JUDGE ANDERSON.

A Grand Reception Given in His Honor Last Night,

AT THE KNUTSFORD HOTEL.

By Members of the Bar and Citizens of Salt Lake.—The Speeches.—What the Judge Has Said.

Judge T. J. Anderson, of this city, who about a month ago tendered his resignation to the attorney-general, must have felt proud of the magnificent reception accorded him at the Knutsford hotel last night by upwards of a hundred members of the bar and citizens of Salt Lake. It was after ten o'clock when the company assembled, considerable delay having been occasioned by the Democratic parade and subsequent proceedings in the Theatre. Musical selections were given, and during this time there was a general handshaking and an indulgence in social intercourse as a preliminary to the banquet.

On Oct. 24th, the members of the Salt Lake bar issued the following:

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah, Oct. 24, 1892.

We, the members of Salt Lake, and particularly the Salt Lake bar, learn through the press, with sorrow, of the resignation of the Hon. T. J. Anderson, territorial supreme judge. Through the past years of the honorable gentleman's citizenship with us, and especially his labor in his office as judge, he has endeared himself to us by his professional and gentlemanly integrity, and wishing to show our high appreciation of his services, we offer him a hearty greeting upon his return to our city.

The signers of this were Governor West, Messrs. R. C. Chambers, F. S. Richards, A. G. Norrell, Arthur Brown and W. H. Dickson as a committee of arrangements.

Among the fifty odd guests at the banquet, which began shortly before 11 o'clock, were Judge Anderson, Judge Henderson, Judge Bennett, ex-Governor West, Judge Judd, Arthur Brown, LeGrand Young, John M. Cannon, R. Ferguson, R. C. Chambers, Frank Pierce, H. C. Lett, W. C. Hall, A. T. Schroeder, E. B. Jones, E. D. Hoge, Jos. Parson, A. G. Norrell, Col. John Terrell, E. H. Parsons, E. A. Smith, F. S. Richards, C. C. Richards, Col. M. M. Kaighn, Jas. H. Anderson, S. P. Armstrong, H. Hunter, F. B. Stephens, S. W. Darke, John M. Zane, R. W. Young, Wm. Burke, Charles Baldwin, F. C. Gregg, C. H. Jack, Chas. C. Dey, R. W. Mabee, I. M. Waddell, Geo. Adkin, C. O. Whittemore, A. Howatt, W. H. King, J. E. Doily, M. S. Hanna, M. M. Neisen, J. J. Rogers, John D. Anderson, J. H. Moyle and Brown Green.

The menu was a welcome one, and the arrangements were simply perfect.

Arthur Brown was the toastmaster of the evening, and it was close upon 1 o'clock this morning when the "speechifying" began.

Mr. Brown mentioned that Judge Anderson had been in Salt Lake for four years, and that his straightforward fulfillment of his duties did him honor. He desired to express his opinion in commendation of the ability of Judge T. J. Anderson as a lawyer of great learning and attainments, as a judge of the highest ability and integrity, and equally or even more strongly did he desire to record his condemnation of an administration that would accept the statement of a union financier as a cause for removal of a member of the judiciary, who gave such statements merely to gratify personal pique at the loss of a lawsuit. There was not a man but who believed in the integrity and honesty and unimpeachable standing of the man in whose honor this banquet was given. Mr. Brown condemned the action of a government which, he said, would remove a member of the judiciary upon ex parte statements founded solely upon personal feeling.

Judge Anderson, on rising to reply, spoke with much emotion. He said that the greatest honor a man could hope for was the honorable esteem of his fellowmen. One of the greatest pleasures was that of a lawyer, and in honoring him as they had the members of the local bar had paid him the highest compliment that the greatest of professional men could pay. His whole effort had been, during his term of office, to earn the good opinion of his allowmen and his co-laborers in the profession to which he himself belonged.

Judge Henderson responded to the toast of "The Judiciary." He said he did not know why the honorable gentleman, in whose presence they were regarded, had been called upon to retire, but he did know that he was a just judge and an honest man. He believed that the cause was to serve another rather than a just purpose; that a man who had lost litigation before Judge Anderson had made the charges against him at Washington. He then spoke of the great injustice that had been done the Judge at Washington by the authorities there listening and passing judgment without an investigation. He claimed that the government had been derelict in its duty in not sifting the accusation thoroughly and arriving at a definite understanding of the case.

"The Bar" was responded to by Colonel M. M. Kaighn. "Our Territory," by ex-Governor West. "Our Banks, the Soundest in the Country," by J. E. Doily. "The Ladies and the Babies," by W. H. King. "The Great West," by A. T. Schroeder. "Iowa, the Home of Judge Anderson," by C. P. Loofbourow.

"Our Country" was drunk, amid cheers, by all upstanding, and shortly afterward the gathering broke up.

THIRD DISTRICT COURT.

The Morning's Work in Judge Zane's Sanctum.—A Suit against the City Collector, Etc.

In the Third district court this morning the suit of Hoffman & Richards, of Denver, Colorado, investment brokers, vs. Edwin Doust, et al., was again called up from yesterday. The action was brought upon an indemnity bond and the sum of $1779 was demanded. Doust and J. H. Martin, contractors, it appeared, agreed to erect on Eleventh East street three houses for the plaintiffs, and gave them a bond signed by A. J. Houghton and E. F. Blodgett. Doust and Martin failed to complete and Hoffman and Richards finished the buildings, paying out $1,779 over the contract price. Neither of the contractors answered yesterday in court and a default was entered against them. Houghton and Blodgett set up that the bond was invalid by reason of their having signed only with the distinct understanding that one other party would also sign. When the case was called today plaintiffs were allowed a nonsuit as to the defendants, without prejudice, and judgment having been entered against the defendant J. H. Martin, on default, for $101.10, the jury were discharged.

SHORT ORDERS.

The case of Verona Schaum et al. vs. Utah Lodge No. 1, et al., was dismissed on motion of the plaintiff.

In the divorce suit of Minnie Berryman vs. S. H. Berryman, the order to show cause in contempt, for failure to pay alimony, was dismissed.

Ferdinand Dechert vs. John Beck. This case was dismissed by consent—no costs to be taxed.

In the divorce proceedings Maggie Smith vs. Charles Smith, leave was granted to file a supplemental complaint.

Sears, Jenney & Co. vs. the Workingmen's Coop. Institution. Referred to H. J. Denhalter to take testimony in the proceedings supplementary to execution.

In the case of John A. James vs. James Gordon, in consequence of the death of the defendant, the names of Jas. Wm. and Peter Gordon, executors, were substituted as defendants.

ALLEGED UNLAWFUL CONVERSION.

The trial of the case of George Work vs. E. H. Parsons was then taken up, Attorneys S. H. Lewis and Ira Kinde appearing for the plaintiff and Powers & Hiles for the defendant. The sum claimed is in the neighborhood of $[illegible], and the action is brought on the ground of the alleged unlawful conversion of a horse and buggy.

MORE JURORS WANTED.

A venire was issued for six petit jurors, returnable on Monday next, at 10 a. m.

SUITS FILED TODAY.

William Burke commenced proceedings in the Third district court this morning against Fred Till and E. J. Fox, the object being to recover [illegible] (and interest) on a promissory note.

In the same court today Mrs. Mary E. Waring filed a complaint, praying for an order that Collector and Assessor Leonard be restrained from collecting the city tax levied on $1000 which plaintiff had invested in a real estate mortgage. Mrs. Waring's case had been under the notice of the City Council for some time past, but they held that inasmuch as the lady did not present her complaint during the period that the Council sat as a board of equalization they can now take no action in the matter.

SUPREME COURT.

The Territorial Supreme court will convene at ten o'clock tomorrow morning, and it is almost certain that Chief Justice Zane will render the opinion of the court in the Church cases. This will be the principal feature of the session, which will be of one day's duration only.

U. S. MARSHAL BENTON.

It is pretty certain that Marshal Parsons' successor (Mr. I. A. Benton) will enter upon the duties of his office within the next ten or twelve days. It is not yet known what changes will be made on the deputy marshals' staff, but this much is now a fact—that Clerk Dan Swenn and Deputy Marshal Rosean Cannon will continue with the new marshal. Both are excellent officers, and it will be admitted that Mr. Benton has acted wisely in retaining their services.

World's Fair Notes.

A meeting of the directory of the woman's department of the World's Fair for this county was held yesterday at the Templeton Hotel in the Union Club rooms, at which Mrs. Emily S. Richards, Territorial President, who recently returned from Chicago, was present, also Miss May Preston, secretary of Utah Ladies' Commission. Considerable business was transacted and methods of work discussed in the interest of the association and committees were named and filed preparatory to undertaking more active measures in all departments of work.

A resolution was passed expressing the thanks and gratitude of the board of directors to all those who so kindly assisted and contributed towards making the mass meeting recently held in the theater in this city a complete success. In mentioning those who were generous in this respect, Prof. H. S. Krouse should be foremost, also with the Juvenile band and their leader, H. C. Barrell, not forgetting the excellent singers who added so greatly to the entertainment of the whole, Mr. Grant Hampton, Miss Jennie Hawley and Mrs. Agnes Olsen Thomas; then the loan of the piano from Calder's Music Palace should not be forgotten. Last but not least thanks are due to the ladies who so kindly came forward and spoke upon the platform to help the good cause along.

OUR NEW POSTMASTER.

Mr. Albert H. Nash Receives an Official Notification of His Appointment.

An Associated Press dispatch from Washington, dated November 10th, announced the appointment of Mr. Albert H. Nash as postmaster of this city, in succession to Mr. Irvine A. Benton, who will be the new U. S. marshal. This morning Mr. Nash received an official intimation of his appointment, by wire from Washington, and he expects the necessary papers to arrive within the next few days. After filing his bond he will enter upon his duties almost immediately.

Postmaster Nash has been kept quite busy all day receiving the congratulations of his numerous friends, with whom, as well as among the postoffice employes, he is exceedingly popular. Mr. Nash came to Salt Lake from Deseret about four years ago, he being an old railroader, and had charge of the railroad post in this city for some two years, until its abolition by the Interstate Commerce Commission. He went into the postoffice two years ago last July with Postmaster Benton, and from that time on has been that gentleman's faithful deputy. His application for the position to which he has just been elevated was endorsed by many of the leading citizens of Salt Lake.

IN POLITICAL CIRCLES.

What Local Politics and Partisans are Doing.

A little quietude is now recommended for the perturbed political soul.

* * *

There were more people on the streets last night than at any time since Conference.

* * *

The broom-carriers in last night's procession set their brooms on fire and thus contributed something more of the lurid to the scene.

* * *

The dispatches today stating among other things that the electoral vote of Ohio is likely to be divided, will create no little interest. Such an event is very rare indeed.

* * *

Some of our citizens tried their luck with the scheme of the World, of New York, which, during the latter part of the campaign, published blanks convenient for filling up for its readers to make guesses upon regarding the result of the election; the one who guessed exactly how the electoral vote of the nation, by states, went was to be rewarded with a check for $100. Without being informed on the subject, there is some cause for the assertion that the check will never be drawn. This is no reflection on the World.

Ben E. Rich, in the Ogden Standard, hopes the Democrats will put all their professions and promises into practice, now that they have the chance, and see whether the country profits or loses thereby. He then calls attention to the circumstance that within twelve months the Republicans have knocked off 4,000 from the Democratic plurality of last year and says that in the next twelve months "we will take the rest. You will then know," he continues, "for the first time in your lives what it is to paint a town red." Defeat don't seem to weigh heavily upon Ben.

Ogden Occurrences.

In Judge Miner's court yesterday a jury was empaneled in the case of the Cudahay Packing company vs. W. T. Hascall et al., brought on an account of $1,[illegible]. After two witnesses for the plaintiff had been examined the defendants confessed the judgment in the sum of $121, and the court instructed the jury to render a verdict in accordance therewith.

The hearing of the damage suit of Wm. Driver & Son vs. Thomas J. Stayer occupied the greater part of the day and was not concluded last evening. The plaintiffs ask for $2,000 damages, alleged to have been caused to the Driver building on Washington avenue, in July, 1892, by reason of the defendant not using the necessary precautionary methods when constructing his new building which adjoins the Driver property, whereby the walls of the plaintiffs' building were cracked and made to bow out.

Traffic Manager Richard Gray and General Passenger Agent Goodman, of the Southern Pacific, arrived in Ogden yesterday in the Southern Pacific directors' car and went east over the Union Pacific at 8 o'clock. They are on their way to Chicago to attend the meeting of the Transcontinental association, called for the 15th inst.

The Sound heating and ventilating system in the newly completed school building at Five Points was tested yesterday and found to be in splendid condition and doing its work to perfection. In addition to the heating and ventilating apparatus the building has a dry closet system by which all excreta is desiccated and dried without removal from the vaults.

There Are More of Them, Too.

There is at least one person who was on the stage of the Salt Lake Theater last evening who did not take kindly to all that was said by the speakers nor to some of the inscriptions on the banners; and while Judge Norrell was speaking he arose and withdrew. Being questioned as to the cause of it, he replied: "This may be a Democratic gathering, but if it is, I am out of place altogether. I consider myself a pioneer in the division movement here, have done my share of the campaigning without compensation, credit, or complaint; have marched in the processions and voted the ticket straight, and really thought myself something of a Democrat at Democratic gatherings. Certainly no one rejoiced more than I over the election of Cleveland and the success of the party generally. But if Democracy means insulting an honorable family and the Church to which it belongs, and making contemptible flings at a defeated candidate on the other side, I must have been mistaken." The name of the person who withdrew is S. A. Kenner.

ONE WHO WAS THERE.

Home from Paris.

Mr. J. B. Fairbanks, Payson's promising artist, gave the NEWS a pleasant call this afternoon. He returned from Paris a couple of months ago, where he has spent about two years in the Julian academy, under the tuition of the distinguished professors, among whom are Constant, Jules La Fevre, Jean Paul Laurens and Rigolot. Mr. Fairbanks has devoted himself largely to landscape painting and was much complimented by the professor of the academy for the success he has achieved. He will be engaged on work in the Salt Lake Temple as soon as the structure is ready to receive the decorations, the designs of which are now being made.

A SHARK IN THE SURF

A PEARL BUYER IS TOSSED INTO THE SEA AS FOOD FOR IT.

A Traveler Tells a Story of What He Saw One Day in the Harbor of Madras—The Dapper Young Buyer and the Rascally Parsee Merchant.

A wild sea was running high in the open harbor of Madras. The sea always runs high there, and in the last two miles must always be made in surf boats. The morning when the steamship [illegible] dropped anchor and ran up her signal for the boats, great angry waves were breaking [illegible] before a fresh monsoon, and even the surfboats found it hard to keep dry.

Among our passengers from Ceylon for Madras we had a dapper young fellow, who was as good a judge of pearls as I ever saw. He had been in Ceylon buying for an Amsterdam house, and was on his way to the Persian gulf to complete his stock. He was to leave at Madras to go overland to Bombay.

He knew how to buy pearls, but he did not know how to take care of them. He knew he had been on board a day before he told me all about his luck in Ceylon and had shown me his entire assortment. One of the pearls was simply gorgeous. Had it not been for a faint fleck of blue upon one side it would have been worth a small fortune. He was delighted with my appreciation and enjoyment of the stones, and he showed me his treasures several times during the short voyage. Twice he left me alone with them. It was not, however, through any particular confidence in me, for I suspect he made quite as free with his treasures among several of the passengers. One was a Parsee, who was forever going between Ceylon and Madras, for what purpose I could never discover, though I had met him several times.

Whatever else he was I was sure that the Parsee was a great rascal, and was surprised and sorry for the young pearl man to find him making a good intimate friend of the fellow.

Together they stepped down the ladder to enter a surfboat as we neared Madras. The young man went down first with his case of precious pearls in his hand. The Parsee was stepping into the boat when he paused and spoke to the black captain.

"I have forgotten something," he said, turning to the younger man. "I must come in another boat; I will meet you at the hotel."

He gave the surfboat a push with his foot and began to climb the ladder.

A sailor who was standing by me muttered:

"There's a shark in the surf yonder." But instead of looking away over the water he looked directly down upon the Parsee and then at the young pearl man.

Of course there was a shark in the surf. There are always sharks in that surf, but to me the sailor's sentence meant something more than fact.

The Parsee simply waited behind the railing. [illegible] stood there [illegible] in those minutes, then left the steamer by another boat. My curiosity was thoroughly aroused. Close at hand I watched the two boats, a quarter of a mile apart, still wondering what the sailor meant by "a shark in the surf."

Presently one of the great waves lifted the first surfboat, but instead of taking the usual advantage of it to dip their oars and pull I distinctly noticed the boatmen sitting like statues. The almost naked fellow standing in the stern, with a long oar to guide the craft, suddenly leaned upon the oar, and the boat turned, was caught broadside on the wave and the next instant was capsized. I saw the passenger, with the pearl case still in hand, plunge head first into the water.

Like so many eels the black boatmen wriggled about in the water till they righted their boat, then clambered over the side and began to bail it out.

Not one of them seemed to give a thought to their passenger.

The next moment a piercing shriek sounded even as far as the steamer, and in my horror I saw the young fellow's body lifted out of the water not ten feet from the surfboat. It made one whirl in the air, disclosing the head of a shark holding it across the back, then sank again.

As the next boat passed the place I saw the Parsee throw something overboard that left a white spot on the water, which remained as long as I watched it, convincing me that it was a lump of some sort of fat for some purpose.

A few days later we were anchored in the Hoogly river, off Calcutta.

I was walking down the principal English thoroughfare when I saw the Parsee emerge from the door of a lapidary. He evidently recognized me, but he turned quickly in the opposite direction and walked away.

"A shark in the surf," I muttered, and with only a vague idea half formed in my mind I entered the shop and inquired of the dealer if he had an assortment of pearls on hand.

"How fortunate!" he exclaimed. "I was never in less of this mind. Pearls are in rare great demand. But I have just purchased a large lot of the finest pearls I ever saw. I purchased them very low for cash, and I cannot only give you the first choice of this magnificent collection, but a great bargain besides. They are beauties! Yes!"

"Yes," I replied, "they are beauties—especially this one with a dot of blue upon one side. You had that it has the [illegible]."

I knew then why the Parsee went down to the surfboat and spoke to the captain, but went ashore by another boat. I knew why he left the white lump in the water. I knew why he continually journeyed between Ceylon and Madras, and I knew what the sailor meant when he watched him and muttered:

"There's a shark in the surf."
