THE SILVER BATTLE

Opened in the House by Bland for Free Coinage.

WASHINGTON, March 22.—The silver debate has opened in the House, and from the indications it will be a battle of giants.

Chairman Bland of the committee on coinage, weights and measures in favor of the bill, opened the discussion on behalf of free coinage.

Williams (Mass.), an anti-free coinage Democrat, made the opening speech in opposition.

The air has been filled with rumors of filibustering designs on the part of the anti-free coinage people to oppose a vote, but, if such designs exist, they evidently are not to be carried into execution until after the three days' debate.

The galleries were crowded when, at 12:30, the bill was called up under the resolution of the committee on rules.

Tracey (New York) raised a point of order against the bill being considered in the House, holding that as the preparation of coin notes by the treasury for the exchange of bullion involved an expenditure by the treasury, the bill should be considered in committee of the whole.

The Speaker held that, as the bill did not make a specific appropriation, it should not be considered in committee of the whole.

It was agreed that evening sessions should be held today and tomorrow.
