THE CONFERENCE.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

The choir and congregation sang:

How firm a foundation, ye Saints of the Lord,
Is laid for your faith in His excellent word.

Prayer by Elder John D. T. McAllister.

Singing by the choir:

Zion stands with hills surrounded—
Zion, thou art praised!
All who love Her in adoration,
Through the world in arms confronted.

PRESIDENT LORENZO SNOW,

of the quorum of the Twelve Apostles, was the first speaker. He said that the remarks made by those who addressed the congregation at the morning's services were full of instruction to the Saints and most profitable for their future guidance. These were promises made to the Saints in former days as well as in the latter-days, by revelation, which were most precious, and they would all be fulfilled in the Lord's own time. The Latter-day Saints had many obstacles to overcome, and their faith would be tested in many ways. The Lord had placed before us incentives of the greatest character, and these were found in the revelations of the present day as well as those of ancient times. The speaker then proceeded to explain the heights of exaltation to which man could attain by constant and unbroken step faithfulness to God and progress under the Gospel of Jesus Christ. He showed that such could, in eternity, become like God, who is the Father of the intelligences who inhabit the earth. These mysteries were explained in ancient revelations and God had also revealed them in this age, he having had a divine communication from this subject to himself. Elder Snow then dwelt upon the course necessarily pursued by those who have this hope in them—to follow righteousness always, whether under the eyes of their fellow-beings or when beyond their observation. He addressed remarks to subjects of what had been revealed by God upon this great subject. He assured the Saints that by a course of faithfulness and self-sacrifice they would attain to their highest possible ideals of increase, glory and honor in the future life.

ELDER FRANCIS M. LYMAN

of the quorum of the Twelve Apostles, remarked that the speakers in this Church did not prepare their discourses beforehand, but depended upon the Spirit and inspiration of the Lord for what they might say. Every one bearing the holy Priesthood was expected to bear his share of the burden in the work of the Lord. We had undertaken to build up God's kingdom and accomplish His purposes, and every man bearing the Priesthood who failed to do his duty was under reproach. It was a reproach to teachers when they were unsuccessful in the performance of their duties; as were individual members of the Church when they failed to properly regulate their own affairs and those of their families; and the same might be said of the Bishops who had fallen short of their duty towards those who looked up to them for guidance. So also with the High Councils of the Stakes. When we, as a people, failed to obey the Word of Wisdom, which had been given us for our temporal good, and neglected to keep the Lord's commandments, it was a reproach to us. Our aim should be forgiven if we were genuinely repentant, which was eternal importance, and none other could possibly be effectual. We covenanted to serve the Lord when we went into the waters of baptism, and if a man would be saved herefter he must resolve upon final reformation. There was a spirit of carelessness today among the people not only in regard to the law of tithing, but in other matters.

Our Sunday offerings were but nominal, whereas the Saints should always remember the wants of the poor. This was what the Lord required of us. In how many of the last meetings in Zion today, he asked, were prayers offered as extensively as they should be? He believed there were many things which might be accomplished by fasting and prayer which could not be carried out and attained by individual effort. The Saints were unfortunately to spt to lose sight of this. The speaker condemned an excessive love of pleasure, and depredated card playing, drinking and other evils practiced by the young in Zion. The subject of faith was briefly dwelt upon, and the importance of daily prayer urged upon the Saints. Some among the Latter-day Saints were excusing themselves, for one reason and another, from paying their tithing, but He who provided for us should receive as our offerings the choicest gifts that we could bestow in that direction. When the Lord had so abundantly blessed us we should remember the poor. We had had a bountiful harvest, and hence out of our store should give liberally to those of our brethren who were placed in less fortunate positions. There was joy, happiness and salvation in doing the will of God and in the faithful carrying out of the duties required of us. In conclusion Elder Lyman invoked the blessing of God upon President Woodruff, whose life he prayed might be prolonged for years yet to come, that he might remain at the head of this people.

ELDER JOHN HENRY SMITH,

of the quorum of the Twelve Apostles, was the succeeding speaker. He said there were a great many subjects which might be advantageously dwelt upon at this conference. The theme of those who had spoken thus far on the present occasion had been a reformation of our individual lives, and on this head some excellent counsel had been given. Each and everyone of us could look into our own souls and seek wisdom, prudence and judgment to guide us aright. Elder Smith spoke of the obligation resting upon the Latter-day Saints of constant and earnest prayer, in the family circle and in secret as well as in our public meetings. He was fearful, however, lest in the midst of the excitement and cares of the day many of us became unmindful of the responsibilities which attached to us in this respect. He believed that among many of the duties which we neglected was the expression of our thanks to God for having in His providence preserved to us our families and the surrounding tenpitations of life, and which beset us at every hand. He wondered sometimes whether, in the midst of present experiences, our sisters were as mindful in time regard of their responsibilities as they were wont to be in the days that are past—now that they are more largely endowed with the comforts and luxuries of life. There was no doubt as to the earnestness of this latter-day work, for God himself was at its head. The road a repentance was ever open to the Saints, and let them see to it that their lives were so directed that hereafter they would attain celestial glory. May the Lord abide us with a proper comprehension of the doctrines we have espoused and in our daily life continue to watch over and protect His people.

The anthem, "Come, let us sing unto the Lord," was sung by the choir.

Benediction by Elder Seymour B. Young.

THIRD DISTRICT COURT.

Criminal and Civil Business Before the Judge Today.

In Judge Bartch's division of the Third district court today the first case taken up was that of Moses Hicher, against whom an indictment for murder in the first degree had been found by the present grand jury.

The defendant was questioned by Prosecuting Attorney Howat as to whether he understood the English language and as to his ability to secure legal counsel. Hicher stated that he had no means to employ an attorney. He understood the English language but imperfectly.

He was given till Monday next to arrange with an attorney to defend him.

The case of Wm. Passey, indicted for burglary at the Cliff house, was next called and Attorney Warnock appointed to defend him.

In the case of Reagan, (charged with robbery), the prosecuting attorney said he thought it doubtful whether they would be able to find the defendant, and the bonds were therefore declared forfeited.

C. H. Lotielle, who had been considered of disturbing the peace and whose case had been appealed, through his attorney, asked that the matter go over till next term of court on account of the absence of several material witnesses. A continuance was granted till Oct. 22.

Bailiff Nielson was ordered by the court to call the defendants in the case of O. Burbidge and wife, and they not being present their bonds were declared forfeited.

This afternoon Attorney Hurd appeared in court and explained that the setting of the case for today had slipped from his mind, and expressed regret and willingness to go on with the case now or at the court's convenience, and asked that the forfeiture of the bonds be set aside. Granted on payment of costs of witnesses and subpoenas.

People vs. Marsh, grand larceny, continued till Tuesday next, and bail given in the sum of $500.

A warrant was issued for the appearance of two lads, Dave Hughes and Frank Bennett, who were arraigned and pleaded at the last term of court. They left the Territory soon after, but the prosecuting attorney has now learned that they have returned.

Several more rollings of cases were made.

At 2:30 this afternoon the petit jury was excused till Monday morning.

Geneva Tufts was arraigned this afternoon, in the Third district court, on a charge of adultery with one Samuel Noall, and pleaded not guilty.

Attorney Rimer entered a plea of not guilty to the charge of perjury.

FIELD AND GARDEN.

The Immense Agricultural Exhibit at the Fair.

COMPETITION AMONG DAIRIES.

Splendid Display of Vegetables—Luscious Fruits in Great Profusion.

Each day increases the success of the Fair, and adds to the enthusiasm of the people. It is estimated that fully 15,000 people attended yesterday, but this vast number includes the school children of the city. One of the Fair directors said yesterday afternoon that the gate receipts had been double what the directors expected, and that it appeared to him, from the way the crowds were flocking in, that it would be necessary to keep the Fair open into next week, though the live stock, he added, would probably have to be sent home.

The showing of agricultural products is immense from every point of view, though the space which it is allowed to occupy necessarily had to be curtailed. Had more room been given it, it would have looked larger, and appeared to better advantage. It occupies three alcoves in the wing, and these are densely packed with specimens of field and garden crops which are another proof of the fertility of the soil in these mountain valleys.

The first alcove is mainly occupied by an exhibit from Snake river valley, Idaho, which embraces splendid specimens of field crops raised in that region, such as grains, different varieties of potatoes, turnips of immense size, onions, cabbages, cauliflower, etc. A pleasing over this exhibit invites businessmen to go to Bannock state, and gives the prices of improved farms at from $10 to per acre.

The next alcove is filled with a collection of samples of field and garden crops, which appear to have come from different localities. There are squashes and pumpkins of enormous size; potatoes of several kinds which are probably as fine as could be found in any fair in the United; samples of all kinds of grains, which are of splendid quality; some immense water melons, a sight of which would make a canaryp's mouth water; and specimens of all kinds of field and garden (?) and vegetables, all of which are fine, while some of them are exceedingly so.

The next alcove is filled with a collection of vegetables which embraces nearly every kind grown in field or garden in this region, all of which were raised by Bishop Lorenzo Snow, jun. It is certainly a remarkable exhibit, in the number and quality of the samples shown, and the fact that all were produced by one man, makes it still more remarkable.

The next alcove contains, as a portion of a very fine display of the products of field and garden, several varieties of potatoes, which are simply experts, and were very much admired by large numbers of people who examined them. The names of the growers were not given.

DAIRY PRODUCTS.

It is highly gratifying to see the exhibits of dairy produce which are shown at the Fair. There is a large number of them, and all are creditable, some of them very much so. Lorenzo Hansen, of Wellsville, has a very fine display of cheese, as has also the Hyrum Creamery company and the Richmond Dairy company. There is some rivalry among these three competitors for the highest award for cheese.

A still larger number of competitors strive for the highest award for butter, which was given to the Charleston Creamery company. It is a high honor to capture the prize in the face of the sharp competition for it, and the numerous excellent exhibits in butter shown at the Fair.

FRUIT EXHIBIT.

The display of fruits is calculated to inspire the beholder with the highest enthusiasm. It is glorious to look upon. Every variety that will grow in the climate of Utah is shown in rare beauty and perfection. The individual exhibits, almost without exception, are very fine.

O. W. Warren, of Moab, has an extensive exhibit, which embraces many varieties of apples, several each of grapes, pears and peaches, and three of quinces. Each specimen is very fine, and some of them are superb.

J. E. Murphy displays a case of strawberries, which last evening won the label "First Prize." A variety of this fruit which ripens so late is a rarity.

D. S. Anderson, of Sugar, shows a fine collection of apples, pears and peaches.

Woolley & Hay show a splendid exhibit of grapes and peaches, grown in lost south of this city. The exhibit also includes some fine quinces and plums.

Mrs. Mary E. Jensen, of Mill Creek, presents one of the most gratifying displays in the department. It is a large show case containing fifty-five varieties of sun-dried fruits. Near by is a long row of glass-covered boxes filled with different kinds of sun-dried fruits, also prepared by this lady. Her husband, Lars Jensen, has a display of apples which embraces thirty-seven varieties, and which received the Anderson prize for the most artistic display of this fruit.

Wm. Hinckley & Sons, of Brigham City, show some very fine grapes, peaches and plums.

J. M. Fisher Jr., of East Mill Creek, takes several first prizes for different varieties of peaches. His display is extensive and very fine, and embraces a large number of different kinds of grapes, many of the bunches of which bear the significant label "First Prize." Mr. Fisher is rapidly coming to the front as a successful fruit grower.

Thomas Judd, of St. George, was awarded a gold medal for his display of grapes, and the judges recommended that he be given another gold medal for the almonds shown by him. His exhibit is contained in a glass show case, and includes some boxes of raisins, and specimens of other fruits.

Mrs. Ruth McKean shows a large collection of fine one-bushel baskets of fruit, embracing all the varieties usually prepared in that way. This lady takes the first prize.

George Berryer, of Pleasant View, Water county, shows a very fine collection of apples, embracing many varieties.

NOTES.

There will be another balloon ascension at 8 o'clock this evening from the Fair grounds.

The Haight Grand Junction band will enliven to the Fair yesterday afternoon free of charge.

The Intermountain Milling company shows a fine display of flour, made at the different mills under its control.

Yesterday afternoon a man was "touched" for his watch, in the main building. He at once reported his loss to the directors' secretaries, but there was no clue to the pickpocket.

There are several very creditable displays of painting on china, glass, etc. One of these, which is very fine, fills the cabinet carved by Earl Cummings.

A grand concert will be given at the Fair this evening at 8 o'clock, at which the following numbers will be rendered: World's Fair male chorus, male quartette contest, solos by R. C. Easton, World's Fair male chorus.

There are only two displays of photography, by C. R. Savage and Salisbury & Jackson, respectively. Both are very fine, and it will require a decision of the judges to determine which is the best.

The floral display made by James Dwyer, is a very large and a very fine one. It embraces a great variety of beautiful garden and hothouse plants and flowers and is an ornament to the main building.

The gymnastic exhibition given by members of the Young Men's Union association yesterday afternoon was very fine. The assembled throng seemed well pleased and enjoyed and appreciated it very much.

The following awards were made to the Great Bear company: For the best soap, the Bonivar, gold medal; for the best display of all made at the Fair, gold medal; for the largest, best and best arranged display of soap, $25 cash prize. A gentleman from St. Louis who visited the Fair yesterday declared that he had traveled all over the world, had seen hundreds of fairs and expositions, but this was the finest display of soap he had ever seen.

The Valley Tan Gomeline display is in the gallery, and embraces the numerous articles that bear this brand, and which are fast acquiring a national reputation. In connection with this exhibit is shown a small hand printing press, on which was printed, at Council Bluffs, the Frontier Guardian, away back in the 40's. This press was taken to St. George many years ago, and several different periodicals have been printed on it there. It is an interesting relic.

Of sculpture only a few specimens are shown. One is a plaster bust of Cleveland, by Lake Crawshaw, of Cleveland, and J. Jeppesen has four plaster models of considerable merit. One is a bust representing Christ in the garden, which evinces an expression of great agony, well portrayed. A second is a female figure in miniature, "Hope of Peace." Lydia Jeppesen has a pair of doves, modeled in clay, which is designed to typify love, and has considerable merit.

Josh Davis, who was dressed up as a Chinaman, and was in attendance at the Fair to aid in advertising the Grand show, fell into the hands of the school children yesterday, and they nearly used him up. They pulled off his queue, and were trying to pull off his clothes. He struggled to escape, but they were too many for him. A dense throng of them surrounded him, and seemed bent on stripping him, and it became necessary for two policemen to go to his rescue. The children were actuated by a spirit of fun, but they made it very uncomfortable for Davis, and he was obliged to lay off his Chinese "togs" the rest of the day.

THE BABY SHOW.

Immense Interest in "Utah's Best Crop.

Manufactures, field crops, even the gold and silver from the mines, and every other exhibit at the Fair, paled into insignificance as counter attractions to the baby show, which took place between two and three o'clock this afternoon. The crowd that surrounded the grand stand while this great feature of the Fair was in progress, numbered probably 5,000.

On the platform immediately in front of the grand stand were placed the three little girl triplets, children of Mrs. Kate Shelley, of Ogden, who were three years old on the 14th of last month. The little tots walked around on the platform, swinging little flags that had been handed to them. They were neatly dressed, appeared to be lively and healthy, and were as pretty as pictures. The sight of them created immense enthusiasm among the vast concourse of people that witnessed it. After remaining on the platform ten or fifteen minutes the tripsets were removed.

Next came the preliminaries of the baby show proper. The management of the Fair had appointed the following committee: Hyrum Bentley, of Salt Lake; A. D. Holaway, of Provo; W. G. Dragon, of Pleasant View; Abram Hatch, of Heber City, and J. A. Melville, of Fillmore. At the last minute it was remembered that the rules of the contest prevent that the committee shall be chosen on the ground, but the majority of Mr. Dragon, one of the Fair directors, rather overrode this point, the committee was nominated the same gentlemen, who were unanimously elected by the live mothers.

Mr. Hatch announced that babies that had not been registered "were not in it," and consternation was portrayed with painful vividness on the faces of probably two hundred mothers, who, with their pride-swelling darlings in their arms, were having their own fives pulled out by the junk in the grand stand. At least half a dozen weak-kneed mothers begged a recorder to register their babies, leaving him with pencil and ink in hand, they took him for a baby registrar.

One mother after another raised a faint against being excluded in no contest, and insisted on the privilege of registering. Secretary Dyer was in favor of letting the committee pick out one plethoric baby in the grand stand, regardless of rules, but Mr. Hear declared the committee would not get through today if the registration was allowed to extend. The Fair management was overjoyed with this position when the News went to press, upon which time the committee had not found an ugly baby so far (?).
