ON TO DEEP CREEK.

Before these lines meet the eye of the readers of the NEWS, the work of actual construction on the Salt Lake and Pacific railroad will have commenced; ground was to have been broken at 3 p. m. today at Sandy for the extension of the line westward from that point. As stated by this paper Saturday evening, a contract has been let for the first part of the grading, while the material for the track construction will be speedily on the ground. It looks for sure as though the Deep Creek railway is secured; and the hope is universal that the beginning so auspiciously made will not be darkened by any untoward delays or obstacles.

In the full confidence that the work will now go on swiftly to completion, we regard this as a great day for the State of Utah. The gentlemen who are promoting the enterprise have given the best evidence of their faith by their works, and they may be secured of the best wishes of all who want to see our resources developed and our internal greatness made plain. The project under discussion is a mighty one and it means more than many people are able to realize. Its very magnitude adds to its difficulties, but we believe the worst is over when the point of beginning has been passed. That much being now accomplished, there can be nothing premature in congratulating the company on their courage and enterprise, the hardy men who have done so much under severe circumstances in Deep Creek on their brightened prospects, and the whole people of the State on this great stride toward prosperity. Nevada may also be permitted to share in the general joy, and Southern California also, for the more that is done toward the State line in the west, the more positive the assurance that there will be no disappointment in the southwestern road to the Pacific's golden strand.

CONVENTION OF FOUNDRYMEN.

The Foundrymen's association of Philadelphia, under whose auspices the first National Convention of Foundrymen ever held in the United States is to be conducted in the Quaker City on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, May 12, 13 and 14, announces preparations completed for the event. The convention makes no distinction as to delegates who may or may not be union members; its object is stated to be to bring about a more friendly feeling among the foundrymen of the country, to allow of the presentation and discussion of papers on interesting subjects, and to encourage the formation of foundrymen's associations all over the Union for discussion of and instruction in the lines of mechanics, believing that good results will follow.

The first meeting will be held on the afternoon of May 12, and will open with an address of welcome by Francis Jenkinson, president of the Philadelphia association; next will be an address by Mayor Ceae, F. Warwick, who will extend the freedom of the city to the delegates; then the subject of the convention will be the subject of a speech by John Birkinbine. The subjects on which papers will be presented to the convention are: Physical tests and chemical strength of cast iron; apprenticeship, their value, and how to make new workers; foundry stores, with the different methods of storing them; cold open hearth vs. basic open hearth and the Wallace-Lagendorf Bessemer process for making steel castings; the air compressor for use in the foundry; cupolas and cupola practice up to date; utility and economy of green, dry and loam sand molding; gear molding and gear molding machines; the sand blast for cleaning castings; and molding machines and their appliances. The evening of the second day there will be a reception and banquet at the Academy of Fine Arts; and the third day will be devoted to visiting the great foundries of Philadelphia, Camden, Wilmington, Easton and Pottstown, and in seeing the sights of Philadelphia, such as the Mint, Girard college, Fairmount park, etc. The families invited to include those of the Baldwin locomotive works and Cramp & Sons' shipbuilding works. Among the foundrymen who are to be the committee but who are now engaged in journalism in the interest of the craft are C. Kirkbride, J. Harry Pepper and Tom Hobson, of The Iron Age; A. I. Fisher, Thomas A. Daly and R. N. Carroll, of The Iron Trade Review, and John A. Penton, of The Foundry.

Invitations have been sent to the foundrymen in Utah, which has a large contingent engaged in the trades of foundrymen, and which, owing to the distance, it is not probable that there will be much of an attendance from this section, marked interest is felt in the meeting, since through the medium of such conventions by those engaged in the mechanical arts much valuable information is disseminated.

THE CAUSE CELEBRE.

There is one universal feeling among the intelligent and honorable people of Salt Lake county with reference to the trifling case recently tried in Judge Hilton's court and terminated yesterday by a disagreement of the jury—and that is a feeling of thorough regret—a hung jury is always unsatisfactory, but in the present case the regret is coupled in many minds with a sense of keen disappointment and of supreme disgust.

If there is any method by which the matter can be crowded to a retesting, the prosecution must employ it or suffer under public reproach; for nothing of more importance to the welfare of good government and to the dignity and credit of the law has come before the local courts for many a long day. Even if a verdict of acquittal shall be obtained—as it should be the case if the guilt of the accused cannot be established—the sooner the whole ugly business is disposed of the better for the county and its people as well as for those who are under the embarrassment and the stigma of indictment. If, on the other hand, there is ample reason to believe in the guilt of the defendant, no trifling with or technicality in the law can be permitted to defeat the ends of justice. Hair-splitting rules of construction may not be resorted to unless those who employ them are willing to be held up to public execration. Anything that common sense and common justice will warrant in sticking to reach a verdict as shown by the evidence, must be allowed in the determination of the issue. The court's duty is properly to protect the defendant in every case—every man accused is presumed to be innocent until proven guilty; but no conception or pursuit of this duty requires the piling up of obstacles in the way of the public prosecutor, or the manifestation of bias for or against either side in the controversy.

The outraged and plundered people of this community loudly cry for justice, believing that the business of the courts is to see that it is administered. A brave and conscientious obedience to this demand, let the consequences be what, and fall upon whom, they may, is the immediate duty of all concerned in these cases. The NEWS urges that there be neither delay nor timidity in forcing the matter to a conclusion with all reasonable dispatch, that's action is necessary to the continuance of public confidence in the efficiency and completeness of the prosecution, and in the value and effectiveness of the courts for the punishment of crime and the adjustment of grievances.

MILLENNIAL EXOIRITION.

The celebration of the 1000th year of the existence of a people is an event of no common consequence in Hungary, on May 2, the so-called millennial exhibition was opened to mark the completion of the tenth century since the establishment of the Magyar nation in Europe.

The Magyars are believed to have come from the regions of the Ural mountains about a thousand years ago. Their language is thought to indicate their relationship to Lapps, Zirins and Finns, mixed with Semitic blood. Soon after their settlement in the country by the Danube, they made military incursions into various parts of Europe, until they were forced to consider home and give attention to the consolidation of their power within their own territory.

Very early Christianity was accepted and the rulers received the title of "apostolic kings" by one of the popes. In the middle ages the Hungarians took an active and honorable part in the wars against the Mohammedan invaders. In later years they have been before the world on account of their patriotic struggles for national independence, under the leadership of patriots like Kossuth and his associates in the cause of human progress.

The millennial exhibition of Hungary marks a long career in the nation's history and a marvelous progress in civilization. It remains the work of the nation full of patriotism and exercising its own natural right even to be subdued but never finally conquered or driven out by force of circumstances.

A ROVING NORTH POLE.

Speculations concerning the North Pole have now, according to astronomy in foreign exchanges, arrived at the startling conclusion that the eagerly sought spot is not quite a so stationary but moving. It may therefore seem possible that some day, adventurers in search of the spot actually may be surprised by meeting it half way on its journey northward.

The communication in question made that other special observations it has been found that the sun and moon in the American continent is gradually increasing while it is corresponding decreasing on the opposite side of the globe. The only explanation of this phenomenon is that the North Pole is moving from Europe and approaching in America. By systematic measurements, we are informed, it has been found that the Pole on its journey follows the westmost of Greenland, and also that the rate of speed is no less than about half a yard.

The question is whether our globe has a certain bodies the daily and yearly, not hitherto fully understood. It is well known that in the far north, in the eternal ice and snow, remains are frequently found of animals and plants that clearly could never have existed except in a tropical climate. The supposition has always been that these were living at a time when the earth only at the Poles was cool enough to sustain life, and that, as the cooling process went on, those regions gradually from and tropical life was driven southward. It is true, however, that the North Pole, and consequently also the South Pole, is gradually shifting place, the theory of the cooling process will lose one of its supporting arguments, and the presence of remains of tropical organisms in the frozen regions will be explained on the supposition that Greenland and Spitzbergen and the whole Arctic region once was under the equator. If the supposed discovery is founded on fact, it cannot fail to intensify the interest already felt in the frozen terra incognita of the north.

FELIX JULES MELINE, the new French prime minister, is said to be the McKinley of France. He has always been an advocate of high tariff and opposed to free trade. The concessions he would listen to were in favor of Switzerland and the United States. He was under secretary of the interior with Grevy, but resigned at one month's end. Later he was made a member of the tariff commission, and in 1890 he battled with the party in power for protection, making his influence felt in all directions. He totally was he convinced of the strength of his position that he favored a protection that was practically prohibitive. One year thereafter he was returned as a deputy. In 1893 he was minister of agriculture. Holding in 1895 with Ferry's cabinet, he went back to the chamber, and in 1896 he presided over that body. Since then he has been in the chamber at odd times and has never been out of the public eye.
