The third annual convention of the Pacific Coast Women's Press association is in session at San Francisco.

The California poetess—Mrs. Madge Mills Wise—who wrote the song which brought about the coining of the new Liberty bell is now in San Francisco.

A fire broke out in Louis Hergardt's cary stack in Meadow Meadows. About ten tons of hay were consumed before the flame. The cause of the fire is unknown.

Two hunters recently encountered four grizzly bears near Pine Ridge. Two of the bears were large and one cub. The old bears stood off and let the cub at the mercy of the hunters. Both cubs were shot.

Assistant Grand Chief D. H. Gearhart of the Order of Railway Conductors, is in Denver in consultation with the grievance committee concerning the differences with the Denver & Rio Grande.

"Evans and Soulas" complete the bills at the National theater, San Francisco, to a crowded house every night. Mrs. Evans and Eva Evans, wife and daughter of the author, appeared in the play. The play is pronounced "well and wisely."

J. W. Lord, a collector, was quite a thrilling incident Nineteenth and Market streets, Denver, on Wednesday night. Two dusky sirens robbed him. He pretended a gun and went back after the property, only to be attacked by an iron for carrying concealed weapons.

W. H. Turner, a prominent lawyer and well-to-do Republican of Los Angeles, has committed suicide by taking morphine. He had long been a sufferer from consumption, and the suicide is attributed to a desire for a relief from pain.

In St. Louis, a Frenchman and Louisville, wounded an unknown man in the leg on Tuesday night. He spied a party of three men boring near a house, and, giving warning, Mr. Gale fired. The shot struck one of the men in the leg. The prisoner took to his heels, carrying the wounded man with them.

It is pleasing to note the interest taken by the people of Ephraim in the way of improvements, says the Enterprise. A new roof has been placed on the tabernacle and many other buildings have been painted. Sidewalks are being made on the building. It is the intention of the authorities to have it placed in a first class condition before winter sets in.

Tuesday morning the chief of police of Los Angeles received a telegram from El Paso that a young man was arrested there answering the description of Arthur J. Stewart, the defaulting west side lumbering bookkeeper of the street superintendent's office. The chief wired back for further details of identification.

Word has reached Louisville, Colo., that Jolnn McCann, a well known miner and boxer, formerly of that city, accidentally shot and killed himself a few days ago. He was preparing for a sparring trip with some friends and when he did not turn up they went to his cabin and broke the door in and found McCann trying on the door with his head knocked off. It is the opinion of his friends that in fixing his gun, which was loaded, it exploded, and thus terminated his life.

On Saturday, while David Cutts, a teamster, was hauling a scale beam between the Gilmore and Pike Rocker, Fresno, Cal., he went over the grade with twelve horses and three wagons loaded with lumber, and fell thirty feet perpendicularly, landing among the ruins. He escaped alive or miraculously by springing off his horse as the beams went down. The wagons were broken into splinters, and the horses, wagons and lumber were piled in a shapeless mass at the foot of the cliff. Cutts escaped without a scratch.

A new, yet somewhat primitive business has just been put in operation at Brighton, Colorado. Farmers who supply milk for Denver dairymen have got disgusted with the commissions of shipment given them by the middlemen, and have started a freight line of their own, by which they will put milk in Denver, thirteen miles of the railroad. A train of horses is arranged to the railway farm, and the trip will be made in a very short time. It is believed, if the preliminary trips prove satisfactory, that before long the whole valley, or at least, a portion, will send milk in by this fast team line in preference to the railroad.

Major Wyman, agent for the Crow Indians, had a narrow escape in a fight with two strangers on the reservation on Wednesday night, says a special from Helena, Mont. One of them took a shot at him with a Winchester at close range and the bullet plowed through his shirt, making a furrow in the skin over his breast. The men were later killed by Agent Wyman's escort of Indian police. They had a jug of whisky and three horses. It is not yet known whether the horses were stolen. As soon as the shot was fired at Wyman his two Indian policemen opened with their revolvers and there was a lively fusillade for a few minutes. One of the dead men had two bullets lodged. The other was Ed Hamilton, of Dillon, Mont.

There is a deadlock in the Supreme court of Nevada over the case of Sam Wright vs the Carson Water company, value $5,000. Wright won in the lower court and the case was appealed by the water company. The case was argued from Wright lassed suit to the water company and took a verdict. Wright claims he is to get an interest in the gold Alice Helm, acting as secretary of the company, has the money on the counter, saying "Here is the money if you want it, but I would like to have a share if you give it to me for it." Mr. Wright said "All right I will take the money and be satisfied with one share." It was held by the defendants the money was the same as a share. Mr. Helm, for the Water company, argued that the money in Wright's pocket was the same as the money in the company's coffers. Judge Bigelow and Murphy held against the company, and Judge Belknap, on the other side, for plaintiff, in rebuttal, in mental labor on account of a recent illness. This causes the deadlock.

A pitched battle took place in front of the San Francisco stock brewery near San Francisco on Tuesday evening, resulting in one man being taken to the receiving hospital having his nostrils and both eyes gouged, blows and two others being locked up in the city prison upon charges of battery, which may yet be changed to assault and battery. E. A. Fletcher and Louis Bowers, who employed as engineers in the brewery, and have been for some time. Salmon L. Wilson and his wife Holly are likewise employed at the same place. There has been bad blood between the Fletchers and Wilsons for some time, owing, it is said, Fletcher claims, to the efforts made by the Wilsons to have himself and his father discharged. There have been several battles between the men, and Tuesday afternoon Samuel Wilson attacked A. E. Fletcher and knocked him down. Young Fletcher went to his father's assistance and a general fight was immediately had, some of the women dropped their aprons for the occasion, which quite some amateurs caught for the fighting Fletchers, having an watch, armed themselves with pieces of heavy gaspipe, before they left the employment. They had barely got outside the gates when they were attacked by the Wilsons and several others, among whom was Herman Aile. The latter battled so manfully that he was knocked out with the piece of pipe. The battle then became general, and in spite of the efforts of people the two men found themselves so taken on the Wilson side. Bowers and they were kicked and beaten most unmercifully. The affair might have ended in murder and suicide, for Fletcher drew a pistol while and brought a posse of officers on the scene. The Fletchers were in no condition to make an escape, and they, with Aile, had to be left to die of the pipe, but for all of the attacking party got away. The pitted battle was viewed around a big oak in Alice's beer hall and also also to which the young Fletcher, but Fletcher Senior had to be sent to the receiving hospital in the patrol wagon, where the surgeon said he was in a very serious condition. Aile's wounds were not fatal, and the boy was a mere spectator. He is also locked to be held as a witness. The police are now directed to look up the Wilsons and Fletcher, but up to a late hour in the night they had not been arrested.
