JESSE ANDERSON has parts of three houses on lots in his pen. According to Honor-pen theory with the city of Harvey vs. Harvey it is sure likely that he will be called upon to bear several other others in the same line.

THE death is announced of Mr. George Hoehn, proprietor of the Wasatch Four mills, who for more than a year has been in a hopeless condition from a wound near the temple of the brain. The deceased was well known in this Territory.

A "SCRAMBLE COUPLER" attached to the Harvey divorce suit, the trial of which has held a firm grip on Judge Anderson's time for the last two days. It is what would be generally termed an "uncovering" case, but it is a sad story after all.

THE Jefferson Brown Corps elected the following officers last night: President, James Moffit; vice-president, W. Vinal; secretary, Frank Hopkins; engineer, Wm. Jones; guard, Wm. Hyde. It was resolved to elect a drum major and other officers at the next meeting. The committee on organization reported that Gilbert's Park would be the best place to hold an outing for the benefit of their uniform fund, and August 5th was set as the date.

Relating to Church Schools.

A series of meetings of the church school teachers attending the normal summer school at Provo, will be held at Provo, commencing Monday, August 8th, to consider the subject of school management and organization. Also a supplementary examination of candidates for the primary and intermediate grades—under the usual regulations in the church school organization—will be held at Provo, commencing Tuesday, August 9th, at 10 a.m.

THE HARVEY DIVORCE CASE.

Medical Testimony Bearing on the Question of An Inherited Craving for Intoxicants.

The Harvey divorce suit came up again for hearing in the Third District court this morning, before Judge Anderson.

Mr. James Gillespie, real estate agent, was called to testify as to the value of the plaintiff's property. Then came the medical evidence, which consumed nearly the remainder of the time till the noon recess.

Dr. Arthur I. Graves, physician in charge of the Reeby Institute, testified, said he had made a special study of the liquor habit, which he might, so he thought, be inherited. In his opinion it was as much a disease as any other.

Judge Powers asked—Supposing a woman, prior to the birth of her child, had a longing or craving for alcoholic stimulants which could not be satisfied, would it be likely or probable that the child would be affected with the liquor habit?

Witness—It would be more than probable.

Dr. Groves was cross-examined at some length by Mr. Dickson with the object of showing the effects of parental drinking, moderately or in excess, upon the child. In his opinion he would call a man who drank, even once a month only, a "moderate" drinker. Both abstinence and dipsomania could be either inherited or acquired. In the case of a man who took a glass of wine before meals, it might or might not show up in his offspring in the form of hereditary dipsomania. A stomach was progressive until it became chronic—the outer intervals became shorter and shorter.

Dr. S. B. Faust, who had also made insane and nervous diseases a special study, and dipsomania was a species of insanity, which was excessive use of alcoholic liquor might produce. Where a person came of a nervous family, and possessed a nervous temperament, the use of alcoholic liquors would naturally go to increase the tendency to insanity. The appetite for alcohol might be inherited, and was generally more strong in a person of nervous temperament. A woman's mind was not infrequently affected at a certain advanced period of her life. Mr. Dickson interrogated the witness on the theory of "inherited alcoholism," and Dr. Foster was then called. He has had considerable experience with insane and nervous patients, and corroborated Dr. Faust in the more important points of his testimony.

IN A SAD PLIGHT.

A City Prisoner Who Should Be Sent to the Hospital Without Delay.

A young man named James Brown was recently arrested by the police on a charge of vagrancy. Yesterday he was convicted in Justice Keeler's court and sent to the city jail for twenty days. He was suffering severely from a blistered, swollen and badly inflamed arm. He said the member was accidentally burned while he was working at the Mingo smelter some time ago and for lack of proper treatment it had gotten into a bad condition.

Today he received the following note with the wound (left) hand while confined in the city jail:

Dr. Jesse Keeler:

Sir—I, James Brown, do hereby beseech you to liberate me that I may get treatment for my arm or that I may get some nourishment, for I am desired to be sick. Your honor, I assure, on account of pain in my arm, and also because of starving condition. I hope your honor will take my case into consideration and suspend sentence upon my so doing, either send me to the hospital or let me go and I will leave town right away.

Yours truly,
JAMES BROWN,
City Prisoner.

The prisoner's request has not yet been granted and may not be. The police say that he is a bad character, though quite young, and that his record has been preferred against him, and he avers that under the law he is not guilty of that offense, as a person physically incapacitated for work cannot be convicted of vagrancy. Whether guilty or not humanity demands that the prisoner be given proper care. He is now in an extremely dangerous condition and in a fair way to lose his arm. The city employes physician at a salary of $100 per year is retained to tide cases of cases, this case should not be neglected.

FIGHTING PHYSICIANS.

Dr. Ernst Assaults a Brother Practitioner and is Arrested and Fined.

DR. H. V. Ernst, proprietor of a fresh mission, on Second South between Main and State streets, and Dr. S. P. Newton, who has an office near by, were tried in Justice Keeler's court today on a charge of disturbing the peace.

According to the testimony it seems that Dr. Newton was standing at the bottom of the stairway which leads to his office, yesterday afternoon, when he was accosted by the exhibitor of all the frightful freaks he has been able to collect and told to get out of the way and not stand there and make a "fool show of himself," and prevent people from going in and out of the building. The question was mooted with a volley of words and finally quiet was restored and both the doctors went their way.

Between 9 and 10 o'clock last night, however, these two disciples of Esculapius met at the same point and rehearsed substantially the same scene as that in which they acted a principal an earlier in the day. It had a more serious termination, however. Ernst, it is claimed, spat at and struck opposed and then invited him into his exhibit hall, where he proceeded to give him a sound thrashing. Dr. Newton was overmatched and drew a whistle from his pocket and blew several blasts. Capt. Donovan responded to three calls for help and placed both men under arrest and took them to police headquarters.

The investigation resulted in Newton being discharged. The unseemly man was fined $5.

SUITS FILED TODAY.

An Action For Damages for $1500 Lodged Against the Salt Lake City Council.

The following actions have been entered with Clerk McMillan of the Third District Court, today:

Aaron Keyser has sued James M. Kennedy and Wm. Burke to recover $1700, with interest at 1 per cent, per month, on a promissory note.

J. Hansen is the plaintiff and School District No. 1, Davis Co., Utah, Wm. Page, Caleb Baker, and Jens Jensen, trustees, the defendants, in a suit in which $1,500 is claimed for the furnishing of plans, etc., for the erection of a schoolhouse at Bountiful.

Mary Ann Pugh has petitioned the court to grant her a divorce from her husband, Edward Pugh, on the ground of desertion. The couple were married at Coloville, Pottawattamie Co., Iowa, in July, 1869, and plaintiff alleges that in October, 1872, her husband left her and has since remained away. She describes certain real estate which he is the owner, embracing in all sixty acres of land, says she is now in indigent circumstances, and asks for proper alimony.

John M. Cannon is her attorney.

L. Moth Tretzen has printed a suit against Salt Lake City Council, claiming $1500 as damages for failure to provide, as was its duty, suitable and adequate dishes along S street, from Second to Third, from 1 to 9, and elsewhere in the vicinity, to carry off the overflow water. He alleges that in consequence of this neglect his estate had been partially inundated, that articles of personal property valued at $1000 were wholly destroyed and the brick building itself was caused to crack and suffer other injury, so as to necessitate its partial rebuilding. This damage is estimated at $1500.

John M. Cannon is the plaintiff's attorney.

REGISTER YOUR DOGS.

Galleazzi Threatens War on All Car Conductors.—A Trespassing Chicken.—Other Cases.

Dog Tax Collector Galleazzi has caused the arrest of John A. Taylor for keeping an unregistered canine and threatens to prosecute him to the full extent of the law. The hearing was set for this afternoon before Justice Keeler. Galleazzi threatens to exterminate all the cur canines in the city.

John Cline is accused of the annoying though not very serious offense of allowing his chickens to trespass on a neighbor's premises. He, too, was to have a hearing this afternoon.

Jacob Carter plead not guilty to an assault and battery charge and was discharged.

James Donovan acknowledged getting drunk and was fined $5 and costs.

Louis Bamberger, arrested for driving faster than eight miles an hour in Liberty Park, was discharged, the testimony being of such a sort to clearly exonerate the court said there was no case.

Probate Court.

Orders made by Judge Hatch today:

James M. Hicks, deceased; order made fixing August 6 to hear petition for probate of will.

Estate of John Ross, deceased; order made fixing August 30 to show cause why sale of real estate should not take place.

MEN AND WOMEN.

THE DIFFERENCE BETWEEN THE SEXES —THE SWEET GLORY OF WOMANHOOD.

[Mrs. M. C. Tee Summer, in the Woman's Exponent.]

It is the coarse, superficial character of women which leads them to maintain that there is no difference between themselves and men, or that men's superior opportunities are better than their own, and which consequently makes them envy men and desire to step into their place. The really educated woman, the one whose mind really knows and understands, comprehend better than anyone else the true meaning and glory of womanhood, the true importance of its peculiar responsibility, the true dignity and charm of its peculiar privileges; for she alone is able to attest and appreciate these things and, moreover, she has learned that the growth of civilization implies a progressive specialization of capabilities and efficiency, and that the advancement of women has meant a steady departure from that primitive barbaric state where men and women were not more widely differentiated than are male and female animals today. If there chance to be in the man's right to the higher education, it is that of all that she may be fitted to do work which is cannot possibly do, and may help the world along in a way that is parallel, not identical, with his.

The natural man must have, in no shape, the companionship of woman, and so he will just because it is never precisely the same in flavor as comes from man. With other men he is normal and contrabs that even the love of a brother for his sister, of a son for his mother, lacks for his daughter, the element of sex. Hence or indeed outside his family who is the sincere and affectionate friend, should be hinged with a sentiment which does not exist in the case of his brother, his father, his son, or his masculine friend. This is normal and desirable, and, fortunately, quite inevitable. And the same thing arises in the contrary sense; they are true of the feelings which women have toward men.

But there is a vast difference between that kind of sentiment from which almost everything that has meant progress for the world has sprung, and that stronger kind of sentiment or that more full-blown kind of sentimentality which is dangerous and small noble. And when the minds of women be sound and sane, and when the sentiment they bear toward men be not either feeble or morbid, I think the fundamental, universal sentiment will persist and even develop, that the stronger sex will be better regulated, and that the more foolish kind will decrease. Married men, I am sure, will be happier with their wives. Unmarried men will choose their wives more wisely; or, if the bearing of love still strikes at random, the bolt will more often be hurled back to its sender as well as a charming young woman.

And when associating with women whom they do not think of marrying, all men will be less apt than they are today to feel that sentimentality is expected of them or is likely to be offered to them. And, one more, as it will be with men, so, equally, it will be with women. Often today there is small common ground for that intimacy between men and women to which cannot permit any other mental ground. Widen the field of companionship and the danger of an undue cultivation of the sentimental trait will be decreased.

When women have taught men that they want and value real friendship, that they can be loyal, interesting and profitable friends in the same sense that men are to one another, yet always with that delicate flavor of difference which will make feminine friendship desirable, in matter how much masculine friendship may be at hand, then men will not be so ready to sneer at the attitude of lovers or of mere brother-ness. Yet there will be lovers enough, for this instinct is even more important than the instinct to ward friendship. And when love is transformed into the husband, there will be a better chance of lifelong constancy.

Moreover, in true friendship, based upon mental parity, people are not limited to companies of their own age, with whom, of course, the dangers of sentiment are most to be feared. In a well-ordered society the woman of brilliant old woman can have friendship with intelligent young men, outside her family, and yet be within it. And it is hard to say whether in such relationships the benefit is greater to the woman or the man. In the latter case they may keep young and fresh and useful, or to the man whom they may make and form, restrain and inspire, and yet be in no danger of love, loss of friendship, or any of the other feminine possibilities which will serve him well when choosing for himself a wife.

CHATS ABOUT MEN.

Extemporaneous Speaking.

Extemporaneous speaking is one of the great accomplishments of the French people with considerable success.

Count Caprivi, the German chancellor, promises to be "crime" of Kaiser was wrecked. He turned the scale at 192 pounds.

Colonel Cracroft, who died a short while ago in Atlanta, was famed in the Confederate army, which was a Gaul all over full of Gallic valor.

Westminster abbey is surrounded with monuments but there is only room for two more worthies, and they must be Mr. Gladstone and Tennyson.

Baron Taxis has resigned his diplomatic position in Washington, though it is more than probable that, with a desire to exhibit superior affront, he will work in quarters in some Europeans court.

The self-appointed envoy of the Kaiser, Judge Hanna, Henry C. Hanna, of Georgia, has the thanks and chance of England time to consult Congressman Bland in the matter of the coinage of silver. Place at Michigan, the broker.

It used to be the boast of Vicksburgh, Boston mayor of Illinois, that he could always be found at his desk at any hour of the day and for only the asking. It is a matter of current comment that it was this practice that shortened his walk.

The earl of Rosebery, who has temporarily forsaken an Irish seat, Dunsmore park, County Tyrone, has purchased a large tract of land in the original colony of Victoria, south Australia, where he intends to start as a fruit grower on a large scale.

John Boyd Thacher, of Albany, is an indefatigable collector and a rare judge of ancient books and manuscripts, his private collection of black letter volumes, some of them unique, being valuable and antiquarian rather for signals in this country. He owns the second best copy of the first folio of Shakespeare now in existence.

He Wanted to Read.

An exchange records a snub but witty saying of a railway passenger. He was trying to read, and was really interested in his book, but just in front of him sat a little girl who seemed determined to have his attention.

She was a pretty and sprightly little creature, with blue eyes, golden hair and an inquisitive tongue. She plied him with a dozen questions and tired with his quick, curt replies, and for mother, evidently a widow, looked round now and then with a reproving smile. He began to feel out of sorts. At last he said to the mother:

"Madam, what do you call this sweet little darling?"

The widow smiled enchantingly—on the reporter eyes—and answered with a little sigh:

"Please call her, then," said the stranger, as he turned himself in his book.—Youth's Companion.
