CONGRESSIONAL.

SENATE.

Petition of S. B. Anthony--More Retrenchment.

WASHINGTON, 22.—Sargent presented a long petition of Susan B. Anthony, relating the circumstances of her registering and voting in Rochester, and her subsequent indictment and trial for illegal voting before Judge Hunt, of the U. S. supreme court, stating that her trial was not a fair one, and her conviction in violation of the statute, and asking that the fine imposed on her be remitted; referred.

Sherman introduced a resolution instructing the committee on public buildings and grounds to inquire into the expediency of suspending the expenditure of appropriations for all public buildings commenced, and to cover all unexpended appropriations into the treasury; agreed to.

A resolution from the committee on printing, prohibiting the printing in the Congressional Record of any speech or part of a speech not actually delivered in the Senate or House of Representatives, was passed.

Morton submitted the following resolution, which was laid on the table and ordered printed:

"Resolved, that the committee on transportation routes to the seaboard be instructed to consider and report a bill creating a commission of five eminent and skilled persons to be appointed by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, who shall examine and report to Congress what legislation is necessary and practicable in regard to inter-State railroads, to promote the following objects, viz., speedy transportation, at reasonable rates, of freight and passengers, with safety and comfort to the passengers, by providing for the inspection of bridges, tracks, locomotives and cars, and to reform any abuses that may exist in consequence of extortion and unjust discriminations in the transportation of freight and passengers, and, in general, what regulations are necessary to promote the efficiency of the railroads, the interests of commerce and the convenience and safety of the traveling public."

Boutwell on the Currency.

On the expiration of the morning hour the consideration of the resolution of the finance committee was resumed. Boutwell addressed the Senate. He referred, in his opening remarks, to Schurz' criticism of his opinions which, during the past five years, were embodied in the financial policy of the government, and said that while the recent financial panic had taught a lesson, it did not show that a policy which had been tried should be abandoned for one not tested. He claimed that the number of the failures of legitimate business men during the late panic were few; the laboring classes alone have suffered, and are alone entitled to consideration in furnishing relief, and in his belief an inflation of the currency would inflict lasting injury upon working men. He contended that the large accumulation of currency in New York, and the consequent speculation, was the cause of the panic and financial disasters there, and he urged that an inflation of the currency of the country would, in time, produce similar results; he was therefore opposed to any increase in the volume of the paper currency, but he was also opposed to any contraction of it. He then took up the question of the forty-four millions reserve, and declared that the right of the Secretary of the Treasury to reissue it ought never to have been questioned, and argued at length in support of his well known views on this subject. He denied the correctness of the statement that in the past four years no progress towards specie resumption had been made, and cited the decreasing value of gold during that time in proof of his view, a decrease which he attributed mainly to the increased business of the country. In reply to a question he said that the decrease in 1869 was largely attributable to the passage, by Congress, of the act to strengthen the public credit. He opposed the free banking system, as unreliable, and he opposed Sumner's con-convertible bond proposition, on the ground that it would result in contraction and in the hoarding of money, and bonds would also be bought up by combinations of speculators, who would be able to use them to increase the currency, and inflate prices to suit their schemes. The plan of resuming coin payments in a year from now, he argued, was impracticable, the government had not gold enough, and could not get it. He was also opposed to borrowing money with which to resume, and he finally concluded by saying that there is but one remedy and one means to ward off evil, and that is taxation. He would not say what, but taxation must be increased, or else there would be the disgrace of borrowing money to pay the expenses of the government, and he would put burdens on the people of the country before submitting to disgrace.

Boutwell having, in the course of his speech, referred to the property of the South, Gordon gave statistics, showing a decrease in the value of farms and other real estate, and in the amount of farm products in Georgia between 1860 and 1870, of from thirty to fifty per cent.

Adjourned.

Secretary of Treasury on Cestoms.

The Secretary of the Treasury has written a letter to Senator Chandler, chairman of the Senate committee on commerce, stating, by invitation of the committee, his views on the subjects covered by Fenton's bill to regulate the customs service, and depositions, seizure, penalties and forfeitures. The Secretary goes into an extended discussion of these and commercial subjects, and recommends the following measures: first, a revision and consolidation of the tariff acts; second, the substitution, as far as practical, of specific in lieu of ad-valorem duties; third, the abolition of the present system of moieties, with one exception, to wit, that where attempts at smuggling are determined, or where acts of smuggling are accomplished, and the goods afterwards seized, the seizing officer or officers, and the informer or informers, if any, shall be entitled, in equal parts, to one sixth of the net proceeds; or if there be no informer, the seizing officer is to be entitled to the whole of such one tenth; fourth, that a provision be made for a special fund to be applied, under suitable restrictions, to the compensation of private persons affording information which shall enable the government to detect and punish frauds upon customs revenue other than those involved in actual or attempted smuggling; fifth, that the law authorizing the seizure of books and papers be so amended as to afford due protection to the rights of private parties; sixth, that no compromise of any fine, penalty or forfeiture, occurring from a violation of the navigation or customs and revenue laws shall be lawful until after a judicial investigation of the facts; and seventh, that the compensation of custom officers be graded in accordance with the importance and responsibility of their positions.

HOUSE.

Tax on Matches and Bank Checks--Legal Tender Law.

Dawes, from the committee on Ways and Means, reported back, adversely, the bills to repeal all taxation on bank checks and friction matches. He stated that there was a strong desire in the community to remove these taxes, and he therefore, instead of having the adverse reports laid on the table sub silentio, would move their reference to a committee of the whole for discussion, and to make them a special order for Wednesday.

Monroe stated that he had introduced bills to repeal the stamp tax on matches, and he submitted some reasons why the adverse report should be rejected, and the bills passed.

Dawes' motion was agreed to.

Dawes also reported a bill to fix the amount of legal tender notes at four hundred million. This bill was prepared by Beck, and it declares that the provisions of the law existing prior to the act of April 12th, 1866, are in force so as to authorize the amount of legal tender notes of the United States to amount to four hundred millions in general circulation, and that the total amount of United States notes issued, or to be issued, shall never exceed four hundred millions. He moved to make the bill a special order in a committee of the whole for Thursday next.

Maynard, chairman of the committee on banking and currency, while disavowing any feeling of jealousy between the two committees, suggested that the consideration of this bill might be arranged to go on in connection with such measure and policy as the committee on banking and currency might present.

Dawes' motion was agreed to, and the bill was made a special order for Thursday next in a committee of the whole.

EASTERN.

Legal Tender Bill--General Pope Against Army Reduction--Protest of Indian Council.

WASHINGTON, 22.—The following is the text of a bill reported to-day, by Dawes, from the committee of ways and means:

"Whereas, the existing uncertainty as to whether the legal tender notes now authorized by law to be kept in general circulation is 356 millions or 400 millions, is calculated to derange the business of the country and to unsettle values, therefore, be it enacted that the provisions of the law existing prior to the passage of the act approved April 12, 1866, entitled an act to amend an act to provide ways and means to support the government, approved March 3rd, 1865, be and the same are hereby declared to be in force, so as to authorize legal tender notes of the U. S. to the amount of four hundred million dollars, to be kept in general circulation; and the total amount of U. S. notes issued or to be issued shall never exceed four hundred millions.

Major General Pope was before the House military committee to-day, to give his views against the reduction of the army.

In the House to-day, the protest of the general council of the Indian country organized under the treaties of '66, against the establishment of a territorial government in that country, was presented.
