THE OLD AND THE NEW.

If the new officers and directors of the Chamber of Commerce in this city shall labor with as much zeal and enthusiasm for the advertising and advancement of Salt Lake as have their predecessors, no one will have cause for complaint and we shall be a great deal ahead, a twelvemonth hence, of our position today. It may truly be said of Mr. Hubbard, the retiring president, that in the duties of his position he brought every day in the year his best energies; he was ever full of intelligent and effective suggestions looking to the fulfillment of the Chamber's particular mission. If any mistake has been made in the changes that have occurred we think it is in not electing him a member of the board of directors. In fact, the News maintains that it would be a good rule and a graceful proceeding to re-elect among the counselors and directors for at least one year every president who during his term in the higher office has given evidence of disinterested activity and judicious energy in promoting the city's and the organization's weal. Such a rule would insure the retention of at least that much tried timber in the new body, and would be of undoubted benefit in placing in close official relations two gentlemen whose efforts are presumed to be directed toward similar ends, and one of whom takes up the labor where the other laid it down. Many of Mr. Hubbard's ideas have been excellent and timely, and it would be a misfortune if such of them as were not completely carried out and are still opportune should be dropped through his retirement.

However, in the election of Mr. Rowe, the Chamber places at its head a man who has been familiar with all the Board's proceedings and who may be relied upon to diminish in no degree the capacity of the organization for good. He is no old citizen and is well known to need introduction or praise, and is especially prominent and popular for his connection with and advocacy of home manufacture—a subject which the News wishes ten thousand otherwise Utah men would make a hobby of. His associates are representative men, vigorous and capable every one. We hope they will be able to make the year 1894 the best and most profitable in all the Chamber's history.

COLUMBIA'S LOSS, PARIS'S GAIN.

One of the events following upon the proceedings by the Dulcinea Celestna, daughter of John W. Mackay of Comstock fame and wealth, for freedom from her titled and worthless husband, is the improbable statement that her mother contemplates abandoning her Parisian home, which she took up on the prospect of her relationship to a scion of royalty. Upon coming mother-in-law to a place in name if not in dignity and honor, she quit her own country and established herself in the gay French capital, where she is universally known as Madame Bonanza Mackay. To the visitor to Paris, her palatial residence is pointed out as the palace as the abode of a person who presumed upon the prestige of her great wealth to make an offer of purchase to the government for the Arc de Triomphe de l'Etoile, the largest triumphal arch in existence, at the head of the Champs Elysees and visible from almost every part of the environs of Paris; the structure was begun in 1806 by Napoleon I and completed in 1836 by Louis Philippe. Of course the offer for its purchase was declined.

Mrs. Mackay's Parisian residence is situated in the Avenue d'Hylen, facing and almost under the morning shadows of the magnificent Palais des Trophees. Behind and towering above the Gothic minarets of her palace, the great Eiffel tower loms up in the southeastern sky. The Trocadero is reared on an eminence of that name, so called from one of the forts of Cadiz, captured by the French in 1823, and at the time it was raised by Napoleon as the site of a marble palace for the king of Rome. The Mackay palace is in one of the most fashionable and desirable residence portions of Paris. A cultivated taste rules the architectural style of the exterior furnishings, and elegant statuary and costly paintings adorn its superb chambers and corridors. The voices of birds can be heard in every apartment, there being a veritable aviary of the silver-lined warbler. All around there is a display of rich tapestry, and Mme. Mackay's name is, so to speak, the drawing-room of American society in the French metropolis.

There are the effect in great measure of a woman's taste, no doubt for the better and glamor of royalty. And so strong is this feeling with Mme. Mackay, as shown by her actions, that notwithstanding the generally anticipated unpleasant turn to the marital affairs of the Prince and Princess of Colonna, it is doubtful whether she will to return to the fashion and gayety of aristocratic Paris. A return to America would be to acknowledge defeat in her chosen place. No woman likes to make such a confession—least of all a woman of Mme. Mackay's make-up.

CHANGES IN PALESTINE.

Rev. A. Ben-Oliel, who has been living at Jerusalem for some years and laboring as a missionary in the interest of the Presbyterian church, is at present in this country and advertising much attention among his co-religionists. Mr. Ben Oliel is a Jewish convert, born at Tangiers. Since his acceptance of Christian doctrines and tenets he has labored in various countries among the Hebrews and is said to have organized some new churches. He has, however, lived for six in Palestine and has seen enough with mere surmise, if this is measured by the number of converts made among the Jews in that country.

Speaking of the Holy Land to a representative of the Pittsburg Dispatch, he says that he is much out that the prophecies concerning the Hebrews are being fulfilled today. A few years ago there were not over 5,000 Hebrews in Palestine. There are now 80,000, of whom 35,000 live in Jerusalem. They are coming at the rate of 15,000 a year. On the remarkable return in here years of the rain, without which the country is about worthless, Mr. Ben-Oliel remarks that this is another fulfillment of prophecy.

He might have added, if he were a believer in Mormonism, that both the gathering of the scattered people and the return of the early rains and latter rains, which for centuries were known only through history, are a direct answer to the ordinatory prayer offered by Orson Hyde on the Mount of Olives in the early part of the history of our Church. Indeed, to a thoughtful observer the present condition of Palestine is almost as cogent demonstration of the truth of Mormonism. There is a work going on among Israel and Judah alike, and it is a part of that great and marvelous work which was announced and commenced by Joseph the Prophet, so he was directed by the great Ruler of the destinies of the children of men.

THE SIBERIAN RAILROAD.

The Siberian railroad is nearing its completion and many people are already directing their attention towards the fertile land which this road will make accessible to the world. Word comes from St. Petersburg that it is the intention of the Russian government to open for settlement a belt of land along the six thousand mile long road, several miles wide on each side. To desirable settlers the land will practically be a free gift. The importance of this movement may be understood when it is considered that a territory as large as Germany, Austria, Holland, Belgium and Denmark, with favorable climate and exceedingly fertile soil, will thereby be thrown open to the surplus population of the world. At present all industrial products are sold at a high price in Siberia, and it is therefore natural that a lively commerce will be one of the first results of the completion of the great project. The country has an abundance of mines containing iron, gold, coal, salt, etc., which only need more labor for development to yield enough to enrich the nation. With all these possibilities it is not unlikely that the opening up of the Siberian railroad will relieve our statesmen from the difficult task of solving the immigration problem, by diverting a greater part of the current of home seekers to the vast country in Asia, which has hitherto been almost a terra incognita. It is also stated that by the aid of this road a traveler will be able to trot around the earth in forty-five days.

MISLEADING FIGURES.

During December there landed at Ellis Island, N. Y., 15,201 immigrants, from Italy, every quarter of a dollar, 1,000 Hebrews, 1,000 Germans, and smaller in lots and twos, and more than half with not any trade or profession. They will add largely to the list supposed to be during the winter.—Chicago Inter-Ocean.

The foregoing statement will doubtless have the effect intended upon the majority of those who read it, by giving them to understand that the ignorant and paupers element of Europe are settled in this country notwithstanding the strict immigration laws. But persons who are acquainted with the workings of the immigration commissioners' office will at once detect the fraud. An account is taken of every arrival at Ellis Island, down to the youngest babe. And as there are some children under seven or eight years of age would and report the usual proportion of the little ones among the immigrants, it is quite probable that the ladies would estimate the number classed as "paupers" and "would be out of work." Of the "men who have had without any trade or profession," this includes the wives and children as well as the children who arrive, and as these constitute perhaps more than half of the total number of immigrants, there is really nothing to form a basis for the assertion that they will add largely to the free soup-house list. The News has had occasion recently to observe that "figures don't lie," and this gives opportunity again to remark that they are sometimes made the means of expressing glaring untruths. Such is the case with the Inter Ocean's definition. We do not deny that the immigration question is becoming a grave one, and in the near future will require heavy yet careful treatment. But the case is not helped a bit by falsehood—as case ever is.

ADVERTISING FOR EXCELLENCE.

Fighting for business is it always is, and keeping competitors and everybody else on the look-out for surprises, the Rio Grande Western railroad takes time now and then to astonish the public with the novelty and magnificence of its advertising. Every little while the pen of the descriptive writer and the pencil, the pencil of the artist, and the highest artistic genius in the printer's art are called into combined requisition by the authorities of the aggressive and progressive little road. The result is a literary and artistic gem, in which, while not neglecting to say a good word for the R. G. W., every section is traversed in complimented and gratified in pictorial and eloquent prose. Rarely such commonsense and unequaled skill in advertising deserves the recognition which such new venture compels alike from public and from press!

"Utah—a Mountain Wallet Treasury of the Gods," is the title of the latest production of this kind. It is in the form of a cushion map of "the true home of land," geographically correct, and pictured with such rare effect as to appear modeled in plastic clay. The spectator can scarcely believe that he looks upon paper's smoothly printed surface, so colossal are the heights and chasms, the bare peaks and shadows that stand out in living outlines. It is a real colossus—Utah resident of a lifetime can from it take in much that, while existing all the time, they never knew before. From the margin the eye is greeted with choice views of scenic and historic points, and luscious products of stream and garden are so well presented as to tempt the palate of tired tribute-payers to try methods. All in all, it is a triumph—to be shared by the donor who executed and the creative mind that conceived it.

CURIOUS SENATE EXPENSES.

An expert in figures reminds the country that it takes over a million dollars to pay the running expenses of the United States Senate. According to the Pittsburg Dispatch the compensation of senators amounts to $805,000, while clerks and other employes and "contingent expenses" get away with $434,000, it thus appearing that it costs more to pay the servants of the senators than to compensate the senators themselves. But this is accounted for by those who profess to know on the ground that sometimes, when the persons for place is great, an appropriation for "furniture" is applied to the account of a position not always important. In this way an incredible number of "clerks of documents" at a salary of from $75 to $100 a month find employment, at least on the pay rolls.

Then again, almost everything is dearer when sold to the government than to private individuals. The clerk of the finance committee had to pay $17.40 in railroad fare and $12.50 for board during half a day's journey from Washington to Providence. The following interesting items are said to be among those charged to the government: Fifteen dozen bath towels, one pair of blankets, one dozen possibly wash, one barber chair, twenty gallons of bay rum, shaving mugs, Italian cosmetic, Jamaica ginger, witch hazel, quinine pills, cologne, apollinaris water, lemons and two dozen "champagne mash coloners." The latter item is somewhat surprising in view of the much vaunted sobriety and temperance of the "greatest deliberative body on earth."

Mugwump's Aid: Highfalutin Democrats are at times as great winners of beasts as of laws. Bunk Dodge, the "old calorific man," has just given glowing proof of this. Last week he was married to a young lady of Boston, formerly a show singer in Chicago, educated and charming young woman, who retired a Massachusetts millionaire, the president of the leather trust, to accept the love and share the honors of the prince of tobacco.

Mugwump Willis is the editor of the delighting little house publication, Our Dumb Animals, using what mouth he borrowed to. He replied that if his correspondent had other which particular charm he thought the best he would duly answer, on the church which is doing the most to justify the coming of the Millennium.

The definition is admirable. Everybody ought to be able to accept it.

H. Fleischer, the inventor of the silk-dyeing, and hence the cause of so many detectives cards, will address lectures and manufacture any quantity—over 500. He says he has installations in the green, but he works upon demand.

The situation in Florida has resolved itself into the usual conditions. The Duval Sun says the fight will come as advertised on Jan. 23. Governor Mitchell says it will not. What Morrison say—dy ado?

Gen. Alger's boast, that he "began life as a barefoot boy," moves a Bluejaw Michigan paper to say that "we are all of us." This in turn admits of the subsequent, what about those "all us" who are girls?

After reading that the Bell telephone has paid more than twenty-three million dollars in dividends in the past twelve years, it would be a bold old soul who could still insist that talk is cheap.

Congress fixes the United States government $6,000 per day. It isn't worth the money, at least in half cases like these.
