A Denver Watchmaker Horribly Burned Through an Explosion.

IN WYOMING MILITARY CIRCLES.

Women on School Boards in Colorado.—The Early Conspiracy in Idaho.—Fearful Death of a Boy.

There is a movement all along the line in Colorado to give women a place on school boards. The canvass is said to be lively in Aspen, with an accomplished lady well in the lead.

It is understood that the eastern glass manufacturers, who are thinking of locating at Laramie, Wyoming, have been at Omaha and have secured satisfactory rates from the Union Pacific company for the product which they intend to manufacture at Laramie.

H. B. Early, under arrest for conspiracy to defraud, has had a preliminary examination at Boise City, Idaho. Testimony showed that the concern bought goods in Denver, Kansas City, New York and other Eastern points, shipped them to Boise and then reshipped them to California in order to throw creditors off the track. It is thought they have already made about $20,000 out of the scheme, and were prepared to carry on operations on a larger scale.

Cheyenne Leader: Mrs. S. M. Pollard of this city has just completed, after two years' work, a most beautiful knitted bed spread for the World's Fair. It is a half from Santiago's white linen thread No. 60, and is composed of twelve different patterns. It has taken seventy spools, or 14,000 yards of thread, is 1,100 stitches in width, 1,363 rows in length. The entire number of stitches taken is 1,012,928. It is lined with old rose Chinese silk and light blue quilted satin.

Records of the Colorado state land office show that there are 30,000 acres of land in Arapahoe county which are not under lease at the present time. Register Childs is preparing a statement of vacant land in each township, which is to be conspicuously posted in order to attract bids for the lease of the land at the minimum price of 5 cents per acre. The tracts are usually in blocks of a mile square. A large part of the unoccupied territory consists of dreary wastes of sand.

The supreme court of Wyoming has handed down a decision affirming the constitutionality of the act passed by the last legislature creating the Fourth judicial district of Wyoming. The appointment of Judge Corn by Governor Osborne, which was also attacked in the proceedings, was likewise sustained. The court was unanimous in the decision. This clears up the tangled muddle in the judicial affairs of the northern counties embraced in that circuit. Judge Mein has already held court in Weston county and decided some important cases, civil and criminal.

A day or two ago the seven-year-old son of Richard Robinson, who lives about six miles down the valley from Boise city, Idaho, was dragged to death by a horse. Young Robinson was leading the animal to water. He had the rope wrapped tightly around his right hand. The horse became frightened and dashed off at a furious rate, the unfortunate lad being dragged along behind. The horse sped over the sage brush, kicking the poor lad at almost every jump. When the rope finally gave way he was mangled terribly. His head was crushed and there was scarcely an unbroken bone in his body. A physician was summoned, but the little sufferer passed away in a short time after the accident.

A new excitement was started the other morning in the Pueblo end of the Frank E. Tyler failure when a trust deed was filed with the clerk and recorder, a few minutes after the office opened, conveying a large quantity of real estate in various parts of the country to Mrs. Emma McLean, wife of the late Benjamin McLean, to secure $30,000 due her. The deed was executed in Kansas City last Friday by Frank E. Tyler. The surprising feature was that the deed describes several valuable places of realty in Pueblo county which had not been found by any of the attaching creditors, while the property they did find has been covered with attachments amounting to about three times its cash value. The oversight is attributed to the fact that but very little was known here of the members of the firm.

Military circles in Colorado are said to be greatly wrought up over the strange actions of Governor Waite. It is claimed that the governor has set all the rules of military etiquette at defiance. By some it is claimed, however, that he erts through ignorance of the regulations accepted by military men and not through perversion. Two instances are cited in which it is claimed the usages were set aside. About two weeks ago the governor and a number of members of his staff paid an official visit to Fort Logan upon invitation of Colonel Merriam, to be present at a battalion review. The governor's staff appeared in citizen's attire. Last Saturday night the governor left for Ogden, accompanied by eight or ten members of his staff in full regimentals. The office are unkind enough to intimate that the aides de camp wore their trappings on the wrong occasion and that the presence of a governor's staff in uniform at an interstate convention is an inexcusable breach of etiquette.—Denver News.

The following jottings are taken from the Richfield Advocate: Mrs. Judge Kenney had the misfortune to have one of her wrists badly dislocated by the horse starting and throwing her violently to the ground while she was getting out of her buggy. The accident will disable her for some time to come. Little Ike Bean was bringing his sister Chloe, Mrs. Ira Bean and Miss Bertha Halliday from Salina, when the tongue broke from the buggy near Willow Bend, and jerking loose from their driver, the horses dashed off toward Sigard at a terrific rate, kicking violently. The occupants of the vehicle were picked up by the Bench stage and the horses were caught at Vermon. No one was hurt. Five onyx claims have just been located within a mile and a half of Salina, by H. E. Ball, D. Allthrop and N. Hartline. Onyx is a stone consisting of numerous and peculiar layers of different colors and of great value. The boys think they have "struck it rich." Two stage lines are in active operation between Salina and Richfield, and such a war of rates has arisen on that passengers have sometimes been hauled for twenty-five cents. The court house just erected in this city is a magnificent building. The dimensions are 50 feet wide by 60 long and 40 feet to the top of the dome. It contains 270,000 brick and is beautifully decorated with iron, stone and wood work. The walls are painted a light yellow color, jointed with black and presents a beautiful appearance. Work on the inside is progressing rapidly and the building is to be finished by the 1st of June.

George Delcourt, a watchmaker living in Larimer street, Denver, is another victim of the cocaine craze. While preparing his morning meal, the magazine containing the genuine article suddenly exploded and sent flames in every direction. Delcourt was enveloped in the fiery flame and turned white as well over his eyes, even in the mouth. His light clothing was all ablaze instantly, the poor fellow rushed into the front room and fell on the floor in the greatest agony. His clothing was still on fire, and with the greatest effort he got on his feet again and ran out of his store and across the street to Fleming & Mendelson's clothing store, where he almost crumbled to ask for assistance. He presented a pitiable sight to behold. Dr. Bullard was what he could to alleviate the poor fellow's sufferings. In removing the clothing, the flesh underneath peeled off in great strips. His hands were burned almost to the bone, and his face was so charred and mutilated that he will lose his eyesight forever. His chest and even his legs were horribly scorched, and his injuries may prove fatal. After the cops shot the flames spread rapidly and soon reached a Kingston cigar box of cocaine. The alarm sounded, with such horror that it knocked away the wooden partition separating Delcourt's place from the print establishment of Foreman & Beasley. The store room was soon a mass of flames, and when the firemen arrived they had a big task on their hands. In a few minutes of hard fighting, however, the flames were smothered. Foreman & Beasley's stock is a complete loss. The Erie valued his stock at $500. It was partially insured. The jewelry and millinery stock in Delcourt's establishment, amounting to $2000, is a total loss. The wife of this injured man is in Paris. Fortunately the children, aged seven and eight years, were at school when the sad news took place. They will be taken care of by neighbors until their mother's return home.

The British ship Hyderabad (Captain D. F. R. Stoat) arrived on Monday at San Francisco, from Swansea, via the Falkland Islands, with a cargo of coal, after an eventful voyage of 272 days. The ship was nearly wrecked in a terrific storm and thrown on her beam ends. When the gale abated the ship, with cargo shifted and leaking, put into the Falkland Islands for repairs and sailed again January 25th. Head winds and calms delayed the ship reaching here after leaving the Islands. Captain Scott had his two daughters, who are accomplished young ladies with him, and officers and crew of the vessel give them great praise for their courage during the heavy hurricane, and their services in having a cup of coffee always hot for the crew during the most trying times and being always ready to cry an encouraging word. The captain, in a lengthy report of the trip, gives no details. He says that the Hyderabad left Swansea on July 6, 1892. It was not until September 8th, when near C[illegible], that heavy weather was experienced, and then it was that a terrific gale was encountered which lasted a week. The decks were swept with water, sea after sea breaking high over the vessel. Skylights were smashed in, the cabins flooded, everything on deck was awash, and stanchions were smashed to splinters. The galley and deckhouses were gutted. The crew worked up their waist to water. The ship began labouring heavily and the top gallant sails were blown from the foot ropes. A cross, mountainous sea struck the ship, throwing her on her beam ends and causing the coal cargo to shift. When the vessel righted she had a heavy list to port. The bilge pumps about this time showed that the vessel had sprung a plate or two and was leaking sufficient to keep the pumps going all the time and adding more work for the nearly worn-out crew. When the heavy weather subsided the cargo was trimmed and the galley put in condition to prepare food in. A second gale, nearly equal to the first in strength, visited the vessel ten days later. The pumps were kept going day and night. The ship rode the gale out better than the first, owing probably to the absence of a high cross sea. After a consultation with his officers the captain decided to run for the Falkland Islands, which were reached on October 17th, and it took from then until January 25th to get the ship in condition to proceed on her voyage. The Hyderabad is a new vessel and is on her maiden trip. The vessel does not show the heavy usage she suffered on the voyage.
