THE LIGHTING ORDINANCE.

If the News were of the opinion that itself and the Mayor possessed all the knowledge and wisdom there is in the matter of electric light for the city streets, it might follow the Illustrious example that has been offered several times during the past week, and tell the Elders city councilmen what they must do to be saved from everlasting shivers. Of course, such a proceeding would presuppose that the aforesaid Elders councilmen, more than each yourself, do not know anything about the subject at all, and that they are both deaf to the suggestions and deaf to the Chosen of their constituents, with whom of whom they meet and mingle every day of their lives. It would presuppose that there are still visual or wooden, and that if it were not for one man, one citizen and one or three others, the city of Deseret would be likely to be imposed upon and plundered to the very quick. It would presuppose various other unmentionable things, and hence would be both an ungraciousness and a foolish proceeding.

The News therefore feels to express confidence that the Council tonight in passing upon the Mayor's veto of the lighting ordinance will bring to the subject all the wisdom and honesty its members possess and have been able to acquire. They ought to know that their people want more streets lighted much more than they want spasmodic, personal assaults with abusive and unworthy motives animating him of them who may have precipitated it. They ought to know that while $5.50 per lamp is a considerable sum—how much, perhaps, if compared with what some other cities pay and with what, under certain favorable conditions and now entering, this city would have to pay—it was paid without any marked protest or complaint of extortion during the time of the previous contract. They ought to know, and everybody else does know, that if the old contractors had been willing to supply the light at the same figure they could have had almost without the asking and certainly with great readiness on the part of the city, a new contract for any desirable or reasonable term. They ought to know, therefore, that the objection to the present contract, which secures the lights at the price named—the made and we may say the only objection, since all the others seem to have been dropped entirely—that the term of two years is too long, it ought to be but one year, is inconsistent and childish.

Assuming that they do know all these things and a great many besides that need not here be mentioned, the News has no other desire than to advise them to act in a dignified, courageous, sincere manner—in a word to remember their oaths of office and their duty to their constituents. It is a condition, not a theory, that they have to deal with; the hard fact of darkness, not the mistfilled will-o'-the-wisp enveloped in "file" and previous. They may not, doubtless will not, be able to solve the question exactly as they and all of us would wish it solved; but they can do the best that thing—accept the most favorable terms offered and close up the contract at once. The people have shown that they would willingly submit to inconvenience rather than be imposed upon by extortion; but this must not be construed as a desire to split hairs over a technicality or quibble like a miser over a farthing. They are patriotic but not pusillanimous; they are patient to the extent that patience is a virtue, but when imitated by official pique and obstinacy they are not a pack of dumb, helpless fools.

REGISTRATION AND ELECTION.

The News has received a request from Mr. H. F. Blaylock of North Ogden, to publish the registration and election laws passed by the late Legislature. In response we will have to say that the length of those laws precludes compliance with the request in the columns of this paper. From time to time, as occasion requires, we may give the salient points to the information of the public, while those who wish the law in extenso can obtain it in pamphlet form in our office. The statutes require the secretary of state to publish and distribute to election officers throughout the State copies of the laws pertaining to elections, and therefore this will be done in ample time for registration and the general elections thereunder.

Mr. Blaylock suggests that "school elections are to be held all over the state in July," as a reason why the registration and election laws should be published at once. As it is quite possible that many others have the idea that such laws affect the school elections referred to, it is well to know that this is not the case. No school election prior to September 1st is affected by the new registration law, the Legislature recognizing the injurious issues which would come from attempting to put it in operation too early; no registration is required for those elections. The work of registration, however, goes on in October, for the general elections. Applying the Australian ballot law, which is to be the election law of the State, at least sufficient to avoid legislation on the subject, does not affect the school elections referred to by our correspondent as not come under the new law, it would seem, to be preferable to defer the publication of detailed instructions on general election matters until after the others are disposed of, so there will be no confusion; and also that the publication may be at a time when the subject is more nearly uppermost in the people's minds because of their immediate nearness thereunto, as will be the case after the July school elections have been held.

IS THIS SATISFACTORY?

In language which a certain Blasted plus will understand, since it alludes familiarly to "Gulching" and "a knock below the belt," the Salt Lake Tribune waves Saline over yesterday's editorial in the News in the shameless companionship as to the Scandinavian church horse fighting up "by way of contrast, the jackass deals of the old pilgrimage days." Our contemporary asserts that the language used was not its own, but was taken from another paper and the credit was plainly given at the end of the article whose opening sentence we quoted. Upon examination, to which the eye is made to do the aesthetic service of keeping over a picture or two—and everyone knows what trying things the Tribune's pictures are—to say nothing of editorial rules, we find the assertion to be true; after its own long tirade of the horror, it reproduced a long article from a Rochester paper, and it is in the latter article that the vile and slanderous comparison is made.

To the extent, therefore, that our contemporary is entitled to an apology for being charged with the paternity of something which it did not write, but only adopted without any sign or mark of disapproval, we hereunto desire to apologize and would wish to make the plaster as big as the wound. Furthermore, when we note the style and language in which our attention is called to the error, we cannot but reiterate the profound conviction that whatever else the editor of the Tribune may or may not be, he is a polished, polite and capable gentleman.

THE NEWS SUBSCRIPTION PRICE.

Increased facilities and patronage are the important factors which enable a newspaper to reduce its subscription price from time to time, so that it can furnish the information it has to impart at the lowest possible price. The News feels that it is proper to follow this policy, and as its various editions have disappeared the rest to subscribers as circumstances allowed, without impairing in any way its efforts to eliminate everything of an ultra-sensational or unreliable character, and to give to readers the news of the day in compact form and language suited to the Christian home. This policy will still be followed in all directions; and while one method of virtually cheapening the cost of a daily paper is by publishing seven days a week instead of six, the News cannot consistently accept that method, since a Sunday issue would not be harmonious with our views in relation to what would be proper for an evening paper. Hence we have decided upon another course. Instead of publishing seven days a week, which would be virtually a reduction of about 14.28 per cent in subscription rates, the News leaves its subscription rates to the daily edition at $5.50 per year, or from $0.10 per year to $2.75. The change goes into effect from June 1, and we trust that it will prove equally satisfactory to our patrons and ourselves.

UTAH IN THE SENATE.

Although not yet six months old in statehood, Utah has figured to no inconsiderable way on several occasions in the national Congress, and the voice and vote of her representatives have made their weight felt. We have referred before to work done by Senators Brown and Cannon and Representative Allen in the way of influencing legislation, and also to speeches by Senator Cannon and Allen. Now Mr. Brown comes in with a strong speech in the Senate, on a question of national interest—the Dubois bill to prohibit the issue of bonds. Senator Brown spoke in a resolution which he offered, declaring that it the secretary of the treasury should issue bonds hereafter the same should be invalid. His argument occupied two hours of the Monday afternoon session, and then a portion of it was reserved for today, as the hour of adjournment came before he had finished. A Washington special to the Herald says of the Utah senator's effort:

> He received marked attention from senators on both sides of the chamber, and Senator Sherman was in attendance for one of the longest speeches made, and listened with the other members. The debate was postponed by Quay and Sherman until Mr. Brown should finish, Allison and Hill, Mr. Brown argued against both, and although this was his maiden speech, no one seemed to hold his attention more well than experienced legislators. Senator Brown showed great knowledge of the subject, which was considered by all to have been a very able one.

The Senator Brown was able to hold his own in the talk with such experienced legislators with so no surprise to people here, who are familiar with his services in legal matters especially. It is more than several months from other states have been able to do, so shown in the telegraphic report of the discussion as it has been handled during some days past. But Utah may be expected to hold up its end in any contest, it always has done so.

DID IT QUOTE THEM?

A perspicuous and possibly meaning contemporary has a readable article on "Presidential Conventions," which would be a more valuable contribution to newspaper literature if it were not so inaccurate in places. We notice it, not for the sake of finding fault, or giving superior information, but in order that our neighbor may be shown that it does sometimes make mistakes, that it occasionally falls into the pile of error which it seems to think are sacrée only for the feet of others.

The article referred to says the Democratic convention of the year in which Lincoln was renominated (1864), was stampeded to Greeley, although the intention was to put up Charles Francis Adams. The facts are that Greeley was nominated by the Democrats in 1872, at which time there was little if any thought of Adams. Nor was there any "stampede," such a thing being clearly out of the question in a body which merely carried out a previously arranged program; General, or rather President Grant was the nominee of the Republicans in that year. The Democrat who did run against Lincoln at the time spoken of was Gen. McClellan. This will do for the present, unless our contemporary referred to shall come out tomorrow and say it was quoting from some other paper.

A POLICEMAN'S PLUCK.

Everybody is willing to admit the courage of firemen who engage in the perilous task of fighting conflagrations in large cities; but it is not always so with respect to policemen, who are often made the butt of ridicule for their alleged inclination to place themselves at a safe distance from fights and burglaries. Notwithstanding the good-natured raillery at policemen, one which may have some excuse in the case of individual instances, there comes occasionally a notable instance that proves the high order of courage possessed by some members of the force. A case of this kind occurred in New York on Thursday last. A bonding house was discovered to be on fire, and a young policeman, Wm. Carlin, who was satisfied, made for the house at once. He kicked in the door only to be met with a blast of fire that shot down from above, following the draught. That way there was no entering. With quick decision Carlin ran up through the house next door to the roof and crossed over. Hurried upon the scuttle, smoke came up in volumes so that to get down was impossible. The policeman slammed it on again to stop the draught, and stood at bay. Just then he heard a cry from below, and looking over the edge of the roof saw a fireman at the top floor window with a scared man in his arms. The fireman was almost exhausted, and was not equal to the task of carrying the man who hung, limp and inanimate, a dead weight upon his arms. Policeman Carlin saw it and was down off the roof in a jiffy. In a moment his face appeared at the window as a level with that at which the fireman stood in the next building. A policeman and a citizen who saw what he was about to do ran up to help him. A stretch of five feet with no footing whatever separated the two windows. Carlin reached out of it as far as he could, standing on the window sill with his body pianging free over the sidewalk, while his comrade and the citizen gripped his hand in the room inside, anchoring him fast to the wall. He he was able to almost reach the fireman. The latter, on his side, took a firm grip on the window frame and, holding the limp form over the street, let Carlin get a grasp on it. Then so, with a mighty effort, he drew himself slowly back with his burden, helped steady it until he disappeared with it through the window, and fell back, panting and exhausted, into the arms of his two helpers. His coolness and courage had saved two lives.

A Remarkable Case of Rheumatism.

WATERVILLE, Cal., March 21, 1894.

Some time ago, on awakening one morning, I found that I had rheumatism in my knee so badly that, as I remarked to my wife, it would be impossible for me to attempt to dress that day. Remembering that I had some of Chamberlain's Pain Balm in my store, I sent for a bottle, and rubbed the affected parts thoroughly with it, according to directions, and within an hour I was completely relieved. The application had cured the rheumatism. It is the best liniment on the market, and I feel it my duty to guarantee it. H. T. HAMLIN. For sale by druggists.

Having used Chamberlain's Cough Remedy in my family and found it to be a first class article, I take pleasure in recommending it to my friends. J. V. FORTUNE, Winfield, Cal. For sale by druggists.

Some time ago I was taken sick with a cramp in the stomach, followed by diarrhoea. I took a couple of doses of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, and was immediately relieved. I consider it the best medicine in the market for all such complaints. I have sold the remedy to others and every one who uses it speaks highly of it. J. W. STEVENSON, Valley Center, Cal. For sale by druggists.

On account of extreme rainy weather of customers to our Companion Sale today (Tuesday) and to allow the necessary time to sell more bargain attractions, our doors will not open until 9 o'clock tomorrow morning.
