They Leave Nothing Behind But Smoke and a Smell

· HERE are two branches in the study of riches-getting money and keeping it from .getting away. When a fellow has saved

$1,000 and every nickel represents . a walk home instead of a ride on the trolley, and every dollar stands for clgars he didn't smoke and for shows he didn't see, it naturally seems as if that money, when it's invested, ought to declare dividends every 30 days. But almost any scheme which advertises that it will make small investors rich quick is like one of these Yellowstone geysers that spout up straight from hades with a boom and a roar; its bound to return to its native brimstone sconer or later, leaving nothing behind it but a little smoke and a smell of burned money-your money

If a fellow would stop to think he would understand that when money comes so hard it isn't reasonable to expect that it can go out and find more easy. But the great trouble is that a good many investors don't stop to think or else lat plausible strangers do their thinking for them. That's why most young men have tucked away with their college diploma and the picture of their first girl an impressive deed to a lot in Nowhere-on-the-Noth-ingness, or a beautiful certificate of stock in the Gushing Girlie oil well that has never gushed anything but lles and promises.

Young men are told that the first thousand dollars comes hard and that after that it comes easier. So it does-just a thousand dollars plus interest easier, and easier through all the in-ereased efficiency that self denial and

It down't seem like much when you. It down't seem like much when you take your savings bank book around at the end of the year and get a little $39 or $49 interest added or when you cash in the coupon on the bond that you've bought, yet your bank book and your bond are still true to you. But if you'd had your thousand in one of these 50 per cent bleached blond schemes it would have lit out long

HEN you differ with your wife in the wrong, because you'll find that after you've proved it to her she'll still have a lot of talk left that she hasn't used. Of course it isn't natural and it isn't safe for married people; and especially young married people, not to quarrel a little, but you'll save a heap of trouble if you make it a rule never to refuse a request before breakfast and never to grant one after dinner. I don't know why it is, but most women get up in the morning as cheerful as a breakfast food ad, while a man will snort and paw for trouble the minute his hoofs touch the floor. Then, if you'll temember that the longer the last word is kept the bitterer it gets and that your wife is bound to have it anyway, you'll cut the rest of your quarrels so short that she'll never find out just how much meanness there is in you. Be the silent partner at home and the thinking one at the office. Do your loose talking in your sleep.

your loose talking in your sleep. Of course if you get a woman who's really fond of quarreling there isn't any special use in keeping still, because she'll holler if you talk back and yell if you don't. The best that you can do is to pretend that you've got a chronic case of earache and keep your eass stuffed with cotton. Then, like as not, she'll buy you one of these things that you hold in your mouth so that you you hold in your mouth so that you can hear through your teeth.

Wrong Post= Mortem. Why So Many Remnants Become Merely Remains.

EALTH is like any inheritance; you can spend the interest in work and play, but you mustn't break into the principal. Once you do and it's only a matter of time before you've got to place the remnants in the hands of a doctor as receiver, and receivers are mighty partial to fees and mighty slow to let go. But if you don't work with him to get the business back on a sound basis there's no such thing as any further voluntary pro-

You can't too soon make it a rule to invest only on your own know and nev-er on somebody cise's say so. You may lose some profits by this policy, but you're bound to miss a lot of losses of the board to miss a lot of but you're bound to miss a lot of losses. Often the best reason for keep-ing out of a thing is that everybody else is going into it. A crowd's al-ways dangerous; it first pushes prices up beyond reason and then down be-low common sense. The time to buy is before the crowd comes in or after it going out the down sense. it gets out. It'll always come back to a good thing when it's been pushed up again to the point where it's a bad thing

It's better to go slow and lose a good bargain occasionally than to go fast and never get a bargain. It's all right to take a long chance now and then when you've got a long bank account. but it's been my experience that most of the long chances are taken by the fellows with short bank accounts. Tou'll meet a lot of men in Chicago who'll point out the corner of State and Madison and tell you that when they first came to the city they were offered that lot for a hundred dollars and that It's been the crowning regret of their lives that they didn't buy it. But for every genuine case of crowning regret because a fellow didn't buy there are a thousand because he did. Don't let it make you feverish the next time you see one of those won't you come in quick and get rich sudden ads. Freeze up and on to your thousand, and by and by you'll get a chance to buy a little stock in the concern for which you're working and which you know some-thing about, or to take that thousand and one or two more like it and buy an interest in a nice little business of the breed that you've been grooming and currying for some other fellow. But if your money's tied up in the sudden millionaire business you'll have to keep right on clerking.

A man's fortune should grow like a tree—In rings around the parent trunk. It'll be slow work at first, but every ring will be a little wider and a little thicker than the last one, and by and by you'll be big enough and strong enough to shed a few acorns within easy reaching distance and so start a nice little nursery of your own from which you can saw wood some day, Whenever you hear of a man's jump-ing suddenly into prominence and for-

to keep in good condition, because about everything that makes for poor health has to get into you right under your nose. Yet a fellow 'll load up with ple and buckwheats for breakfast and go around wondering about his stomach ache as if it were a pui up job that had been played on him when he wasn't looking; or he'll go through his dinner pickling each course in a different brand of alcohol and sob out on the butler's shoulder that the booze isn't as pure as it used to be when he was a boy; or he'll come home at midnight singing "The Old Oaken Bucket" and act generally as if all the water in the world were in the well on old homestead and the mortgage on that had been foreclosed; or from 8 p. m. to 3 g. x. he'll sit in a small game with a large cigar, breathing blend of light blue cigarette smoke and dark blue cuss words, and next day, when his heart beats four and skips two and he has that queer hopping sensation in the knees, he'll com-plain bitterly to the other clerks that this confining office work is killing

I might add that I don't like the effects of drinking any more than the after effects, and for this reason you should never hire men who drink dur-ing business hours. When a fellow adds up on whisky he's api to see too many igures, and when he subtracts on beer he's apt to see too few. Of course, with all the care in the world, a fellow's likely to catch things, but there's no sense in sending out invitations to a lot of miscellaneous microbes and pretending when they call that it's a surprise party. Bad health hates a man who is friendly with its enemies-hard work, plain food and pure air. More men die from worry than from overwork: more stuff them-selves to death than die of starvation; more break their necks falling down the cellar stairs than climbing mountains. If the human animal reposed less confidence in his stomach and more in his legs the streets would be full of healthy men walking down to business. Remember that a man al-ways rides to his grave; he never walks there.

How to Treat the Turkeycock Man

It's only a mighty big man that doesn't care whether the people whom he meets believe that he's big, but the smaller a fellow is the bigger he wants to appear. He hasn't anything of his own in his head that's of any special importance, so just to prove that he's a trusted employe and in the confidence of the boss he gives away everything he knows about the business, and, as that isn't much, he lies a little to swell it up. It's a mighty curious thing how some men will lie a little to impress people who are laughing at them, will drink a little in order to sit around with people who want to get away from them and will even steal a little to "go into society" with people who sneer at them.

The most important animal in the world is a turkeycock. You let him get among the chickens on the manure pile behind the barn, with his wings held down stiff, his tall feathers stuck up starchy, his wishbone poked out perky and gobbling for room to show his fancy steps, and he's a mighty im-pressive fowl. But a small boy with pressive low. But a small boy with a rock and a good aim can make him run a mile. When you see a fellow swelling up and telling his firm's se-crets, holler "Cash!" and you'll stam-pede him back to his hall bedroom.---From "Old Gorgon Graham; More Let-ters From a Self-Made Merchant to His Son," by George Horace Lorimer,
