G. A. R. REUNION.

The twenty-ninth annual encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic at Louisville, Kentucky, is regarded as an event of more than usual interest because it takes place in the leading city of a state that during the great national struggle was divided. The North and the South in this reunion meet, extending to each other the hand of friendship and fraternity.

The city is resplendent with decorations and illuminated at night, and it is estimated that at least 45,000 veterans will take part in the parade, while other visitors are numbered by hundreds of thousands.

It is but natural that the incidents of the war, although ended thirty years ago, should still live in the memory of this nation. It was the great event of the present century, and by it an issue was decided of vital importance to the cause of liberty. The great controversy whether national unity is second to local interests was appealed to the court of final resort—that in which might is right—and it was decided in favor of unity. The work of the founders of the Republic was saved and a demonstration given to the world that a government by the people is able to withstand a storm in which monarchical governments would have been helplessly wrecked. The salvation of the Union was the triumph of liberty among the nations of the earth.

The soldiers engaged in the gigantic struggle numbered three millions. But in order to comprehend the significance of this figure, it is necessary to remember that every one of these had parents, relatives or friends that followed the war with personal interest on account of those who were actually engaged in it. In the South there was hardly a family not represented on the battle fields, and the condition in the North was nearly the same. And far beyond the sea the war was followed with the same personal interest. It was indeed a war "poured out upon all nations," almost without parallel in the annals of men.

As to the actual cost of this combat, it is estimated at $8,500,000,000, of which $2,000,000,000 fell to the South and the remaining four and a half billions to the north. This estimate does not include vast amounts lost of which no account could be kept, nor the millions yearly expended on pensions to veterans.

No wonder, then, that the battles of 1861-65 should be fresh in the memory of the people. It will undoubtedly remain so, until that era shall have set in when the pursuits of peace shall be considered greater than the achievements of armies; until some better mode of adjusting differences shall have been found than that which involves the destruction of property and the shedding of blood on battle fields.

Since the above was written telegraphic advices have been received of a terrific accident by which gloom was thrown over the city in which the veterans are gathered and which cannot fail to leave a painful impression on their minds. Members of the Louisville Legion were detailed to hail the dawn of day with military salutes, in honor of the guests, when through some accident the caissons exploded with terrific results. Several of the soldiers were hurled into eternity while others were maimed for life. Thus, to the demonstrations of peace and fraternity were added one of the horrors with which the veterans once were so familiar, rendering the contrast between war and peace all the more prominent.

RELIEF FROM APPENDICITIS.

Hats off, we say, to Dr. Hunter McGuire, [illegible] of Virginia, ex-president of the American medical association, ex-surgeon to Stonewall Jackson, and a physician of national reputation! In a recent address before the medical association of the Old Dominion, this particular scientist is quoted as having successfully exploded a number of popular ideas as to appendicitis. He is reported as saying that he had never, in all the operations he had performed for this trouble, seen a single grape or tomato seed or cherry stone, and he was very much pleased to be able to make this statement, so as to set at rest the fears existing among the laity as to the dangers of these fruits. He also said he was sure the disease could be cured without the use of the knife. The reporter volunteers the further information that Dr. McGuire has treated more cases of appendicitis than any other physician in the South, and has been eminently successful with his patients.

Hats off, again we say, to any man who speaks by authority, especially if he be a doctor, concerning the bane and fears of grape-seed in its relations to appendicitis! Humankind is prone to scares and fads, and this grape-seed insanity is one of the most insidious and annoying of the whole lot. Years ago there was neither fashion nor popularity in the appendicitis habit. Now the slightest twinge in the abdominal region is sufficient to invite the keen carving knife of the specialist and his high-priced skill. A man like Dr. McGuire, who doesn't believe in grape or tomato seed or cherry-stone, and above all who doesn't pin his faith to the knife, is the man for our money.

THE CHESS CHAMPION.

An instance of the speed with which honors crowd up to one who has already tasted of fame is furnished in the case of H. W. Pillsbury, the winner of the recent chess championship series. A Boston paper lays claim with the declaration that although Brooklyn is his home, Boston was "his cradle and his inspiration;" yet it transpires that his remarkable powers were wholly unnoticed in the Massachusetts metropolis, and as a matter of fact he had to travel with a dime museum for a while to earn a living, performing as an automaton chess-player, and making much havoc among his competitors.

The honor of the triumph he has won need not, however, be belittled. He is a very young man and began his business life modestly as a writer of advertisements. Historically it may not be uninteresting to recall that it is nearly forty years since the chess championship of the world has been won by an American, and Pillsbury's triumph brings the trophy to this country for but the second time in the whole history of the game. The last American to achieve this distinction was Paul Morphy, who was two years younger than the youngster Pillsbury when he startled all the chess players of the world. About all the other great chess players who have made great records at the game in this country have been foreigners by birth and have been citizens of this country only by adoption. Capt. Mackenzie was an Englishman by birth and a New Yorker by long residence when he won the championship in an international tournament which included all the famous players of the day.

WAY OUT OF DATE.

"Major" Moses P. Handy is a Chicagoan, addicted largely to whiskers and somewhat to literature, the latter for revenue. Withal he is something of a gossip, and anything that he does not already know he is willing to let the first comer tell him. Such lucubrations as his brain and ears are thus able to arrange, he peddles weekly to the New York Mail and Express and the Chicago Times-Herald, and perhaps to other hyphenated journals which are as yet not honored with a place on the News' exchange list. We do not attach much influence to his work, for what has been seen of it is quite undeserving; but as a sample of his invention and his literary style we quote the following from his latest essay:

The Sedalia Bazoo is a newspaper which really exists, although many people doubt it, just as many used to doubt whether there was really any such place as Oshkosh or Kalamazoo. Sedalia is a flourishing town in Missouri, and the Bazoo is a good paper published there by [illegible], a unique type of son of western. A few years ago, at a dinner of the American Newspaper Publishers' Association in New York, Col. Goodwin followed Charles A. Dana in the speechmaking. He said: "I am mighty glad to meet Mr. Dana and to hear him talk. I admire him and his paper very much, but have always had a grudge against them both. One day the Sun had an editorial on 'Floral Wives,' which seemed to me to be a pretty good thing. Not being short of editorial matter that day I just scissored it and slapped it into the Bazoo. During the next few days I had to barricade my office and keep my revolver out of the drawer. There was a [illegible] procession of [illegible] who called [illegible] to account [illegible] on them. [illegible] and the next week and again [illegible] the article was from the Sun, and [illegible] at Mormons. That taught me a lesson. Now I always credit everything I take from other papers—especially what is likely to hurt anybody's feelings."

Now, of course there is not a word of truth in the whole story, but there appeared to be about three inches of space to be filled in the latter he is hired to write, and the foregoing was clumsily arranged for the occasion. On exactly that same principle have hundreds of articles concerning the Mormons been written in days gone by. There was a time when the deception was [illegible], if not a necessity. Nowadays it masquerades for a very poor kind of wit, and excites only pity or an intellect so man, forgiveness as not to know it.

ANDREE'S NORTH POLE PLAN.

Considerable interest is being manifested in the proposed expedition of Professor Andree, of Stockholm, to reach the North Pole by means of a balloon. Mr. Andree proposes to leave Europe early in the summer of 1896 in time to reach the Norwegian islands situated near the northwest corner of Spitzbergen, by the middle of June. The start, in the balloon, from there is to be made in July whenever any wind blowing. It is necessary that the wind should be brisk and have this direction in order that the balloon may travel far into unknown wastes and reach the Pole.

It appears that Arctic explorers in this country generally regard the proposition as impractical, because it is looked upon as impossible to steer the air ship. The Swedish professor, however, states that he has devised a steering arrangement with which he claims to have caused his balloon to deviate twenty-seven degrees from the direction of the wind.

According to a dispatch from Washington in a New York paper, General Greely does not think the plan feasible. "Even if he does pass over the point we are all anxious to know about," says the general, "he may be unable to land, on account of weather conditions, and any reports he may bring back will consequently be of little value."

Equally skeptic is Engineer Melville, known for his connection with the Jeannette expedition. He says:

Mr. Andree's plan is a fool scheme, and that is all there is about it. The [illegible] wind will blow Mr. Andree's air ship around like a feather, and if he escapes with his life he will be lucky. As for me, give me sledges and dogs. They would be good enough for me if I were going to undertake an expedition to the Pole.

Should Mr. Andree after all succeed in reaching the desired goal in his air ship, he would not be the first to demonstrate that those who know most sometimes are mistaken, or that "fools" once in a while obtain the reputation of a genius.

A MINNESOTA farmer hired a number of Indians to help him with his harvesting; and whether they found fault with his work or with his board, or with his manner of payment, he didn't know and they didn't, but they certainly became threatening in their desire to scalp him. He hasn't as yet been able to find any reasonable difference over which it was worth while to split hairs.

THE CHICAGO Times-Herald advises those who have an ambition to be a United States senator to "go and live in the country or in one of the smaller cities," mentioning in the same connection the obscure home of many of the present senators of the Republic. The advice may be acceptable to some of Utah's aspiring sons, and to others, not.

THIS IS the way the Dallis, Texas Democrat treats political aspirants who do not pay their bills:

Z. J. (Taylor) White, who ran for justice of the peace in precinct No. 1, last year, and received twenty votes, never paid this office for his cards. Somebody who does not already know him might trust him for 5 cents. We warn the public.

A CYNIC witnessed a collision between two bicycle girls in Liberty Park last night, in the course of which both were sent sprawling to grass. "Aha," he exclaimed; "who dare now assert that figures don't lie! There be two of them, and they are not bad figures either."

THE DISPATCHES fail to tell us whether the crew of the defeated yacht Defender yesterday employed the evening in splicing the main brace. It is safe to say, however, that a great many of Valkyrie's admirers did.

Both the great parties appear to be confident of carrying Utah. And if bragging will do it, they will.—Boston Herald.

At least one of them is mistaken, and the one that isn't will not win by bragging.

ANOTHER RAMBLER DAY.

The Rambler boys made a great showing in the Ogden races. The first event of the day was the ten mile road race, in which McConahay finished third, taking third prize and third time prize. Then came the track race, Joe Beck taking second in the novice, Fowler first, Weller second, and Thatcher third in the mile scratch, class B, all "Rambler" you will note. In the half mile class A, May took second, Cornus third. Half mile, class B, Thatcher second, Fowler third. Five mile, class B, Fowler second. In this race a man in a yellow suit lost his head and fell, Comnibear and Weller being immediately behind him, the result was a spill for these parties and the race left to Evans. The five mile, class A, was another Rambler event, May taking first, Joe Beck second and McConahoy third. Fourteen prizes in one day is glory enough for any one.

People may laugh and people may cry,
And dogs may howl if they please,
But Rambler's win races wherever they go,
Regardless of how others feel.

Moral—Buy a Rambler! Ride a winner and you'll be a spinner.
