A TERRIBLE FLOODBURST.

The Destruction More Widespread than at First Thought.

CHICAGO, June 25.—Advices received at the headquarters of the Chicago & Northwestern railroad in Iowa City this morning indicate that the destruction by the floodburst in northwestern Iowa yesterday was more widespread than the dispatches before received suggested. From the damage to the bridges actually reported on the road, it appears that the deluge covers territory in three counties in width along the western border of the state, and five counties in length, beginning with one tier of counties from the northern boundary of the State, and extending southward. Telegraph lines in this territory are greatly demoralized, and it is next to impossible to get accurate or detailed information bearing on the ground issue and casualties.

This territory is dotted with villages and covered with cultivated fields, and the worst is feared in the way of damage and possible loss of life along the water courses which traverse this great section of the state.

Several general officers of the Northwestern road left for the scene last night, and are making strenuous efforts to ascertain the extent of the damage done. Their reports give only the result of their observations regarding the damage done to the property of the company, leaving that of the adjacent communities to be inferred.

The reports show that other lines of life and, some 150 miles in length, are entirely blockaded by the carrying away of bridges and the washing out of the roadbeds. At the present time it is impossible to estimate the damage to the railroad property in the devasted territory, but enough is known to show that it will be very heavy.

The section of country where the flood was most severe is traversed by numerous branches, not only of the Northwestern, but also of the Illinois Central, Milwaukee and St. Paul, and the main line of the Chicago, St. Paul, Minneapolis and Omaha. No reports of the damage to these lines has been received except from the Illinois Central, the lines of which from Cherokee to Oswego are blocked by washed-out track and bridges.

LOSS IN SIOUX CITY.

The flood in the Floyd river which came past Le Mars and Merrill yesterday did great damage to the country, and reached here early this morning and the river rose about twelve feet. One hundred and fifty houses in the valley are partially submerged and families have moved to the hills.

The large sheet works and shoe factory, the mill and foundry in the suburbs of the town are closed. No loss of life reported here. Men are in from Merrill, eighteen miles east, who report the whole town swept away.

CROPS DESTROYED.

Fort Dodge, Ia., June 25.—The rain-storm of the night of the 24th, followed by the storm hundreds of acres of crops were devastated and the destruction to other property was enormous.

AT WILLIAMSTOWN.

TOPEKA, Ks., June 25.—This morning the heaviest rainfall of the season set in at this place and continued for several hours. Reports from along the railroad indicate that the storm is general only in the eastern part of the State. Both the Santa Fe and the Kansas Pacific roads are washed out between here and Lawrence, and all westbound trains are laid up at Lawrence, waiting until the track can be fixed. Washouts also occurred at Williamstown on the Missouri Pacific and Santa Fe. The damage to crops will be great.

A GENERAL DELUGE.

OMAHA, Neb., June 25.—Specials to the Bee from various parts of Nebraska indicate that last night's rain amounted to a general deluge. At Wahoo a house occupied by John Sanderson and family was struck by lightning and twice blown off its foundation by the force of the wind. The family were not injured. At Fremont rain fell in torrents for hours. Trains on the Fremont, Elkhorn & Missouri valley road were detained by washouts. In the vicinity of York the county bridges are nearly all washed out, especially in the southern section. Dwellings in low places in the town were invaded by the rising waters in the night, and the inhabitants were compelled to move.

At Harlan a 10-year-old daughter of John Johnson was drowned in a ravine. At Kearney many buildings were struck by lightning. One man was seriously hurt. The damage is great. At Grand Island four inches of water fell during the night. Much damage was done in town.

TWO TORNADOES.

HEMPSTEAD, TEXAS, June 25.—Two tornadoes within an hour visited this place yesterday and made other damage in the town. No one was injured.

A Probable Railroad War.

CHICAGO, June 25.—Disputes between Chairman Finley of the Western Passenger Association and the Chicago & Alton railroad culminated today in a ruling which will probably change the association. The Alton, some days ago, reduced the St. Louis rate to meet secret cuts. After some consideration Finley ordered all lines to reduce rates, but the Alton, asserting that the others were not acting in good faith, refused, and Finley fined the company $500, which they refused to pay.

Then the Alton asked authority to reduce the rate of St. Louis, Kansas City and Denver, to meet secret cuts. Finley today in ruling declared "the action of Alton by its past conduct has virtually forfeited all right to protection. This tribunal must see that Alton out of the association." Many railroad men are of the opinion that Finley exceeded his authority. The Alton will now act independent of the association.

Legislation will be given tomorrow of the lines asking to reduce the rate between Chicago and Denver from $55.50 to $30; between Chicago and Kansas City from $15.50 to $10; between Chicago and Leadville $7.50 to $5.

Quite a sensation was caused today by the announcement of the Burlington railroad that it will immediately increase the payment of passenger commissions in the Pacific territory, the reason given being that it has discovered the protection guaranteed by the board of rulings.

The Farmer and Taylor Fatalities.

LAWRENCE, Tenn., June 25.—A fight occurred between some of the members of the Farmer and Taylor families, living near Cornersville, resulting in one man Farmer coming out a warrant for John Taylor.

The trial took place yesterday and the relatives of both parties were present including the old man Nix, his son Van Nix and son-in-law, Frank McCornell and J. P. Langen and two boys, D. Taylor and Walter Taylor, aged about 16 years. The latter was armed. The other side consisted of Tom Taylor and sons—John, Bud, Blue and Jim Taylor. The suit was satisfactorily settled and all started for home, where words between Van Nix and John Taylor resulted in Nix shooting Taylor. The latter drew a knife and cut Nix in several places.

Relatives of both were soon on the ground, and a pitched battle ensued, in which rocks, knives, sticks and pistols were used. John Taylor, Tom Taylor, and Blue Taylor fatally wounded Frank McCornell, J. P. Langen and Van Nix are seriously wounded. Mrs. Taylor, the traveller, who ran out to quiet her brother, was painfully injured.

Say some dealers who try to sell a substitute preparation when a consumer calls for Hood's Sarsaparilla. Do not allow any such false statements as this induce you to buy what you do not want. Remember that the only reason for making it is that a few cents more profit will be made on the substitute, instead of giving the best medicine—Hood's Sarsaparilla. It is Peculiar to itself.

PARNELL'S WEDDING.

The Irish Demagogue Married Mrs. O'Shea Yesterday Morning at Steyning.

TWO SERVANTS WITNESSED THE CEREMONY.

The Famous Lady Drove the Bride Herself, to the Registrar's Office.

By Telegraph to the News.

PARNELL AND MRS. O'SHEA.

Their Wedding Took Place Yesterday in Secret.

LONDON, June 25.—It is learned that the marriage between Parnell and Mrs. O'Shea took place at 10 o'clock this morning. The only witnesses to the ceremony were two servants from the house of Mrs. O'Shea. The friends of both parties are quite anxious not to give any information about the marriage and promised to preserve the closest secrecy.

An order was given to have a nuptial breakfast at 11 o'clock, but this was countermanded when Parnell stopped at Brighton. When the carriages were ready Parnell and Mrs. O'Shea entered the carriage and orders were given to the coachman to drive westward. After the party left Brighton behind them, the driver was directed to proceed to Steyning by a circuitous route. Steyning was reached at 3 o'clock, at which time a heavy rain was falling.

Upon entering the town Mrs. O'Shea, who is familiar with the place and knew the registrar's office, relieved the coachman and drove directly to the office herself.

Parnell appeared to be well and in cheerful spirits, but occasionally threw a nervous glance around him, apparently being somewhat in fear lest the wedding party should be observed.

Mrs. O'Shea was in dark attire and wore a plain trimmed bonnet. She, too, was quite cheerful, and very vivacious both before and after the ceremony.

It is announced that a second religious ceremony will take place in London immediately, so as to satisfy the Catholics.

Mrs. Parnell was born at Wallingham Tower tonight. She and her husband Parnell were married this morning, but she declined to have any ceremony performed in church in London, there having been some difficulty in connection with the matter.

A DOMESTIC TRAGEDY.

[By Pacific Mail, Jeffers Magnate.]

It was so dark that known as between daylight and dark, which is almost all dark, and besides only the wind was therefore of daylight.

A big fellow, with a shock of light hair and a pair of bright, dark eyes that gazed helplessly before him, stamped among dimly observable bits of furniture across a large room.

"I'll have the gas lighted at once in my house," he muttered. Flinging himself down on a big leather chair in the room completely dark of all the dusky corners.

There was something under him! It felt soft and warm. He put his hand down and touched it. It didn't move, yet—yes, there was an ear, and there a cold nose.

He carried to his feet.

"Great universe!" he exclaimed, "it must be Fido!"

He carried Fido cold, warm black lumpy—yes, lumpy, lumpy. He held it up to moonlight, and stared. It surely was his sweetheart's most precious possession, tiny, dainty Fido, with his spaniel ears and curly tail.

It was such a clumsy piece of business. It was criminally careless. It was positively brutal. How should he tell Marion? It would break her heart. He hoarded the tears in her eyes, and the quiver in her voice and knew that he could not tell her.

He was excited, he heard her fluttering down the stairs. He had an overcoat on. There was a large pocket in it. Fido was very small. A moment later and Mrs. Pug! Fido was in the pocket, and our hero had retreated to his dusky corner.

He was unusually quiet during his call, and he kept himself at a greater distance from that sweet, confiding girl than was altogether compatible with the position they occupied towards each other.

Presently the Harmon girls came—he silently blessed those girls—and under cover of the flurry their entrance caused, he stole away.

It was still between daylight and dark. He walked two blocks. He crossed the street to where there was a vacant lot crowded by a high board fence, on which was a placard—"Throw no Bulldoh. Under Penalty of the Law."

He looked furtively about him. There was no one in sight. He lifted his strong right arm and hurled, with tremendous force, poor Fido into a common grave.

But, although the tobacco was thus easily removed from his side, the ugly spot upon his conscience was not gone.

The next day he called upon Marion, and that night, and the night to that, for there were but two weeks left before their marriage, and there were many things to talk over—what fine work Tiffany had done on the cards, what still finer work Pinard was going to make of the wedding breakfast, how the bridesmaids would look, and the best man and the ushers.

But, alas! alas! alas, between, through it all ran constant wail of lamentation.

On the evening following his escapade Jarvis Eastlake had been met by a fearful smile, he had grazed, nonchalant-stricken, take eyes that were red with weeping. Fido was lost. They had searched diligently but he could not be found.

"The last I saw of him," sobbed the dear voice, "was when I left him in here yesterday afternoon, curled up asleep in the big arm chair you call your—you didn't see him, I suppose?"

"Why, it was—it was pretty dark by that time," Eastlake faltered.

"Yes, of course, but couldn't you get a quick notice in one of the papers?"

"In every thousand copies of them," and he rubbed out a deep, big seed.

There was a momentary relief in offering absently tears towards, though the motion was changed with a deeper sense of villainy.

They were married. The day was perfect. Pinard did even better than was expected with the breakfast; the bridesmaids were ravishing, and the bride was a dream of beauty.

Jarvis contact upon her with a mien of quiet possession as she clinged a little deeply into the form of the dully, black bridegroom. The ushers were looking unusually anxious, his best man had told him fifty times already that he was the happiest man in the whole city. Her lip trembled, she whispered her first widely confidence in his forever and

"Dear Jim! Poor! how he would have resisted in all this finding to be loved to us."

Many of the first days of his married life were spent in Paris. A young Eastlake, but still the brother was all too great in which will theories as to Fido's whereabouts were hazarded, and the poor Jarvis was expected to pursue the subject with animation and a never-failing interest.

Often and often when he came home to dinner he would find a piece of bone in his soup, now, he was cut to a lock of deep depression. Marion had been imploring about Fido, painfully he might be, and he was sure he was a prey of some occult reason. Her faith in his ultimate return was boundless.

"I could not make a way with this opening, never, never, I know, darling." Jarvis signed on all three occasions. But, sure way, courageous as he was in most respects, his tender heart rebelled at the thought of Marion's spoiled home.

At length, after he had begun to think of more than one dear face where he had slipped into his heart cost and far, when there was another incentive beside his wife's astounding smile to hasten his footsteps up Hendle's as short was falling, he felt he had being hopes that the new anything and quite crowded out all memory of the cur to Marion's thoughts. The Eastlake's lived in the chief second flat crumbling into dust.

One night, when he had hurried home earlier than usual, and was best in his study, he was in a pile of chubby hands just strong enough to pull, buried deep in his sitting half—the tics of parentage were passing close on him, but he was absorbed with pride and love—his wife's platonic value hung out a low, silvery laugh.

"I have been thinking so much today, dear, how lazy will enjoy playing with Fido when he comes back."

Human endurance snapped into a thousand pieces. He should tell her now it is killed for to hear, Eastlake thought, savagely. Disentangling his feet from that abused chair, he raised his head to look at her directly into his wife's wistful eyes.

"Baby will never play with Fido," he said.

Marion leaned forward, her face full of surprise.

"Why do you speak like that? Have you found any clue?"

"Fido is dead," was the answer.

"Oh! how do you know? How could you possibly know?"

"Because I broke his neck more than a year ago."

There is no stopping a man when he begins to unbosom himself, and Eastlake now elaborated every detail of the fatal tragedy.

It was quite easy after he had once begun. He was old not faint, or even cry. The boy was meaning for more half to pull. Marion took him in her arms, and held him close against her breast. He stuffed his fat fists her mouth, other clinches fashion of the very prisoner. He gazed into his face with unutterably affection, her voice was subdued by the tone of the boy.

"I wonder you did not tell me before," she said, "to spare me this little worry."

Threatening to Kill the Whites and Take the Children from School.

REINFORCEMENT ASKED FOR TO PROTECT IT.

The Leaders to be Arrested and Held Pending a Settlement of the Trouble.

By Telegraph to the News.

THE ARIZONA INDIANS.

Soldiers Wanted to Protect the School.

WASHINGTON, June 25.—Commissioner Morgan of the Indian Bureau received a telegram from Superintendent Collins of the Moqui Pueblo Indian school in Northeastern Arizona in Navajo, in which he stated that the Indians were threatening to kill the whites and forcibly take their children from the school, and asked that military reinforcements be sent to the school.

The Commissioner referred the telegram to the War Department, with recommendation that additional reinforcements be forwarded and the disturbers in the present trouble be arrested and held pending a settlement of the difficulty. The present trouble has grown out of the fact that the Indians opposed having their children attend school.

Two Live Stock Companies.

CHICAGO, June 25.—In the Appellate court today an opinion was handed down in the case of the American Live Stock company against the Colorado Live Stock company, in which the court set the defendant to allow the plaintiff to do business in its yards. The lower court dissolved the injunction secured by the complainant, and dismissed the bill. An appeal was taken. In affirming the decision, the higher court holds that a court of equity cannot compel one man or a thousand to deal with another either by direct command or by enjoining the thousand agreeing among themselves with whom they will deal.

The Examination at West Point.

WASHINGTON, June 25.—As a result of the recent examinations at West Point twenty-nine out of the total of 148 applicants have been admitted to the United States Military academy to form the new class. Among those admitted were Dennis Mahan Conner and G. H. Willoughby of California.

A Finish with Shooting.

INDIANAPOLIS, June 25.—This afternoon a shooting occurred at a colored picnic from Indianapolis at Maxwell, in Hancock county, in which three men were wounded, one fatally.

The shooting was the result of an old feud between Ed Harvey and John Banks. During the ballade the pleasure-seekers were in a panic and the official reports of a wholesale line of life were circulated.

Beardsley's Statement.

PHILADELPHIA, June 25.—The experts working for the Baldwin bank today began the preparation for a report upon Faulon, the treasurer's statement. It is generally conceded that the statement of Beardsley will be proved to be most important particulars. An effort will be made, it is said, to show that nearly $300,000 of the public funds will be diverted temporarily, at least, into the Bradford mills. It will also be pointed out that during his two years' incumbency of the treasurership more than $3,000,000 passed through the fund in the Keystone bank in which Mr. Beardsley kept his private money.

HALIFAX, June 25.—The gold mine at Tangier, owned by Frederick Hendsbb of Boston, was sold today under a will of attachment. The sum involved is large.

They tried a march upon the Labor Exchange, but when the police tried to disperse them, opened a fight, in which the strikers were soon dispersed and a number arrested. This afternoon a meeting of the council of ministers was held at the Elysee palace and the whole situation discussed.

For the "Philadelphia."

WASHINGTON, June 25.—Orders have gone forward to the New York navy yards for the manufacture of two new wooden masts for the cruiser "Philadelphia," to replace the three steel masts on the vessel. Failure at Stetson & Co.

NEW YORK, June 25.—Geo. Stetson & Co., pig iron commission merchants, failed today and their general partners, William M. Van Vorhis and Herman F. Schmidt, made a general assignment without preferences. Capital, $14,000.

Gold and Silver.

LONDON, June 25.—The Daily News, in its financial article yesterday morning, says that the continued drain of gold from America is gradually tending to the inevitable adoption of a virtual silver standard. Gold exports may succeed in recovering a portion of the $12,000,000 of gold already exported this year, but every year brings it nearer the time when silver certificates will be forced into circulation. When the change comes there might be a rush for silver, but it is more likely that the silver already coined will suffice for currency purposes with paper. Therefore, the loss of an unlimited new demand for silver is unwarranted.

A German Spy Sentenced to Prison.

PARIS, June 25.—The Tribunal of the Seine today sentenced a German named Schneider to five years' imprisonment for taking photographs of French fortifications.

Reduction of Grain Duties.

PARIS, June 25.—The senate has accepted the bill of the Chamber fixing July 15th as the date upon which the reduction of grain duties shall go into effect.

Advance of Price in Sugar.

NEW YORK, June 25.—In relation to the advance of 50 per cent in raw sugar, Treasurer Searles of the Havemeyer Sugar Refining company said this morning that the rise was not unexpected, as there was always a demand for more sugar at this time of the year than any other. The cause that the Sugar Trust was forcing up the price of sugar, because it had secured control of most of the sugar crops, was absolutely denied by Searles.

The Irish Land Bill.

LONDON, June 25.—The Earl of Chingall (Conservative), in the House of Lords today, moved that the Irish Land bill be read for a second time. The Duke of Argyle objected on the ground that it would destroy the security of contract and limited the purchase of land under the bill to the existing tenants and would lead to further demands for a reduction of rents.

Cornell University Wins After a Hard Contest.

NEW LONDON, Conn., June 25.—One of the most exciting races ever rowed on the Thames took place this afternoon over a three-mile course between Cornell, University of Pennsylvania and Columbia University, eight-oared crews. Cornell won after a hard contest, in the fast time of 14 minutes 27 seconds; University of Pennsylvania was followed by four lengths time, 14:42; Columbia was a bad third, five lengths behind the Pennsylvania crew and eight lengths behind Cornell.

Cornell's time established a new record, the previous best time being 14:45, over the same course by the same crew the last year. The course of the day was the most interesting show seen by the Columbia crew. The feature was the remarkably close race between Cornell and Pennsylvania, each of the crews holding the lead at times before the first mile had been rowed, and for two miles it was impossible to name the winner.

The conditions for fast time were excellent. The water was smooth, a strong current running, also setting. Pennsylvania got the best of the start and their boat jumped a few feet in the front, with Cornell second, while Columbia, trailing, making a poor start seemed to lose at every stroke.

In the first ten or twelve strokes Cornell's boat shot up even with Pennsylvania. For six eights of a mile they were so close that the lead could not be carry contest to either crew. Starting the half mile the flag of Pennsylvania forged nearly a half length ahead of Cornell, with Columbia two lengths behind, and hopelessly out of the race. About three-quarters of a mile from the start Pennsylvania increased its speed to nearly a length. Cornell here made a great stand and gradually crept up alongside of Pennsylvania, and as the boats were near the mile flag they were on even terms.

For the one mile to the two-mile flag the race between Cornell and Pennsylvania was most exciting. It was the decisive point of the race. Cornell worked like beavers to gain the advantage, and Pennsylvania fully as hard to save themselves from defeat. At the two-mile flag Cornell showed clear of Pennsylvania's bow, with Columbia five lengths behind Pennsylvania.

Pennsylvania made another effort to regain the lead and succeeded in lapping Cornell's bow, but the effort was too much, and the Cornell men responding to the final call, hit their strokes up to forty-one and ran away from Pennsylvania, finishing strong winners, with Columbia at the rear of the procession. Cornell has now won thirteen straight races.
