning and by that time the woman's leg was perfectly black below the bandage. The doctor at once lanced the black portion in about thirty places, the poisoned blood ran out and the lacerations were washed with nitric acid. The patient was brought to Yuma and soon after the poison began to show itself above the knee. The same treatment was again resorted to with good results. The woman will recover and retain her limb, whether it was at first thought it would have to be amputated.—Florida (Arizona) Times.
