KILLED WHILE OUT HUNTING.

Mysterious Disappearance of a Rancher. —The World's Champion Sheep Shearer—Big Mining Deal.

The gold output in Leadville (Colo.) district shows a steady increase. While the products of all the five veins are liberal.

The national guard of Montana in all probability will meet in regimental encampment next month at Fort Ellis, near Bozeman.

A baseball craze in the goldcrude now raging with Gilpin champions, Colo. Even the clergymen are said to have caught the fever.

It is rumored that a big mining deal is on at Ellensburg, Ariz., in which Boston labor is interested. He (the) not so age. There for some time hanging over the field.

Cripple Creek, Colo., is promised a [illegible] performance place. Two works are to be built. Hotel and will use about 200,000. Full religious will supply [illegible].

Dora Miller, a dance hall girl, employed in the Blue Dove at Victor, Colo., committed suicide on Sunday night, just one hour after a gentleman who was engaged all and which a second was called in.

The grape industry is about to be an active selection in Lodi. It is [illegible] that in the Fresno valley, where the [illegible] of grapes is [illegible] leading industries, there are others who have made as high as $[illegible] an acre.

A man named Johnson, says the Lemhi (Idaho) Reporter and another one by the name of Mitchell, drove into town in a sudden fight Thursday night, with the result that Mitchell is now minus a large portion of one ear lop, which was bitten off by his antagonist.

Frank Hewitt, of Laramie, Wyo., is described as being the champion sheep shearer of the world. He was awarded the championship special at the World's Fair at Chicago, his record of shearing one another sheep in three hours and twenty-seven minutes being unsuspected.

A number of Great Falls, Mont., business men have formed a joint stock company to build a bridge across to points in the Judith basin. The expense of the undertaking is calculated about $10,000, and if the amount can be raised work will be commenced at once.

Two prospectors reported in Prescott, Ariz., lately that they last year stored a record of forty mountain lions. They brought in with them on the trip about 100 lynx skins, besides several wildcat skins, beaver skins, wolf skins, etc., which they have sold for rugs. They use rawhide lariats to hobble.

Carl Bohmer has been accidentally killed while hunting in the San Gabriel canyon, Los Angeles county, Cal. Bohmer and a companion were descending a steep declivity, when, as old in his descent, Bohmer tries to hand his rifle to his friend below. The trigger caught and the contents of the gun were discharged into Bohmer's side, killing him instantly.

On Sunday morning Edward Johnson attempted to commit suicide in Newhall, Los Angeles county, while aboard the train from San Francisco. The passengers were startled to see blood trickling from under the door of the conductor's room. The conductor burst in the door and found Johnson almost dead from a coping wound in the throat, made by a razor. Johnson was despondent because he couldn't get work.

Theodore Gathe, a Holyoke [illegible], on Monday, reported to the Denver police a strange case of disappearance. Gathe and H. H. Clemson left Holyoke together on Thursday last. When they arrived at Brighton they separated, agreeing to meet Friday night at Riverside cemetery. Clemson drove an ordinary farm team and had on his person when he left Holyoke about $90 in money. Gathe went to Riverside at the appointed time but could not find his companion. He inquired at several places in the vicinity and learned that Clemson had been seen in the company of another man. A few miles north of Riverside all trace was lost and Gathe fears that his companion has met with foul play.

That good fortune is frequently forced upon men in spite of their own efforts, says the Cheyenne Sun, is proven in the case of two Union Pacific firemen who wanted to strike but could not. They were the two youngest men on the regular list, and when the strike was declared they found themselves laid up at Ogden and the other at Missouri. No opportunity was offered either to refuse to go out, and even curses for luck that he could not get a chance to strike. Both finally arrived in Salt Lake, and, finding the strike over, reported for duty and was promptly put on the boiler list. The strike in which they were so anxious to participate and which had they been able to do so they would which have lost them everything, was the means of placing these two men next in the line of promotion as engineers.

Working Breeding Mares.

There are thousands of farmers who keep teams of mares for the purpose of raising one or two colts every year, but who not cannot dispense with the labor these mares are able to perform after they have recovered from the effects of foaling. We have often worked such mares in the field or on the road after the colt is 3 or 4 weeks old. It is only necessary to confine the colt so that it will not be in the way while the dam is working, and be somewhat careful not to overwork the mare, making her walk but not trotting. Some mares are so much milk that it is best to take them off the plow or harrow during the middle of the forenoon or afternoon. Otherwise they will work with great difficulty, and the work will be injurious to the colt. When the dam has to be gone all day, she should be milked at noon. A still better way is to bring the colt early and have it travel alongside the team. We have seen this done with colts not 6 weeks old, and when this managed the foaling mare is seen anxious to do so much work as if she were not rearing a colt.—American Cultivator.
