BRAVE "BILLY" BRYAN.

Making all allowances for the coloring to suit western readers which the press dispatches may have imparted to their reports of Mr. Bryan's tour in the East, the fact remains that that distinguished gentleman returns to his home state today after one of the most phenomenally successful electioneering tours ever performed in American politics. Friend and foe will have to admit that he has conducted himself with admirable propriety, and that his utterances have been marked at all times by singular discretion and patriotism. He has grown amazingly in popular estimation, and without estranging any element of his own following, he has won many thousands of lukewarm friends and even opposite to his sincere support. He has proven himself abler and bigger than almost any one believed him to be, and his courage, logic and dignity have exerted from opponents a degree of consideration that could never have been deserved by a mere demagogue. He has fairly won his spurs in gallant contest, and has given the champions of the opposition many a thrust that has set their old bones to rattling. Whether he wins or loses the splendid prize for which he is striving, he at least has exerted the respect of all classes, and has bravely set a pace as a campaigner which it will bother the swiftest of them to keep up with.

THE BEET SUGAR INDUSTRY.

The starting up of the Utah sugar factory at Lehi in a few days will call special attention to what has become a very important industry in this State. It is true the beet sugar business has not advanced to the prosperous condition that might be desirable in the State; but it is making its way thither with steady strides, and the fact that the people appreciate its value is an assurance that they will give it the necessary support to insure full success. It was a heroic task to establish the factory as one of the State's industries; and the courage, persistence and patriotism of those who did the work, struggling in the face of almost insurmountable difficulties, ought to earn for them the lasting gratitude of the people. That they have succeeded is due vastly more to their desire to benefit the commonwealth than to any hopes or aims for individual financial profit.

The future of the beet sugar industry in the United States promises a considerable increase, if anything like favorable conditions can be preserved; and Utah probably will secure her share in enlarging her manufactories in due season. The failure of the Cuban sugar crop this year will give opportunity for a vast increase in this country from other sources next year, and offers a field for extended development of the industry in the United States. This fact is being taken advantage of by English capital, about two and a half million dollars of which is invested in California in a deal which was closed on Saturday, Sept. 5, by which a 40,000-acre ranch passed into the hands of a company which proposes to put 20,000 acres in beets and to erect a factory for next year's business. Noting the point that the Cuban failure will make a shortage of sugar from that source for this country next year, and observing that local factories may not be equal to the task of supply, the German producers are making efforts to secure the advantage to themselves. This is one object of the new bounty bill introduced there by Dr. Paasche.

The figures on the sugar industry, given by the Louisiana Sugar Planter and Manufacturer, as corrected in August 8, for the year ending June 30 last, are of interest in this connection: The total imports for the year amounted to 1,949,164 short tons, against 1,797,235 tons the previous year, thus indicating an increase in imports of about 161,000 tons. The value of the sugar was $89,909,000 for the year ending June 30, against $92,910,000 the previous year. Of this amount Cuba furnished $51,900,000 worth, which will be cut in a very small sum the next year. The Hawaiian Islands came in second with $11,000,000. The next largest imports were from the East Indies, the particular locality not named, but including Java, and the figures given indicate nearly $11,000,000 of imports. Next in order came Germany with about $10,500,000 of beet sugar delivered. The West Indies, other than Cuba, followed with nearly $7,000,000 worth of sugar, Brazil with about $4,000,000, and the rest of South America at about $4,000,000, while Africa sent $3,000,000 worth. Next the Philippine Islands at Manila came exceeding $2,000,000, and $1,750,000 came from Belgium. Great Britain, Australasia and parts of Asia send in to about $1,000,000 each in sugar. France, the parent of the beet sugar industry, is not recorded as sending in any sugar, excepting a little may come in in the last million dollars' worth reported from the "rest of Europe."

With the falling off from Cuba, which Germany can hardly hope to supply in one or even two or three years, there can be seen a field for a further marked development of the beet sugar industry in this country; while the fact that three times as much as this supply comes from outside sources and ought to be manufactured at home, indicates how much there is yet to gain on this point. There are now thousands of people employed in the sugar industry in America with millions of capital invested; there is room for more thousands of employes in beet sugar factories, to keep at home the millions of dollars which annually go now to enrich the people of other countries, and which, if kept here by factories, would aid in a measure in solving the vexed financial problem. And the figures and lesson of the beet sugar industry for the nation ought to afford valuable suggestions to the people of Utah as to other manufactures locally, whereby their industrial condition is capable of vast permanent improvement and progress.

MAJOR McKINLEY'S SILVER VOTES'

Answering a question of a subscriber, the Cleveland Plaindealer asserts that Major McKinley "voted on the 5th of November, 1877, for the original Bland bill, which passed the House on that day by a vote of 164 to 34, the negative vote being almost entirely from New York and New England. That bill, for which McKinley voted, provided for the coinage of the United States silver dollars of the weight of 412½ grains troy of standard silver, as provided in the act of Jan. 18, 1837," which dollars were to be full legal tender, and it was further provided that 'any owner of silver bullion may deposit the same at any United States coining mint, or assay office, to be coined into such dollars for his benefit, upon the same terms and conditions as gold bullion is deposited for coinage under existing laws.' Mr. McKinley never denied the record of his vote for 'the free and unlimited coinage of silver,' but publicly acknowledged it on the stump in his debate with ex-Governor Campbell October 5, 1891, when he said: 'In 1877 I voted to reinstate the ancient silver dollar as part of the coinage of the United States.' The vote of November 5, 1877, on the Bland bill for the free and unlimited coinage of the silver dollar was the only one on the subject that year in the House. The Bland-Allison bill for the limited coinage of the silver dollar did not reach the House until February, 1878. Mr. McKinley voted for that also, and for its passage over the veto of President Hayes."

The facts above given are more interesting than significant, and even in the former aspect they will appeal only to free silver friends of the Cleveland stripe. But political comfort is notoriously gaunt; the man who, in view of Mr. McKinley's abject silence on the money question during the week preceding his nomination, and in view of his attitude since that time, can interpret a vote of ten years ago as friendly to silver today, possesses an ardor of hope and a degree of sanguineness worthy of a better cause.

As most people will regard it, the recording of Mr. McKinley's various votes on silver as well as on other issues is chiefly valuable as going to make up Mr. McKinley's title to a place in history.

A SHREWD HEATHEN.

Many unpleasant things have been said of Li Hung Chang, and probably many more will be, as he leaves this continent for his Asiatic home. But unkind words, said either seriously or in flippant tones, do not alter the fact that the aged Chinaman is a very shrewd man, which he is a heathen and represents one of the most aggressive countries in the world, according to western ideas. He has displayed one characteristic that some civilized people sometimes forget, namely, that he is not too old to learn; and although his manner of seeking information may not suit every body, the fact of his careful efforts in that line indicate a genius and capability for progress that he is not always given credit for.

From the standpoint usually taken by those who do not like the Chinese, the question of Li is reduced to the proceeding of an unlovely quite old man. But the prospect is that the next future will show that it arises from a desire to place his nation on a plane with the other and more advanced countries of Asia. Li is about "full grown and ripe," so to speak, and to good purpose; for he has sought knowledge, and learned it, one important topic connected with civilization's development. In view of this, it might be worthwhile that if the vicarry were twenty years younger the next decade would witness the most surprising changes in China. As it is, there is good reason to believe that if Li is spared a few years more, his country will fairly leap forward in some of the improvements that will be instituted. The eminent heathen has not been looking up railways, steamships, factories, electric works, and other great factors in civilization for nothing.

In countries like China, development is from the inning powers down; what they decree is carried out; the masses never think of instituting anything new, because such thought would have no scope for growth into tangibility. But when the practical rulers of the empire see that the advantages that accrue to other nations from certain features are within reach for his own country, and to enhance his own prestige at home and abroad, the most radical thing can reach out for them. This he will appear to be likely in the case of the aforesaid viceroy. He will return impressed with the great power for national progress that attends the agency of steam and electricity in the arts of war and peace. China is a great industrial nation. And it should not surprise anyone if, within a few years, those agencies are given such force in Li's dominion as will make the Chinese formidable competitors with other nations in the industrial and commercial world. Li Hung Chang is a heathen in the eyes of millions of people; but the most advanced representatives of civilization who have associated with him all agree that he possesses a large amount of good sound sense.

SPAIN'S NEW REBELLIES.

If the insurgents on the Philippine Islands have good leaders, the trouble there may assume quite large proportions. The great distance between those colonies and the mother country and the peculiar conditions of the islands make it exceedingly difficult for the Madrid government to maintain its authority, especially when its attention is claimed for the Cuban rebellion.

The Philippine islands are situated in the Pacific ocean near the southeastern coast of Asia. The population is estimated at about four millions and a half, a large portion of which are native races that have never acknowledged the authority of Spain. They have their own laws and customs and are governed by their own chiefs. Spain never has felt secure in her possession of those islands and the Malays always have regarded the Spanish soldiers stationed in the various garrisons as intruders.

The capital city is Manila, described as a beautiful place with about 150,000 inhabitants. There are comparatively few Spaniards. Should Spain be forced to give up these islands, she would lose a revenue set stated at about twelve million dollars a year, a sum not large enough, one would suppose, to go to the expense of a great war for.

BY DIRECTION of Bishop Foster the following prayer is being offered up in all the Episcopal churches of the diocese of New York:

O, Almighty Lord, who fashioned the hearts of men and considered all their works, grant, we beseech thee, to us and to all the people of this land the spirit of obedience to thy commandments; that walking only in thy fear, we may, under thy mighty protection, continue to dwell in righteousness and peace. Defend our liberties, preserve our unity, save us from dishonesty, lawlessness and violence, from discord and confusion, from pride and arrogance, and from every sin against thy law. Continue thy goodness to us, that the heritage received from our fathers may be preserved to our children and transmitted undimpaired to the generations to come; that all the nations of the earth may know that thou, O Lord, art our Savior and mighty Deliverer, and our King forever. Grant this, we beseech thee, Father of Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen and Amen.

It may be regarded as an indication that the bishop considers the present situation in the country as one fraught with danger. The supplication to Deity to preserve the heritage received from our fathers can have no other meaning.

The secret of happiness is health. The secret of woman's attractiveness is health. Health is responsible for the century of a woman's life—her husband's love, children's prattle, smooth neck and shoulders, full cheeks, bright eyes, red lips, a breath like flowers. Ill health brings out the hollows in the neck and chest, whitens the lips, makes the breath unbearable. No women likes to be hideous—no woman likes to see the love light fade from her husband's eyes. No woman need be unhealthy or unattractive. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is a medicine to cure these ills in the delicate female organism. Some diseases are peculiar to the organs distinctly feminine. These things are serious, but they can be cured—sometimes quickly and sometimes slowly, but always surely by Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription.

This wonderful medicine is designed for one single purpose—to make women healthy in a womanly way. To stop the burning, aching pain and debilitating drains—to heal inflammation and ulceration. The utmost attention will be given by letter to all sufferers who write to Dr. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y., in confidence. After taking six bottles of "Favorite Prescription" I feel like a new woman.

Last August while working in the harvest field I became overheated, was suddenly attacked with cramps and was nearly dead. Mr. Cummings, the druggist, gave me a dose of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy which completely relieved me. I now keep a bottle of the remedy handy. A. M. BUNNELL, Centerville, Wash. For sale by druggists.

Mrs. E. E. Davis, of San Miguel, Cal., says: "I am trying to a measure to repay the manufacturers of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy for the great good their remedy has done me. For years I was a constant sufferer from weak lungs and bronchial asthma. My rest at night was disturbed by a hacking cough, so that I felt miserable the greater part of the time. Many remedies recommended by friends were tried, none of which proved suitable to my case. I did not experience any beneficial results until I began taking Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. After two bottles of the large size have been used I am pleased to state, my health is better than it has been for years. The soreness has left my lungs and chest and I can breathe easily. It has done me so much good that I want all who are suffering from lung troubles, as I was to give it a trial." For sale by druggists.

Mrs. S. A. Kelt, of Pomona, Cal., had the bad luck to sprain her ankle. "I tried several liniments," she says, "but was not cured until I used Chamberlain's Pain Balm. That remedy cured me and I take pleasure in recommending it and testifying to its efficacy." This medicine is also of great value for rheumatism, lame back, pains in the chest, pleurisy and all deep-seated and muscular pains. For sale by druggists.
