BRUTES AND MANIACS.

The horrors laid bare to the public gaze by the testimony before the commissioners investigating the management of the Detroit insane asylum only show the result of the criminal practice of placing brutes in charge of maniacs. It appears that several of the unfortunate human beings were simply murdered—how many is as yet a secret—because their keepers reasoned that brutal force was all that was needed in the treatment of the patients, the more the better. The consequence was that insane persons were beaten to death, if the paroxysm did not cease sooner.

Now in this all. Patients were allowed to quarrel and fight with all the revolting scenes incident to a contest between beings deprived of their reason. The keepers, or some of them, the testimony shows, stood by idle, evidently enjoying the unutterable sight, although the mere recital of the circumstances almost runs the blood to the veins of the investigators. If these keepers are not themselves insane, they are criminals of the lowest type.

It is to be hoped that the insane asylum mentioned enjoys the distinction of being the only one in this country in which such atrocities are possible. But it would do no harm, now the matter has been published, if those whose duty it is to superintend institutions of that kind would look into their management with a view to ascertaining what is going on. It is only once in a while that acts of cruelty perpetrated in insane asylums and penal establishments reach the public ear, but this happens often enough to prove that inspection is needed by those in authority.

As a general rule it requires certain qualifications not possessed by everybody to handle insane persons and the criminal classes. Not everybody could make a success at taming wild beasts, and much less at conquering demons. But the fact is too often overlooked in the appointment of attendants at places where supreme kindness, coupled with a strong will and a keen insight into human nature, are indispensable. In the case at Dunning, as in similar instances, those are much to blame who employed brutes to take care of maniacs and kept them in such a position.

THE CUBAN CAUSE.

Notwithstanding all "official" efforts to belittle the Cuban insurrection and numerous predictions of speedy success, the movement is steadily growing, and when Congress meets in the fall, that body will, if the present program is carried out, be notified of the establishment of a Cuban republic with a provisional government and an accredited representative at Washington, and an earnest appeal will be made for recognition of the insurgents as belligerents. With the strong sentiment in this country in favor of the Cuban patriots, that will be an important question, not free from serious difficulties. Can the United States recognize the insurgents before there have been slight blows the Spanish commanders to agree to a formal exchange of wounded and captured soldiers, and such other rights as are accorded to regular armies but denied to armed outlaws? To do so might be construed as an act of hostility to Spain, unprecedented and unjustifiable. Probably the best service that could be done to Cuban independence by this country would be to acquire the island by means of purchase and establish a republican government on its beautiful shores.

Cuba, so near the New World where principle of independence and liberty govern, has felt the repulsion of the Old World keenly. As early as the year 1868 the struggle commenced, but the first important battle for liberty occurred in 1869, when Lopez started an expedition from this country. He captured the city of Cardenas but was to withdraw. Three years later he led another band against the Spaniards, but failed. He was captured and executed, and portions of his body were publicly sold.

In 1868 a revolution lasting ten years commenced under the leadership of Cespedes. A republic was then proclaimed. This uprising cost Spain millions of dollars and thousands of soldiers. It is claimed that of 120,000 dispersed from the mother country, only a few hundred returned, so fierce was the warfare, so fearful the ravages of the deadly fever. Finally General Martinez Campos, by promises of political reform, succeeded in quenching the flames of civil war. It is needless to say the reforms never materialized.

Jose Marti, at the time of this insurrection, was a boy fifteen years old, but he was captured and sentenced to hard labor in chains for sedition. He effected his escape, however, and since 1891 he has been working on the plans of the present uprising. Through his efforts the clubs were formed in every country of the American continent, united into a great revolutionary party. Arms and ammunition were procured and sent to the island. Marti was killed in one of the skirmishes with the insurgents, but the organization was before then completed and the place taken, and the war goes on, notwithstanding the death of one of the leaders. Prominent participants in the revolution express hope of its final success this time.

In an article on the Cuban revolution in the September number of Cosmopolitan appears some facts and figures the former illustrating the condition under which the population is suffering. Through the government of Spain the island has a debt of $200,000,000 or $100 per capita. In order to meet this the taxation is oppressive. Small retail stores are taxed $100 and larger ones. The income tax is proportionally severe. Clerks pay two and a half per cent of their earnings, with an extra amount to pay for the collection. Permission is also required for every social gathering and cannot be obtained except by bribery. Taxes on imports are almost prohibitive except on goods from Spain. Native officials are compelled to pay bribes for their appointments, and, consequently, practice extortion from their own people. With such government, no wonder that patriots stake all on the chance of establishing liberty. It is marvelous that, too, that with personal and united efforts they will obtain it, as have other countries on this hemisphere.

A QUESTION OF DATES.

The veteran B. F. Johnson writes from Mesa City, Arizona, under date of August 10, as follows:

How liable we all are to mistakes in dates when reaching back to dig from the grave of past events incidents of Church history! In a late issue of the News, Brother Miles, in relating his observations and experience with Miller and Malleston, says that the 6th of April was the prophetic day as mentioned by Miller for the second coming of Christ, for as the 6th of April was Annual Conference of the Church, that could not have been the day. For on the day designated by Miller for the second coming the Prophet Joseph, with fifty or more of his church associates, were gathered in private council, and on that day there was by direct revelation organized a modeled of the government of God upon the earth and the keys of the eternal priesthood were committed to perfect fulfillment of the prophecy of Daniel. Miller was mistaken in the nature of the event that transpired on that day, and of those present on that occasion we are the last remaining, until all was fulfilled that it was Miller's prophetic day. It now seems to me it was the 3rd of April, but am not certain, and would be glad if you could give the correct date as it is an item of history. I work to project it in my "Life Review."

Will you please tell Brother T. Williams that it was 1841 instead of 1842 he went with President Young and company up the Sweet valley and over the mountains to Paowan and Cedar, to visit antelopes and examine the iron and coal in that region.

Frequently we along the historical line from 1831 to 1845 discover events by our veterans that, under careful review they stand as double change. Mistakes in history are more easily made than corrected.

We have not the data at hand for giving the information asked for by our correspondent relative to the precise date fixed by William Miller for the second coming, further than that it was early in April, 1845. Regarding the 6th, we will say that that was the date of holding the Annual Conference at Kirtland.

With reference to the suggestion that some of our veterans vary somewhat in the dates given of certain events, this is easily accounted for in the fact that many times they were compelled to resort to memory for a lengthened period, not always having facilities for making a written note of occurrences. In most instances of an important character, however, there has been some central points who have kept dates, and to these reference should be had for the correct date that are invaluable to the historian. The greatest work that has been performed in this line has been by President Woodruff, for whose services in this respect the people of Utah always will be under great obligations.

THE DEFENDER'S ILL LUCK.

The trial race yesterday, Aug. 20, between the Defender and Vigilant was very unsatisfactory to those who may have placed their reliance to the new yacht to defend the trophy or trophies, the America's cup. There was a good breeze, and this so stirred up her rigging that the Defender had to withdraw or take chances of having her topmast carried away. The mainsail once was so great that the yacht was declared unable to complete in the second trial race for a week.

This is the third accident the Defender has met with in her brief career. During the annual cruise of the New York yacht club, in a run of sixty-four miles from Huntington to New London, she was more than two minutes ahead when a sudden gale went wrong with her steering gear and she had to give up. On the following day, when the fleet had a free run from New London to Newport, the Defender came in way ahead, over the Block Island course, off Newport, she had a comfortable lead, but when seven miles from her goal broke and the Vigilant won the race (Gulet cup).

It is generally admitted that the Defender is the better yacht, and it is thought that all her speed will be proved in the coming contest with the Valkyrie II.

WHERE THE BEER FLOWS.

Of the enormous quantities of intoxicants consumed every year no idea can be formed from the following figures published by the Paris Temps. They deal with the question of beer brewed in the world, representing the average of the last five or six years. The paper says that the quantity brewed in Europe is 8,100,000,000 gallons, Germany coming first with a production of 1,621,000,000 gallons, of which 644,712,000 gallons are brewed in North Germany, 344,000,000 gallons in Bavaria, 72,000,000 gallons in Wurtemberg, 50,445,000 gallons in Baden, and 17,000,000 gallons in Alsace-Lorraine. Great Britain comes next with a total of 874,195,000 gallons; Austro-Hungary is third, with a total of 808,860,000 gallons, while France follows with about 225,000,000 gallons. These are the only countries in which the production reaches 100,000,000 gallons; but relatively in their population, Denmark, with 49,183,000 gallons brewed, and Norway with 20,504,000, have a much larger production than most of the others. Russia, with its vast area and large population, produces only 50,000,000 gallons, while the quantity of beer produced in other countries is: Switzerland, 28,000,000 gallons; Spain, 23,000,000 gallons; Turkey, 8,150,000 gallons; Italy, 3,000,000 gallons; Roumania, 2,225,000 gallons; Luxemburg and Servia, 2,000,000 gallons each; and Greece, 150,000 gallons. The average quantity of beer brewed out of Europe is 800,000,000 in the United States, 66,000,000 in Australia, and 4,000,000 in Japan.

The News acknowledges the receipt of an invitation to the annual Peach Day Festival of Grand Junction and Mesa county, Colorado, on the 4th of September next. Past experience is a sufficient guarantee that the event connected with a magnificent display of the delicious fruit will be a great success. The locality around Grand Junction, reaching far westward into Utah as well as eastward in Colorado, is one of the finest peach growing sections on the globe, as evidenced by the size and quality of the fruit produced. As to the program on the date referred to, its excellence may be suggested by the fact that Hon. Wm. J. Bryan, of Nebraska, and Hon. John F. Shafroth, of Colorado, will be the orators of the day.
