von Caprivi and the papal nuncio at Munich have arrived at an agreement whereby the centers will hereafter support the government in return for concessions on educational questions and the re-admission of Catholic orders.

The Race for Homes in the Indian Lands.

GUTHRIE, I. T., Sept. 19.—The excitement has grown hourly greater among the people who will make the race for home in the Indian lands next Tuesday. There are several causes for the excitement, chief among them being the large number of negroes, who have gathered by hundreds at Langston, the Oklahoma negro colony, and who intend to move on more upon the Cimarron valley, the best, perhaps, of all the new lands, and within three to the exclusion of all other settlers. Many white settlers, among them being numbers of desperate and unscrupulous cowboys, object to the negroes' plans and will take desperate chances to prevent them claims in the very face of the negro hosts. The most desperate say they will stop at force the wholesale settlement of negroes in the valley. The sober heads, however, know that the race will be to the swift, no matter what his color. If the negroes get there first, the land is theirs, if the whites outrun the negroes, the latter must look elsewhere for claims.

Another cause of excitement is the Indians' hatred for the negroes. The Sioux and Pawnee claim that their lands were sold to the government under the distinct agreement that they were to be opened to "white settlement." The Cimarron valley includes a portion of those lands, and between the hostile Indians and the desperate cowboys, the negro is having an exciting time of it.

Still another cause for excitement is the uncertainty as to just what lands may be claimed by an ordinary settler. A settler may make a successful race for a certain section of land and very claim it, but when he goes to the land office to file his claim, he may find he has claimed an Indian's allotment or an old soldier's preemption.

The land office here is besieged by veterans or their representatives. They have formed a long line, which stretches from the door three or four squares. In the line are several old soldiers and many speculators, who have purchased for a trifling sum the declaratory statements of the old soldiers, and who sell them to the highest bidder. Others have taken place in line simply to sell them to some less fortunate person.

Out on the border there is little excitement; it is a restless expectancy there. The people are camped in prairie schooners, tents and frame huts for the most part, but many have no covering except a blanket, with the sod for a bed.

"WHITE" MEANS PLACE ARMS.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 19.—The secretary of the interior has instructed the registers and receivers of the land offices at Oklahoma City and Guthrie that the words "white settlement" in the Sac and Fox agreement do not refer to color, but means that persons qualified under the laws of the United States, without regard to color, may make settlement.

That Mexican Revolution.

St. Louis, Sept. 19.—A dispatch from Laredo, Tex., says that the revolutionary movement engineered by Garcia and Sandoval will turn out to have been a hoax, and that it is for the sole purpose of giving notoriety to the two leaders, so that they can continue their careers and secure contributions from ignorant Mexicans on this side of the river on various pretenses, as they have heretofore.

A dispatch from the City of Mexico says: "The revolutionary movement at Laredo is a subject of ridicule here. The invading force of General Francisco Ruato Sandoval will, if met by the federal forces, be given a warm reception. Sandoval was expelled from this city and country for million two years ago. It will be remembered that several months ago Sandoval attempted a raid into this republic, but was forced to cross the Rio Grande with his companions, who were discovered in their hiding places on the banks in a made condition. He was released on bail and, after trial, set free. It is generally thought the sensational pronunciamento of Sandoval and Garcia is considered a most excellent joke.

AT CAMARGO.

NEW ORLEANS, Sept. 19.—The Times-Democrat's Galveston, Tex., special says: "Two hundred Mexican troops from Mier, Camargo and Reynosa are watching the revolutionists near Camargo. Great excitement is felt in Camargo from the seeming action of the troops against them. Camargo and Mier are patrolled by citizens. The soldiers are absent and the revolutionists take arms, horses and provisions promiscuously. One revolutionist was wounded by a custom guard on the 16th. Troops are coming from Nuevo Leon and other points. There is much excitement at Camargo and Mier.

In answer to an inquiry from the war department General Stanley, commanding the department of Texas, telegraphed today that his forces were on the alert and watching closely for any signs of the filibustering expeditions attending to Texas across the Rio Grande into Mexico. The United States troops will not undertake to follow any raiding party in Mexico, but will immediately arrest the members of any such party found on our side of the boundary.

A Small Cyclone at the Falls.

Buffalo visitors at the Clifton House on Sunday were the spectators of an atmospheric commotion at the falls the like of which has not been seen within the memory of the oldest inhabitant. Between 4 and 5 o'clock heavy black clouds appeared in the heavens of what proved to be a cyclone of no small proportions, though fortunately it left comparatively little destruction of property and not an hour's time in duration. Those from the gorge of the Clifton House soon saw that the first force of the wind was being felt at the bottom of the river and under the Cataract Bridge.

It lifted up the concrete basin of water that dissipates the force of the fall of the Mist when they operate in concert and carried it up above the falls in a huge swirl that resembled the boiling mass from some lofty cataract. For a few moments it was as clear of spray as for the falls that one could see where the mighty waves of water strike the river bottom. For several minutes this phenomenon lasted, and left no impression on the observers that the effect will cease be forgotten. At the time, also, the river near and below Lewiston was being lashed into foam by the force of the winds, which seemed to exert their force at first from the direction from up the basin.—Buffalo Commercial.

Scenic Photographs.

Mr. Albert S. Green, an American photographer, has succeeded in taking series of making the camera a source of amusement by the production of "ghost" or "shadow" photographs, for example, a seated man coming back in tears from his late spouse. Takes a background of the proper size for photographing and black material. Puts the subject, dressed in white or in light clothing, in the right attitude in the right or left of the center of the background, then focus the camera and expose one plate for half a second. The impression will be that of a shadowy and ghostlike figure. Take a chair and table, placing the chair in the center of the background, and the table on the side of the room. Then proceed:

Put the subject in the chair, with the head turned to the ghost figure again, and give the plate a full exposure, which, if the light is good, should be about two seconds. Develop and print in the usual way. Any object to be seen through the ghost should be photographed with Blown smoke expands before falling the photo of the ghost. Other devices of the kind are in the experiment, but it will be more interesting to have them be the ingenuity of the amateur.—New York Advertiser.

Fishing for Bucks.

In India an ingenious method is practiced for taking bucks on a line, which is attached at one end to a flexible stick stuck up in the mud, the other extremity having a double pointed needle of bone attached to it. The latter is baited by dangling upon it some grains of corn. Presently the unwary buck Mr. Buck, swallows the needle and finds himself a captive the moment he tries to fly away. In old times the Cape Cod Indians used to catch eels in this way, and perhaps they took at their engages. To catch them may these old fishing lines with hooks on the ends, to which were attached chunks of red flint. The latter by a rod because of the old fire-locks and muzzle guns and other tools and fishing tools were quickly paled in, shined and dropped up.—Interview in Washington Star.

THE ROMANCE OF BUCCANANS LIFE

Sets Goods and a Description for Sale. Its Causes of a Life of Sorrow.

A Bloomington lady told me the other day the true reason why James Buchanan, the fifteenth president of the United States, never married. She said he lived in Lancaster, Pa., and it was over this form any that President Buchanan lived (whose "at home") and died. I quote her own words:

"When I was a girl and a young lady at home I used to know Mr. Buchanan quite well. Father was one of his intimate friends, and used to spend a good deal of time—mostly at his country place, Wheatland, about a mile from Lancaster. They had a band of sympathy between them; both were Democrats. Why, he used to come to our house and I remember the expression on his face and the twinkle in his eye as he passed the old sayings to my other sister. 'When a younger sister is married first the elder has to sit on the fence and swear for turn. You must dance in your stocking feet tonight.'

"He was a tall, fine looking man, with silvery white hair, generally dressed in black broadcloth, black satin vest, and wore the old fashioned high linen collar. One great peculiarity of his was carrying his hand on one side.

"He told my father about the love affair. I've heard it dozens of times. He was engaged to Miss Coleman, of Lancaster, and then, too, Ruth Miss Rose Hubley, also very much in love with him and mentally jealous of Miss Coleman. The course of true love was running smoothly for the two lovers until Miss Hubley received a letter from Mr. Buchanan had been out of town on some business, returned late one afternoon to the city, and on his way home he passed by where Miss Hubley lived. She called him into the house, and he was there some minutes, and then went directly home to get his supper.

"As inequality happens, some gossiping neighbors either saw it or Miss Hubley herself took pains to inform Miss Coleman that Mr Buchanan had called at the office lady's home five, at dusk engaged to her. She resented it, and when Mr. Buchanan next spoke to that evening declined to see him. The next day he went up to Philadelphia on an early train and with her father. He went on later in the day to go with the two gentlemen to the theatre in the evening. She did not appear as usual, took all the herself and hastily declined to go to the theatre or anywhere else Mr. Buchanan. When they returned she was a corpse, and was brought to Lancaster and buried there. Heart disease was given as the cause.

"The other lady lived to be an old maid and suffered an awful life. She was standing before an open grate, warming her lonely behind her, when her clothing caught fire and she was burned to death. Mr. Buchanan never forgot Miss Coleman. Were he dead he said that he wanted to be buried in Woodlawn Hill cemetery, because when she was living they used to walk out that way together."—Minneapolis Tribune.

Another Victim Gone.

It is an every day occurrence to lose individual existences of surpriseover the brilliant, successful career of an apparently unconquerable man or woman.

To save my life I can see nothing remarkable in her," is what the amateur says, with rather fretful impatience, complaining—and yet, one by one, the triumphant worker after fortune capture every citadel, storm the fortress and finally place her colors on the highest turret for all the world to show.

Of course, on the over does see the one thing able to accomplish these results, and that is Electric Bitters. Hard indeed the case that is done in the short or cold hours when the sun of manhood is about over dipping away at an hour and breathing life and activity into it by sheer force of will—over and over again, the same old story of heroic and hard, until one morrow is here lack of blood gives an excuse for want of fortune.

In material matters genius, unless supplemented by energy, does not count for opposite. While, on the other hand, grit is an independent factor, spinning flax out of hay and long straws, with nothing of a distaff hand, and only eating for the end in view.—Boston Herald.

Where the Real Fun Comes In.

The sport of sailing is not fun if you don't get wet. I recollect, in company with a friend who was a veritable "land lubber," in a high wind I skimmed over Chautauqua's blue waters, home along by the "white wings." After an hour's splendid sport we returned to land, and my friend toward a sight of relief. "How did you enjoy it?" said I. "Oh, splendid, splendid!" was the reply. "I kept the thing all the time! we ever got to show alive what a magnificent time we will have had." I hope to take this friend to sail again, for I always am pleased to know of real and unalloyed enjoyment on the part of those who are with me.—Chautauqua Assembly Herald.

Rubber Heels Protect Glass.

When you travel be sure and take with you a few rubber heels, such as are to be found at any stationer's. Hooghlasses and bottles can be mended from breakage by slipping a couple over each article, in case of fracture, but care should be taken to keep the stopper in as well. It is curious that such a simple device should be an adequate protection, but we are assured it is the safest way to protect anything made of glass.—New York Tribune.

The republic that Queen Victoria displayed in giving such a warm and generous welcome to the French fleet will go far to dispel any feeling that England is further of Germany than she is of France. Not even a Frenchman could find reason for wounded vanity in the cheering reception the sailors from the republic received everywhere in England. Yet it was even better than statesmanship.

Scrofula

is more universally diffused than any other hereditary disease, and for this simple reason. Among the hoppers and heirlooms handed down from generation to generation, none are so common as some taint in the lymphatics, which are composed of white tissue. There is a period of life when the whole body seems to be specially susceptible to this form of disease. But there is a period when the system is peculiarly susceptible to this specific disease. But there is a period when the system is peculiarly susceptible to this specific disease. But there is a period when the system is peculiarly susceptible to this specific disease, whether hereditary or acquired. It is Hood's Sarsaparilla, which expels every trace of the disease and gives to the blood the vigorous life-giving qualities which Hood's Sarsaparilla imparts to the blood.

"When my boy was two years old he was attacked and continued to have a long time with scrofula sores. The physicians failed to do him any good. I tried to get him Hood's Sarsaparilla, which we did. Two bottles cured him. He is now 10 years old and has had no sign of scrofula. We recommend Hood's Sarsaparilla and we speak."—MRS. E. C. COOPER, 8 Kane St., Gardner, Mass.
