THANKSGIVING DAY.

Stories for young folks, by students of English class C, B. Y. academy.

A LESSON IN CHOOSING.

The last Thursday in November is a day set apart to acknowledge the goodness of God—a day when men should give freely of their store to the poor even as the great Father bestows blessings upon his children. It is a day when the rich should give to the destitute so that all may feast and rejoice with.

Few of us feel that we are in duty bound to lend a helping hand to those stricken with poverty. Hence, we may imagine the happy surprise the poor people of Pensacola met one Thanksgiving morning.

The baker of Pensacola believed that there were two classes of poor in his village. One whose poverty was due to accident, sickness, inability to secure work; the other, due to laziness, intemperance and ignorance. Yet, on this day, he determined to treat both classes alike.

On Nov. 18th, the advertisement of the village baker shop was somewhat changed. It was as follows:

"COME, ONE AND ALL, POOR CHILDREN OF PENSACOLA TO MY SHOP NOVEMBER 29TH, 1888, AT 12 O'CLOCK AND EACH ONE SHALL RECEIVE A LOAF OF BREAD."

The news reached every girl and every boy in the town. Long before the time appointed hungry little urchins were seen making their way toward the baker shop. Some had left undone the little work they had to do. Others had failed to wash their feet, hands and face. Indeed, they were very untidy.

Five minutes before 12 o'clock, Nellie, a little girl very neatly dressed, made her appearance at the shop door. She had been working all morning, and wished to get a loaf of bread for her mamma and little sister.

"Children, I bid you welcome; I have placed on the table a loaf of bread for each one of you. Come, help yourselves," said the baker.

The children rushed inside, each one trying to get the largest loaf, save Nellie, who stood back until the scramble was over. Then she stepped forward, picking up the smallest loaf, and thanking the baker at the same time, left the shop.

An hour later she returned, somewhat excited, as she said: "Mr. Baker, when mamma was cutting the bread I ... here, she found this. Thinking that you were not aware it was there, I came to tell you."

The good baker answered smilingly, "Why, my little girl, I made that loaf very small and placed the silver dollar inside of it to teach the children a lesson. Have you learned one?" He paused a moment, looking into the face of the surprised and delighted child, and added: "Well, then, take the dollar home to your mamma, and tell her what you have learned."

AMY'S THANKSGIVING.

Amy was a little fishermaiden. Every morning before the sun arose you might see her in a small boat on the river busily engaged in drawing from the water the food that supported herself and her aged parents. Later in the day she would be trudging along, with a basket of fish under her arm, toward the town, two miles distant. There she disposed of her load and with the means thus obtained managed to provide a scanty living.

This kind of existence was very monotonous and often Amy was despondent. But just the day before Thanksgiving, had you seen her, you would have thought a queen might envy her, for her eyes danced with delight and her whole face beamed with joy.

With that determination which always accompanies definiteness of purpose, she managed her little boat and dragged from the water the writhing, swelling fish. As she felt the weight increase her heart beat with pleasure, and when she set out for town the load seemed much lighter, although it was heavier.

Slowly she sauntered back to her home, but much of the buoyancy was gone from her spirit. She said nothing to her parents of what had taken place and everything went on as usual.

Next day was Thanksgiving. Amy did not go to work. At home she made things as pleasant as possible for her father and mother and when the hands of the clock pointed to 12 she prepared their simple meal. They gathered round the board and her father had just returned thanks to their Heavenly Father when a loud rap was heard at the door. Amy opened it and a gentleman asked, "Is this where the little fishermaiden lives?"

Upon being told that it was, he entered and in answer to their look of inquiry said: "I was a witness of your noble act yesterday and as this is a day of thanksgiving, I wish to show you that I still love him by aiding the worthy poor," and placing a basket which he held in his hand upon the table, he hurriedly left the room.

Last night time she reached the store and anxiously watched the clerk as he weighed her basket. Then he announced, "Ten pounds extra today," and handed her the money for all, the look of anxiety disappeared and one of happiness took its place. Lightly she stepped into another department and asked, "Please sir, may I see a turkey?"

Just then she felt some one pull at her dress. Turning quickly she saw a little girl, her face pinched with cold and hunger, and her clothing only rags. Tremblingly the little girl begged, "Please ma'am some bread."

Amy looked at the bright coin in her hand and then at the suffering child. Tears came to her eyes, but closing her lips firmly, she stepped and placed the shining bit in the little waif's hand and then hurriedly left the room, drawing against a gentleman who had watched all her actions.

The three who sat at the table looked at each other in astonishment till Amy regained enough of control to look into the basket. Words cannot describe her trembling in delight. There were cake and pie and turkey—in short everything for a Thanksgiving dinner.

Quickly she arranged the eatables and as she did so related the incident of the day before. Soon all was prepared and again Amy and her parents took their places at the table. As they gazed at the feast spread before them her father remarked: "Cast thy bread upon the waters and after many days it shall return to you," and then solemnly added, "Aye, even fourfold."

"Yes," responded Amy, "only this time in a very few days."

MORE SCHOOL NOMINATIONS.

Hansen Renamed From the Third Precinct and Prof. Toronto From the Fourth.

Two more school election nominations were made last night, the Democrats of the Third and Fourth precincts assembling in convention in the Seventeenth ward and Burlington school houses respectively for that purpose. In each of the precincts the retiring member was re-nominated.

In the Third John N. Pike was chosen chairman and E. A. Folland secretary. On motion of R. T. Lloyd, voting was by ballot and a majority of all the votes cast made necessary for a choice. Five judges of election were appointed in the persons of O. W. Moyle, John H. Beck, John L. Nebeker, James Bishop and F. S. Fernstrom. Nominations being in order, John B. Reid nominated H. A. Smith; seconded by E. E. Rich.

R. T. Lloyd nominated John E. Hansen; seconded by John L. Nebeker, Ed A. Folland, Joseph Haslam, C. R. Fell, F. S. Fernstrom, H. B. Folsom and Milando Pratt.

Joseph Bull Jr. presented the name of Henry Barnes, which was duly seconded by Alex. Edwards and others.

On the first ballot 157 votes were cast, necessary to a choice 79. Garrick received one, Smith 29, Barnes 63, and Hansen 76. Mr. Smith withdrew and on the second ballot Barnes received 79 and Hansen 82 votes. The latter was declared the nominee and the meeting adjourned.

IN THE FOURTH PRECINCT.

In the Fourth precinct Hon. John T. Caine was chosen chairman, and J. M. Cohen was made secretary. Short speeches were made by Mr. Caine and Judge Powers. The latter presented the name of Professor Toronto for renomination; seconded by Professor William Stewart, George D. Pyper, George E. Blair and others.

S. W. Stewart named George Romney, Jr., seconded by J. M. Cohen.

Joseph F. Simmons nominated Oliver Hodgson.

Nominations here closed and W. H. Dale, H. G. Whitney, S. W. Stewart and J. F. Simmons were appointed tellers.

Votes cast, 136; necessary to a choice, 69; Toronto, 54; Hodgson, 31; Romney, 51.

Romney withdrew his name and asked his friends to vote for Toronto.

The second ballot resulted as follows: Votes cast, 137; necessary to a choice, 69; Romney, 8; Hodgson, 32; Toronto, 72.

Toronto was declared the nominee of the convention and made a brief speech stating his position on the High school proposition which he would favor in case his constituents so desired. As to home teachers they were the peers of the imported article in all respects and for their interests he proposed to work.

Thanksgiving Rabbit Hunt.

Fully 100 men it is said will leave this city at 7 o'clock tomorrow morning over the Union Pacific for Cedar valley for the purpose of killing rabbits for the worthy poor. It is expected that they will return in the evening with a large number.

Amusement Notes.

Masks and Faces, as presented at the Theater by the Coghlan-Stockwell company, merited a larger audience than witnessed the performance last evening, although it was somewhat larger than the opening night. Masks and Faces is a refined comedy of the old English school, being a decided contrast to the hilarious farce comedy, The Magistrate with which the company opened the first night of the engagement. The play centers around an incident in the life of Peg Woffington, the reigning popular actress of the eighteenth century and is a sarcastic skit on green-room habitues, critics, and human nature in general which has not materially altered since the reign of the Georges. The introduction of a minuet together with the prevailing costumes of the last decade combined to make a pleasing ensemble. Rose Coghlan gave one of the most finished interpretations of the role of the popular Irish actress that has been presented in Salt Lake. L. R. Stockwell's rendition of the penurious author of rejected nineteen tragedies, together with the perpetrator of anything from a sign board to a portrait was a pathetic piece of refined comedy. Edmund Hayes's shapely physique and baritone voice assisted materially in presenting Sir Chas. Pomander successfully. The rest of the company were fair. Mr. Brigham Royce, who was cast for Soaper, the dyspeptic critic, has made a big jump from O'Malley's leading man in the Lyceum theater twelve months ago to the post of stage manager for the Coghlan-Stockwell company, and incidentally being assigned a good part. The company left for the East last night, where Rose Coghlan's popularity ensures her good houses.

The opening performance of Schilling's minstrels takes place at the Theater this evening and the engagement closes tomorrow night. In the organization of his company for the present season Mr. Schilling says he has made a radical departure from the average stereotyped minstrel entertainment. The first part represents a royal court scene, the entire company being attired in silk, satin and plush, which, with the scenery, plush draperies and artistic distribution of stage adornments, makes a brilliant picture. Great care and judgment have also been used in the selection of the company, and among its members are the pick of the profession.

A lively time may be anticipated at the Theater tomorrow night, when all the newsboys will honor the minstrels with their presence.

AT THE GRAND.

That the Grand is a favorite with the public as a house of amusement was shown by the good attendance last evening. The piece, A Scrap of Paper, was more satisfactorily given than on the evening previous. The orchestra did some good work.

OBITUARY NOTES.

ELEANOR P. S. WRIGHT.

OGDEN, Utah, Nov. 26, 1895.—Sister Eleanor Pauline Stevens Wright, was the daughter of William H. Stevens and Eliza Jane Neimeyer Stevens, who was born in Ogden City, Utah, August 3, 1872; was educated in her native city; was baptized into the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints shortly after attaining the eighth year of her age. She was always gentle and meek from her childhood, and grew up in love and obedience to her parents and in reverence towards the Almighty. When about seventeen years of age she entered as one of the female clerks, the mercantile establishment of John Scowcroft & Sons, in which capacity her services gave full satisfaction to her employers. She continued in that establishment for something over a year and then retired.

She subsequently was employed in the mercantile house of W. H. Wright & Sons company. There she remained between three and four years, during which period her services gave eminent satisfaction to the proprietors of the house, and made hundreds of warm friends by her urbanity, courtesy and ladylike deportment.

She was a member of the Sunday school and the Young Ladies' Mutual Improvement association of the Second ward, Ogden, to which institutions she was devotedly attached, and by the officers and members of which she was much beloved.

On October 17, 1894, she was married in the Salt Lake Temple to Elder Reuben Wright, son of the late Hon. Jonathan Wright, of Brigham City. With her husband she lived a truly happy life, each being devotedly attached to the other.

They entered upon the voyage of life with the most pleasing and joyous prospects, and with sanguine hopes of a long and successful union. But this cup of happiness was rudely dashed from their lips at a time when their joy seemed almost full.

On the 4th of November, 1895, Sister Wright gave birth to a fine, healthy daughter. A few days after, things did not go so well with the mother as was desired and hoped. Her mother watched over her with the tenderest, most anxious solicitude. All that medical skill could do was done for her, but in vain. She continued to grow worse until 10:30 o'clock on the night of the 19th instant, when, surrounded by her husband, mother and numerous other kindred and friends, she passed peacefully and quietly away to where she was "wanted on the other side."

Her demise cast a deep gloom of sorrow over this community, where she had grown up, became widely known, and beloved by all who knew her. The obsequies were held in the Second ward meeting house. The building was filled to its utmost capacity, besides which several hundred people stood on the outside during the services, being unable to gain admission to the house. The active participants in the exercises were Elders Robert McQuarrie, Joseph Hall, B. F. Nesley and C. F. Middleton. The Second ward choir furnished the music. The services were deeply impressive and the remarks on the occasion breathed sympathy and consolation. The floral offerings were numerous and of the choicest kind. The cortege was the largest seen in this place for many years. The remains were deposited in the Ogden cemetery. The paternal grandmother has assumed charge of the infant.

JOSEPH HALL.

ANNA ELIZA REYNOLDS SEELY.

CASTLE DALE, Nov. 22, 1895.—Anna Eliza Reynolds Seely, wife of Justus Wellington Seely, of this place, met her death last Tuesday, November 19, from injuries received from being thrown from a buck board while on her way to Orangeville along with Elder William Cash, of this place, who also received some very bad bruises, a broken foot and a dislocated thumb.

Sister Seely was born in Pleasant Grove, Utah county, in 1853, and afterwards moved with her parents to Mount Pleasant, Sanpete county. During her childhood and youth she was very mild and gentle in her ways, and kind to everybody. She was married to her husband, Brother Seely, on the 26th of February, 1872, in the Endowment House, Salt Lake City. She afterwards resided in Mount Pleasant and Thistle valley, where she made many friends among the Indians of that place.

On October 16, 1879, she, with her husband, three children and Sister Mary Wilcox of Mt. Pleasant started for Castle valley, her future home. There being very little of no wagon road through the mountains they were nine days in reaching this place. One cause for being so long on the way was that they were detained one-half day by the birth of a little daughter; but the next day continued their journey, reaching their home, a rude log cabin without floor or windows except blankets for windows and the earth for floor, on the 27th of the same month.

Through the blessings of the Lord she soon recovered. Since that time she has ever been a devoted wife and mother, administering to the comforts of life in her family and to many friends.

She was the first Stake secretary in the Relief Society in the Emery Stake. In 1882 she was chosen by Sister Millicent Jameson as first counselor in the Y. L. M. I. A. of Castle Dale, which position she filled with honor until 1885, when she was called by the Bishop to preside over the Primary association, in which calling she was very diligent and faithful and won the love and respect of the little folks.

Owing to her many domestic duties in caring for her family, she was honorably released from that position, but during the few months past has been filling an office in the Woman Suffrage association, manifesting great interest in the same.

Sister Seely has been an example on the Word of Wisdom and hygienic living, for some years past. She leaves a good record as a faithful attendant at Sunday school and meetings and will ever be remembered by those who knew her, for a meek, gentle and forgiving spirit.

She leaves a husband and ten children, only one of which is married, and has gone to meet her little boy who passed away some years since. The people of Castle Dale sympathize with the bereaved family and friends.

There were present at her funeral Friday last three of her brothers and sisters from Mt. Pleasant and her sister, Dr. Ellis Shipp, of Salt Lake City; also her brother and his wife from Springville, besides many of Brother Seely's relatives.

The funeral was one of the largest ever held in this place. Elder C. G. Larsen, president of Emery Stake, and Elder Alexander Jameson made very appropriate remarks, after which her body was taken to its last resting place, where Brother Alex. Jameson offered up the dedicatory prayer.—[Com.

IS DRIVING OUT DISEASE.

Dr. J. R. Baird Well Known in American Missions.

Hundreds of Bottles of Paine's Celery Compound Prescribed by Him.

Has Found it a Blessing to the Afflicted Beyond any Other Remedy.

Dr. J. R. Baird is not only a missionary, but, what is not so well known, he is a physician of large experience.

His published account of the work he has done in the State of Michigan has been read with interest not only by those particularly concerned in missions, but by the public generally.

J. R. BAIRD, PHYSICIAN, MISSIONARY.

Dr. Baird is known as a practical worker. His health was broken by the severe winter climate in Michigan some time ago, and he seemed likely to be obliged to give up his work. But he resorted to the use of that easily obtained remedy, Paine's celery compound, and was himself again, energetic and active as ever, within a few weeks.

The reasonable, undisguised way in which Paine's celery compound fortifies the body against nervous exhaustion and rebuilds its shattered parts has been freely explained by physicians, the best of whom today always look to this great remedy where debility is to be overcome. It does its work thoroughly and speedily. Let every nervous sufferer, and every man and woman who feels run down and tired beyond the power of a night's sleep to restore, try Paine's Celery compound. It will make the man or woman strong and active and a stout believer in this great remedy.

Dr. Baird who is now at his home in Indiana, Penn., describes his own experience, as follows:

"It was about six years ago when I first tried Paine's celery compound for nervous diseases and rheumatism. In the severe winter climate in the State of Michigan I was at our mission station there, and became a great sufferer. I used three bottles of Paine's celery compound, and was very greatly benefited thereby. I then began to advise my members who were sick to use it, and in every case where the directions were strictly obeyed the treatment was successful. In a few years past hundreds of bottles have been used directly through my advice. Paine's celery compound is far better than any other remedy, and leaves no bad effects in the system. Its manifold healing qualities make it a boon of life and a blessing to the afflicted beyond any preparation within my reach."

The great falling off in the amount of rheumatism, neuralgia and nervous weakness the physicians have everywhere noted comes from the widespread knowledge that there is no need of suffering any longer from these common diseases. It is now everywhere known how correctly Prof. Edward E. Phelps, M. D., LL. D., of Dartmouth college, understood the needs of suffering men and women when he prepared his formula for Paine's celery compound. By the use of this world-famous remedy countless men and women have saved themselves from nervous prostration.

The cares of large families do not stop when the day is over. There is incessant anxiety, wakefulness and concern for some member of the household. It is no wonder that so many, especially women, break down under the crushing weight. Their very love and pride keeps them always at work. They "live on their nerves," as the saying is, till there comes a time when flesh and blood can stand it no longer. It is a simple thing for them to keep well and strong if Paine's celery compound is straightway used at the earliest signs of failing vigor. The tired, "dragged out" feeling is soon entirely removed. There will be no neuralgia, no persistent headaches, no dyspepsia, no haunting pain over the eyes, no nervous exhaustion when Paine's celery compound is used. It makes people well.
