A refugee who witnessed the fighting at Wolf's hill of July 26 and July 27 declares that 4,000 Russian troops de fended that position, all the approaches to which had been protected with ter-races at angles of 45 degrees. In many faces at angles of to acgrees. In many instances the Russian soldiers dropped their riflse and rolled rocks down on the enemy with effect more fatal than their bullets. The Russian mines were cleverly concealed in an open field. their composition was as for the bottom of a layer of high explo-sive, next a layer of rocks, and the whole covered with sod. The explosion whole covered with sod. The explosion of this mine threw rocks for a dis-tance of one or two versts. It is al-leged that with the exception of four men who were captured, two squadrons of cavalry were wiped out by the ex-plosion of such mines. The witnesses confirm previous state-ments that the Innunces Insers in this ments that the Japanese losses in this lighting were severe. The Japanese sol-diers advanced to Wolf's hill over alers advanced to won's full over ground thickly strewn with their dead. They occupied the hill. By the third day the stench from the decomposing bodies, which were not interred for lack of time, became intense. Japanese prisoners are quoted as saying that one of the narrowest streets of a Chinese vil-lage which was made the target of Russian batteries was packed with Russian batteries was packed with dead and wounded men. The vehicles used by the Russians in removing their wounded included bioy-cles used in pairs with a litter swung between them. A detachment of six tabs also was sent out on July 26 to bring in Russion wounded to a place they had visited the day before. It was found, however, that this place was ocfound, however, that this place was oc-cupied by the Japanese, who captured outfit of cabs. On July 25 two detachments of marines and sailors, numbering 260 men, lost every commissioned officer as a result of the first volley fired by the Japanese. The men of this detachment thereupon The men of this detarined interaction sent a delegation to Mai.-Gen, Kondra-kato and requested that he send to them the officers under whom they had previously performed exceptionally bril-liant services and for which Gen, Stocsliant services and for which ten, Stoes-sel had sent them special thanks. By the night of July 27 the Russian soldiers had been fighting 48 hours with a minimum of rest, food and water. They were then relieved by reserves, who arrived at the lines led by bands playing the national anthem. At the conclusion of the authem cheers were conclusion of the anthem cheers were given along the entire Russian line for the emperor. A proclamation issued by Gen. Stoessel, commander-in-chief at Port Arthur, thanking the soldiers and Port Arthur, thanking the soldiers and declaring that their work had shown the fortress never would be taken, was then read to the troops, who again cheered. ## TALK ON "MORMONISM."

Elder Nephi L. Morris Defines Its At titude to Other Faiths.

Before an audience of something like a thousand tourists, Elder Nephi L. Morris yesterday discussed "Mormonism" in the Tabernacle. First he defined the attitude of that faith to Catholicism and Protestantism, follow. ing this with a brief sketch of the Church from the time of the Prophet's first vision to the expulsion of the Saints from Missouri and Illinois. He called attention to the prediction made by the Prophet 52 years ago last Satur day, to the effect that the Saints would suffer much persecution and would finally go to the Rocky mountains and
