The reference by the Bishop to the Riel agitators in their attempts to raise a revolt against the authority of the State, and to the political use made of the church in the celebration of masses for the dead rebel, has stung the French Canadians to the very quick, and many of the Bishop's most intimate friends seem to think he has made a mistake, and unless he withdraws, or at least modifles some of his statements he may expect serious defections from among his clergy. It is known that many was reminded of his mistake by the laughter of the crowd, and endeavored ANDERSON.

After testifying in open court, as to B. Y. Hampton's physical condition, which I had written and signed the day previous, I awaited the pronouncng of sentence on defendant. The affidavit I then made was made n good faith, with all honesty of purof yourself or any other person. That affidavit stated that 1 had personally and professionally known Mr. Hampton for the space of fifteen years, and that during that period of time 1 was thoroughly cogni-pant of this physical condition. Not only that, but 1 had made repeated examinations, which exami-nations thoroughly satisfied me as to his general matisc. If your honor please, these examinations were not the re-sult of recklessness—such examinations would not cause the assumed recklessness mentioned in your honor's charge-but from a knowledge of medicine such as I may possess. From such knowledge and the fact before me, from an intimate acquaintance with Mr. Hampton, I wrote and Signed the affidavit as read in court.
