SALTAIR THRONGED.

Bryan Day at the Lake Brings Out Several Thousand.

IN HONOR OF MAN AND WIFE.

Favorite Speeches and Sweet Singing—Presentation of the Gold and Silver Cup.

Bryan day at Saltair prompted between five and six thousand people to do themselves to that beautiful resort yesterday, where a reception was given Mr. Bryan in the afternoon and her distinguished husband was presented with an elegant gold and silver cup in the evening.

RECEPTION TO MRS. BRYAN.

The reception was a brilliant affair and a success in every respect. Over 200 ladies took part in it and all did honor to the one in whose behalf the banquet was given. The menu was delicious and was served on the floor of the great pavilion under a canopy of bunting, flags and feather patriotic decorations. Flowers were also strewn about in nice profusion and during the banquet several of the ladies, both local and visiting, responded to toasts. The reception came to an end just as the 7:15 train from the city pulled into the resort, and as Mr. Bryan ascended the stairs of the pavilion, a military band went up for the free after exhibition.

AND THE CROWD CHEERED.

It was about 8:30 o'clock when the Hon. E. M. Bowman, under the leadership of Prof. Anton Pedersen, struck up a substituting march, to the presence of an audience of several thousand people between them, lying in wait for the appearance of the man of the evening. A second selection was rendered and when Mr. Bryan made his appearance on the stage at 8:45 he was greeted with enthusiastic applause. Leading the way for the distinguished audience was Mr. Bryan, Mrs. Bryan, Judge Powers, ex-governor of New Mexico, Mrs. Bryan occupied a seat to the left of her husband, while Judge Powers sat to the left of the lady.

JUDGE POWERS SPEAKS.

The enthusiasm which pervaded the immense audience was so great that Dr. Elias S. Ferguson, chairman of the meeting, had a difficult task to call the assemblage to order. On quieting down it was found Judge Powers was introduced as the first speaker. He began:

"Ladies and Gentlemen: I confess that when I was invited to speak here that I was but to address the members of the Transmississippi congress. If this vast concourse consists of the kind, then I must say that it is one of greater magnitude than I expected."

Judge Powers then take the vast assemblage a hearty welcome. He deprecated the fact that the gathering was not larger, and in a somewhat happy vein referred to the "great property that had come upon the country," said he, "I suppose those who are not with us are so busy counting their interest and cutting their coupons, that they cannot spare the time to meet with us."

The varied industries and resources of the State of Utah were then referred to. "When the government does not want silver, we can give them gold," said the speaker, "if they do not want gold we can give them lead. If lead is not what they want, we can give the iron; our mineral resources are so great and varied."

Judge Powers then referred to Mr. Bryan. "We have among us," said he, "a true American—a man who is not content when he has succeeded on his hands—a man who has in the make-up all the attributes that go to constitute an American in every sense of the term. We welcome the gentleman as we welcome all of the Transmississippi delegation, and hope they will as well pleased with their short stay in Utah, a State which made the 45th star in the great American Union.

UTAH'S FIRST SINGERS.

The speaker was greeted with great applause, and at the conclusion of his remarks Chairman Ferguson introduced Utah singers in the persons of Mrs. Viola Pratt-Goodwin and Miss Geneva Jennings, who sang with much sweetness and feeling the song, Julia's Dream in Grief. They were greatly pleased with applause and at Mr. Bryan's request coupled with the expressions of the audience, the ladies sang another verse.

L. SEDFORD PRINCE.

Chairman Ferguson then introduced as "the prince of the gathering" L. Sedford Prince of New Mexico. Mr. Prince is commencing well happy in his knowledge that he has time in speaking was limited. His reason for this, he said, was that he was afraid overzealous enthusiasm, so great had been the success of the present congress. It far surpassed, said the speaker, any and every meeting that this congress has ever held, and although but a small portion of the business in hand has yet been attended to, the success was great, surpassing all previous occasions of the kind.

Mr. Prince spoke of the present gathering a living congress. The ladies had been in their first, last and all the time. They were seen on all sides, in eager eagerness to meet and welcome the visiting guests. He referred in detail to the strangers and their carrying out. The speaker has to well name in for due mentioning, as did also the pages who had done such valiant service. Secretary Calkins and the assistant secretary were also included in Mr. Prince's happy style.

At the conclusion of Mr. Prince's address, Miss Geneva Jennings responded with a beautiful solo, entitled Daisy.

MR. BRYAN TO THE FRONT.

Already interest in Mr. Bryan was aroused and when the gentleman was introduced by Chairman Ferguson the applause that filled the great pavilion was deafening. Mr. Bryan was endeavoring from a severe cold and hoarseness. As he stepped to the front he said: "I am not quite a long case in the audience suggested that Bryan there all right" and the audience laughed.

"It is a great encouragement to me, when I am weary of work, to be assured that I am all right. I do not know what I am expected to say to you tonight Governor Prince who has just preceded me, was explaining that he was restricted in being limited to time. I consider that I am unfortunate in not being limited. What I can I say to-night I don't know. Judge Powers in his remarks pertinent stripped me of my speech, in relation to Utah greatness. I had put in seven days in the study of Utah's greatness, and I was going to tell you, but now that I have been deprived of it I feel that I am like a dry well minus a rope to pull up that old bucket—he is very quiet that—a question on which I have spoken so much, and of which I have been accused of talking more than I know."

Mr. Bryan then referred to the great enthusiasm expected of him. He wished that the people of the Southwest were in the Union, and that they were all as one blood and entitled one and all to the same rights and privileges. The holding of these Transmississippi congresses, said he, was a step in the right direction. It was necessary for an interchange of ideas in order that our people might know what each other were doing. The subject of irrigation, said he, was one of the greatest importance to the people of the Transmississippi states. It was a subject which made these states, and opened them up to the blossoming condition which they were now in.

Mr. Bryan referred to the kind treatment he had received from the people of Salt Lake City and Utah. They had treated him the well and he heard that he should also be treated, received, would have a tendency to change his disposition. He had known of the temperance when changing a man from the Southern states and to that of the single gold standard and he hoped that that would never be so in his case.

Mr. Bryan spoke of the conditions which existed here in Utah. The people of the West were a generous, open-hearted people, and if their opponents in the East were cultivated more like them, there would exist a great harmony in the country than that which exists at the present time.

Mr. Bryan's speech was followed with tremendous applause and when it had attended, Mrs. Viola Pratt-Goodwin sang in excellent style, the song entitled, Louisiana Lou.

THE CUP PRESENTATION.

The presentation of the excellent gold and silver cup donated by local mining men was the next number on the program. The speech necessary in such a feature was made by Hon. John Kerns of Park City, who referred in emphatic terms to the great respect the people of Utah had for Mr. Bryan. He spoke of a reminiscence and chiding said with that the gift presented was one from the latter class, although their hope was that the receiver would shower it as a token of the appreciation which the people of the entire State had for him. The cup, he said, was made of native parts of silver to one of gold, Mr. Bryan in responding said that he scarcely knew to what language to express his appreciation, but he felt like saying that it was better to have run and lost than never to have run at all. The gift coming as it did from those who labored and were engaged in useful toil would be appreciated with more fervor than could any title that could possibly come from an hereditary monarch. Made of the two precious metals as it was, he felt like saying as the preacher would in forming a couple in law at wedlock, "What God has joined together let no man put asunder."

Mr. Bryan said he would cherish the gift as a token of good-will from the people of the State of Utah, as well as from those who directly gave it.

This closed the exercises and the great gathering wended its way towards the train.
