MISSOURI BOY.

"Love Your Enemies."

To the Editor:

We can but feel sorry to hear of the sad affliction that has overtaken the Rev. Joseph Cook, of Boston, whom your readers will remember best by his connection with the Boston Monday lectures, and his very unfavorable utterances toward the Latter-day Saints. In expressing our sympathy in all sincerity we do but fulfill the precept of Scripture found in Matthew v: 44: "But I say unto you, love your enemies, do good to them that hate you," etc., which is further endorsed in a revelation given to the Prophet Joseph Smith in Kirtland, Ohio, Sept. 11th, 1831, which, among other counsels in the same connection, says: "I, the Lord, will forgive whom I will forgive, but of you it is—the Latter-day Saints—it is required to forgive all men."

Mr. Cook is a man of some ability and learning, having studied at the colleges of Yale, Halle, Berlin and Leipsic, finishing his education by extensive foreign travel and expensive care. A few months ago, says the Interior, page 99, No. 1,520, vol. 27, of January 16th, 1896, he set out on a lecture tour in Australia and the United. He was seized with a severe illness in Japan. Coming home he passed through Chicago a broken down and helpless man, both mentally and physically, and said he relate, there is no hope said out for his recovery.

MRS. HYNDS'S STORY.

Told Behind Closed Doors to Lawyers and Newspapermen.

SHE ASSUMES ALL RESPONSIBILITY

Hynds Released by Justice Wenger on Giving $20,000 Bonds—Dinwoodey's Funeral Held Today.

Harry Hynds, the slayer of Walter Dinwoodey, was set at liberty at 8 o'clock last night by Justice Wenger, on furnishing bonds in the sum of $20,000 to answer before the grand jury for the grave offense for which he was taken into custody. Hynds's sureties are W. S. McCornick, Henry Newell, M. E. Molloy, Henry M. Ryan, James Hagin and Captain James McNally, each qualifying for the full amount of the bond.

MRS. HYNDS'S STORY.

Shortly after 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon, Mrs. Hynds, much overwrought and many tears, reluctantly related the details of the tragedy and threw some light on circumstances not clearly explained before that time. She was so prostrated as to be unable to appear in the court room, and Justice Wenger, counsel on either side, representatives of the press and a few very intimate friends repaired to an adjoining chamber where she lay almost hidden from view beneath the coverings of an improvised cot. She was first questioned by Hynds's counsel, who at times was compelled to wait for minutes at a time for a reply on account of the weakness and distraction of the witness in testifying.

The portions of the fateful story not before narrated related to her husband striking her to the floor by a vicious blow, the springing of Dinwoodey from the bathroom, where he had sought a temporary hiding place; the statement that she was afraid to remain with her husband after that, or fear he might do her violent injury or kill her; his declaration that he "was through with him" and "that you (Dinwoodey) can have her now;" that Dinwoodey intervened to her behalf, saying, "It's not the girl's fault, Harry; don't blame her, I'm responsible for the trouble;" that the husband was still threatening and that she appealed to "Walter;" that the latter was unwilling to see her cast adrift in the world and said, "Come with me Maud, I'll take care of you;" that this made her husband "crazy, very excited," and that he thereupon drew his revolver and commenced to shoot.

"Was Dinwoodey to blame, so far as you know?" was asked by the witness. A slightly affirmative nod of head followed the question. Then came the reply, calmly and firmly spoken, "No, he was not to blame. He was not to blame. The fault was all mine—all mine. I went to the store on Saturday afternoon and invited him up to the house."

When this confession was made Hynds bowed his head, buried his face in his handkerchief and wept.

Another matter which was considered very important was the testimony of Mrs. Hynds with reference to her husband getting his revolver. He did not, she said, have it with him on his trip to Butte; she remembered having seen it in his room while he was in Butte. Later she modified this statement somewhat in which she said she might possibly be mistaken on this point but she did not think so. Then she remembered "that Harry had said after the shooting that he did not have it with him." She supposed he got it out of his room when he went after the colored servant.

The court then adjourned to the main chamber and brief statements of rather informal testimony were made by Judge Powers for the defendant and by Attorney John M. Zane for the family and friends of the dead man. When they had finished Justice Wenger fixed the bonds of the defendant at $20,000 and an adjournment was taken until 8 p. m., when bail was furnished and Hynds released as indicated.

Mrs. Hynds was removed to the hospital last night. She is still in a critical state and is constantly kept under the influence of strong medicines. The funeral of young Dinwoodey occurred from the family residence this afternoon.

HYNDS'S WRONG RECORD.

Sketched from the Prize Ring When Defended by John P. Clow, the Denver Pugilist.

In addition to giving place to a lengthy Salt Lake special of the Hynds-Dinwoodey tragedy the Denver Republican of yesterday published the following, also a special from Cheyenne, where Hynds now lives:

Harry Hynds came to Cheyenne from Morris, Ill., in 1882, and worked as a blacksmith for Bernard Shea, who at that time ran a big wagon shop in this city. Hynds was a powerful young fellow of 22, and in a short time made a record as a fighter among Cheyenne sporting men. In 1882 he quit the blacksmith trade and started a gambling house, in which he soon made money from the start. His place was headquarters for sporting men from all over the Western country and a number of glove and finish fights were arranged there.

In 1883 Hynds fought and defeated Jack Dorin at Rawlins and on the strength of this victory a match was made for him with John P. Clow, the noted Denver pugilist. Clow knocked him out in three rounds at Rawlins, and Hynds quit the prize ring and devoted himself exclusively to his gambling and saloon business. It is estimated that he made upwards of $100,000 in the five years preceding 1888. Hynds was liberal and generous and invested part of his profits in a handsome livery building in this city, which he fitted up in a style superior to any livery establishment in the West. Hynds branched out in 1887 by establishing a gambling house in Salt Lake City and at various times during the past five years has maintained gambling houses at Lander, Rawlins, Rock Springs, Salt Lake City and Cheyenne. At the present time he is running, and has established, one at Rock Springs and one here.

It has been common information that Hynds has been losing money for the past two years, that his losses in Salt Lake City, where he had gamblers with big bills to contend with, have been very heavy, and that his big bets on various prize fights have been usually on the wrong side.

Hynds was married in 1886 in this city to Miss Maud Peel, one of the handsomest women in the city. Whatever her career had been previous to her marriage, Mrs. Hynds' life in this city up to the time of her departure for Salt Lake, in 1893, was exemplary. Hynds was very much attached to his wife and was extremely liberal to her in money matters. While in this city they lived in a handsome residence in one of the best quarters of the city.

Hynds' gambling business here has been conducted in a very conservative and orderly manner and Hynds himself has always had the reputation of being personally a remarkably honest and enterprising citizen. Several efforts have been made to suppress his business here by reformers, but he has always succeeded in defeating them, demonstrating the minority of the prestige his straightforward business dealings gave him.

SOUTHERN HOSPITALITY.

A Tribute to the Good People of Aiken County, S. C.

WAGENER, Aiken Co., S. C.,
February 24, 1896.

To the Editor:

We write, not wishing to overburden your paper with encouraging reports from the south, but offer a few words in favor of the people of Aiken county, South Carolina.

July 19th, 1895, Elder A. W. Wright and myself entered the county for the first time, and for a few days we hardly went to a house but that we were invited to call again. We labored together with good success till we left to go to conference, which was held in Williamsburg county. At conference Elder D. A. Wilcox was appointed to labor with me.

We made our way back into the county and found our friends anxious to see us. We continued to labor together till January 1st, 1896, at which time Elder D. C. Woodward was sent to work with me. We find that we are making friends so fast that it is almost impossible to visit them as often as we would like, hence doing the canvassing that we ought to do. We find the people as a rule are very friendly toward us, but they do not seem to understand the necessity of finding out and complying with the plan of salvation. At the same time they realize that there is something wrong with the so-called churches of today. While most of them are careless regarding these things, there are a few that are truly investigating the principles of the Gospel, and some very likely will be baptized before long. We are satisfied that there are at least thirty families here that are always glad to see us and that make us welcome.

There is one old gentleman by the name of Daniel Guyer who has been to bear us plenty five times and twice he had to walk three miles through the sand. He is in his ninety-first year. We feel as though we are doing a great deal of good.

Thanking you for the NEWS, we are, as ever, your brethren in the cause of truth.

D. C. WOODWARD.

His father gave him several later doses of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy which broke up the cough and cured him. Mr. McFarland says whenever his children have croup he invariably gives them Chamberlain's Cough Remedy and it always cures them. He considers it the best cough remedy in the market.
