A Voice from Mexico.

Editor Deseret News:

The enclosed obituary notice from the Mexican Financier of the 10th inst. brings the sad news to our colonies of the demise of General Pacheco, minister of colonization, a patriot, a great man, and a true friend of our people. In the fall of 1884 and spring of 1885, when the Edmunds raid was first felt in Arizona and New Mexico, a number of families moved south, hoping to find a place of refuge in Chihuahua. They camped near the Casas Grandes river, living in tents and wagons. They appeared like a military encampment on the plain. The attention of the State officials was attracted to them. About the 9th of April an order was issued by the acting governor, addressed to the "Jefe" of the Canton, requiring that the people immediately leave the State, demanding also to know the reason for their presence on the frontier. This word was carried by W. W. Romney to A. F. Macdonald at Corralitos, twenty-five miles below Casas Grandes. After conferring with the "Jefe" at the latter place, he decided we must leave the State in fifteen days, as his orders would not admit of extending the time, but thought it would be best for us to go to Chihuahua City, and see the acting Governor (General Fuero). We decided to do so, on returning to Corralitos. Apostle George Teasdale had just arrived there. He in company with Brother Macdonald went to Chihuahua City and employed Mr. Jose M. Gamboa to assist us. By him we were introduced to the governor. After we made our statement he seemed determined that we leave the State, but finally agreed to [illegible]

...where oranges and other fruits are offered for sale. From the valley we began to rise, following the curves and passing through several tunnels and cuts to a height of several thousand feet.

At Cordova we were requested to ride with the general in his car, as up to this time not a word had been said about the business for which we had come. After we had passed through the mountains toward the capital, he called Mr. M. and myself, and on the way all the points necessary to be understood and the terms for contract of colonization were talked over and noted down by his secretary. They were afterwards completed at the capital. His great liberality, kindness and unpretentious manner was the good feature of all. We felt the acquaintance then formed, the pleasant conditions under which we traveled, and friendship extended to a worthy and representative of the "Mormon" people in Mexico from that true friend of his country was an example which might be profitably imitated by intemperate and intolerant Christian professors in other lands, and that we should never forget it, but cherish his memory and noble example.

I trust he may have worthy successors, that the President of this republic and his advisers may continue to prosper, and our colonies prove a blessing in this land.

We have had pleasant rains and the effects of the past dry summer will pass away.

Yours respectfully,

A. F. MACDONALD.
