THE INVESTIGATION

Of the Alleged Silver Pools. The Committee Willing to Pay the Expenses of Oversly.

DOCKERY READS A DETAILED STATEMENT OF FACTS.

The Reports of a Bribery Committee Instructive Reading Matter.

By Telegraph to the News.

MR. OWENBY.

The Rock-Island Witness Will Appear, if His Expenses are Paid.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30.—The silver pool committee has received a telegram from Congressman Mason of Illinois, stating that he has seen Owenby and that the much-wanted witness consents to appear if his expenses are paid. Mason was requested to purchase Owenby a ticket and inform him that his expenses would be paid by the committee. Sergeant of the Sixth Deseret has received a telegram from Owenby, which he laid before the committee, asking if counsel would be allowed him. He named ex-Governor Forster as his adviser.

Dockery read a prepared statement, giving more in detail the facts testified to by him on Wednesday. He said he was anxious to hasten the force bill. It was not known, if Cameron was re-elected that he would vote for it, but his attitude of opposition had led Dockery to hope that he would vote against it. He (Dockery) did not wish just before the election in Pennsylvania to make public any private business connection of the Senate, which might be legitimate and proper, but before he could allow it to be used, could be used by political enemies to his detriment. Dockery had information that Cameron purchased silver, but no knowledge that he was concerned with any pool, nor of any impropriety in his purchase. Dockery thought it only justice to Cameron that the matter should not be made public when it might be used by Cameron's political opponents to his injury before he (Dockery) had an opportunity to explain the facts. There was no agreement or understanding between Cameron and himself or any other person that an (Dockery's) testimony would be delayed. Hearsay on his own judgment, induced solely by the reasons stated above.

WALL STREET STARTLED.

The Secretary's Death and Silver Bullion.

NEW YORK, Jan. 30.—The news of the death of Secretary Windom startled Wall Street this morning. The only appreciable financial effect, however, was a fall in the price of silver bullion, the London prices declining from 47¼ pence to 47, and New York declining accordingly. His death is heard upon by silver men here as rendering the passage of any Silver Bill this session unlikely. A majority of the Senators were of the opinion that Mr. Windom's successor will undoubtedly be a man to carry out the policy of the dead secretary, which, it was believed, was in all respects in accord with the ideas of the President. There is much discussion as to the probable successor, but no one name is far mentioned are those of Senators Allison and Sherman. The President will probably consult with the Senate committee on finance before making a nomination. Secretary Noble was seen this afternoon by a telegram from ex-Chief Bushyhead of the Cherokees, who is working a stone quarry in the reservation, protesting against the order. The Secretary replied that the law officer of the Department rules that they have no right to quarry there.

THE SILVER BILLS.

Was mentioned by the House Coinage Committee to-day. After statements made by Leech, Director of the Mint, and Atkinson, Bland said these statements were so much in line with those of the committee, and so well in accord with the views of the majority, that he felt bound for years, and moved to fix a day for final vote. After a long talk an adjournment was taken until Tuesday.

The U. P. Gains a Partial Victory.

LINCOLN, Jan. 30.—In the United States Court today Judge Dundy denied the motion of the Milwaukee road for an injunction to restrain the Union Pacific from interfering with the passage of the petitioner's trains over the bridge at Omaha. This is only a partial victory for the Union Pacific. The Judge had asked the lawyers to present the case on its merits at once, so it could be finally disposed of at this term. This they failed to do. The Judge, in his decision, says if the roads are denied the privilege of crossing each other, or if the rule of possession for the use of the bridge is once fixed, it will be a long time before it can be changed, or the rule equally will point out the remedy and compel the performance of a duty which ought to be voluntarily performed. This decision leaves the case of the Rock Island against the Union Pacific

IN WASHINGTON.

The National Capital Mourning the Sudden Death of Secretary Windom.

WILLIAM WINDOM, THE ONLY SON, ABSENT FROM HOME.

The Remains Arrive at Washington and are Received by the President and Others.

By Telegraph to the News.

WASHINGTON MOURNING.

Flags at Half Mast.—The Family of the Deceased.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30.—Everywhere throughout the city flags are flying at half-mast, and seemingly the image of sorrow is in the face of every one at the sudden death of Secretary Windom. On every hand, too, are heard expressions of warm admiration of the strong and lovable character of the man and of deep and unfeigned regret at his death.

Even as early hour this morning there has been a constant stream of callers at Mr. Hagar's residence on Massachusetts Avenue, bearing flowers as a token of sorrow to smitten their love and sympathy for the stricken family.

Among the callers were a very large number of high officials and social prominence in Washington, and many who knew the dead man last could not, as they left the house, restrain their tears.

MRS. WINDOM

and her two daughters are bearing their grief with great fortitude. Miss Helen, one of Mrs. Windom's sisters, a member of the household; Mrs. J. Stanley Brown, daughter of President Garfield, and Miss Colgate of New York, remained with them during the greater part of last night and are with them today.

THE ONLY SON.

William D. Windom, is now traveling in the South, and although telegrams have been sent to all points where they could in any likelihood reach him, no response is yet received. It is thought probable he will receive the news in time to reach home tomorrow night.

Mrs. Windom's other sister, Mrs. John Douglass, living in Minneapolis, will arrive here with her husband Sunday evening. George Hale, of Boston, her only brother, will probably arrive here tonight or tomorrow. Mr. Windom's nearest relations now living are the widow and three sons of a brother, who live at Sterling, Ill.

THE TIME OF THE FUNERAL.

Will depend on the son, but probably it will be Monday afternoon. The remains will lie in state in the Senate chamber while public services at the Church of the Covenant, of which Mr. Windom was a member.

Assistant Secretary Nettleton, who has been on a visit to Conclin, Ohio, left there yesterday for Washington, and is expected to reach here this afternoon. As he is the senior Assistant Secretary in point of service he will probably be designated to act as Secretary of the Treasury for a period of ten days, which is the limit of designations of this kind.

THE REMAINS ARRIVE.

The President and members of the Cabinet assembled at the Baltimore & Ohio station this afternoon to receive the remains of Secretary Windom, which arrived on the train at 4:35. Besides them, nearly all the leading public officials in Washington were at the depot. When the train arrived the casket was taken in charge by Company B, of the Treasury National Guard, and borne slowly to the hearse. Within a few minutes a procession was formed and moved from the depot by way of Pennsylvania, Vermont and Massachusetts Avenues, to the Secretary's residence. Three hearses carried the remains into the house through a crowd of people who reverently bared their heads as the casket passed.

The President and all his official family followed the remains to the house, and waited in the back parlor while the undertaker and assistants placed the body in the front room and opened the top half of the lid, so as to expose to view the secretary's features.

Mrs. Blaine remained with the President, and was the only lady present when he and the members of the Cabinet were ushered into the room, and looked upon the face of the distinguished dead.

When the party left the house the bereaved widow and daughters entered the room and remained for a few minutes. While Mrs. Windom was kneeling over the casket, sobbing, came to the house and left a message of condolence for the family.

THE BRITISH MINISTER

Secretary Windom's death is especially deplored by newspaper men. He was accessible to them at all times. He believed the public had a right to know and the entire press of the country were doing, and never declined a reasonable request for information concerning the business of the Treasury.

It is expected an order will issue from the White House tomorrow, cancelling all receptions and entertainments for the remainder of the season.

AN EXECUTIVE ORDER.

The following executive order was issued this afternoon through the Secretary of State and sent to all the other heads of Departments:

SIR—Hon. William Windom, Secretary of the Treasury of the United States, died suddenly last night in the city of New York at the hour of 11 minutes past 10 o'clock, in the 59th year of his age. This bereavement is a man of pure life, an official of stainless integrity, distinguished by long and eminent service in both branches of Congress and by having twice called to administer the National finances. His death caused deep regret throughout the country, while to his President and those associated with him in the administration of Government it comes as a personal sorrow.

The President directs that all Departments and the Executive branch of the Government, and the officers subordinate thereto shall manifest due respect to the memory of his eminent citizen in a manner consonant with the dignity of the office which he had honored by his devotion to public duty. The President further directs that the Treasury Department in all its branches in the capital be draped in mourning for a period of thirty days; that on the day of the funeral the executive departments shall be closed, and that on all public buildings throughout the United States the National flag shall be displayed at half mast.

THE FUNERAL will probably occur Monday. The interment will be in the Rock Creek cemetery. Many telegrams of condolence were received by Mrs. Windom. Among the senders were Ex-President Hayes, Mrs. Garfield, Governor Alger, ex-Postmaster-General James, Governor Allison, Senator Sherman, ex-Attorney-General Matt Craig, Archbishop Ireland and Robert T. Lincoln.

ST. PAUL, Jan. 30.—Both branches of the legislature adopted resolutions expressive of sorrow at the death of Secretary Windom and then adjourned.

Hotel-Keepers' Liabilities.

Hotel-keepers are, under certain conditions, responsible for the property of their guests, and yesterday Judge Blatchford gave a decision in the case of a state visitor who drops in to dine and does not order a bedroom to be occupied by a guest. And if it is he is entitled to a room in the classic Eddy-glass in the hall and expect the landlord to look after it. These are the kindly decisions of Judge Blatchford of the Manchester County court, England, has been called on to decide. Mr. Bland, the plaintiff in the case, had dropped into the Bell Hotel in the manner described, and had hung up his field-glass inside his hat and coat, and on retiring had been unfortunate enough to forget it. The landlord, the landlord of the hotel, under the circumstances, thought it hard that he should be called upon to make good the loss, and so charge it was. But Judge Haywood has decided that the law is against him; hence a verdict for Mr. Bland for the amount claimed.

THE FEAR OF DISEASE AS A PREVENTIVE OF SUICIDE.

Dr. Le Gouriet points out that the danger of disease is as a rule in the direct ratio of the carelessness with which they are guarded. He says: "Most diseases may be cleared as more or less fatal as people are afraid of them and seek proper advice to help prevent and cure. If people are not afraid of diseases they set the part of body by not seeking medical knowledge and skill and so give the disease time to kill more people. The ravages of various diseases, especially those of the venereal class, would be diminished if a simple remedy, like a safety, people were imbued with a more wholesome fear of them, and so led to make use of proper measures for their prevention and cure. Dr. Le Gouriet gives some interesting statistics in support of his statements. No one falls to send for a physician in cholera, yet only six persons in a million die of it since efforts are made to suppress it. Four hundred and twenty-eight in a million die of whooping cough, for which people are frightened patients, and neighborly ladies of both sexes give a wide. Three hundred and forty-one in a million die of typhoid fever, because it is hard for our friends to send for a doctor. Two hundred and twenty-two in a million die of scarlet fever, because medical advice is sought sooner and more implicitly obeyed. One hundred and sixty-eight in a million die of diphtheria, because people are more afraid of other diseases, and sends people in haste to the doctor. Dr. Le Gouriet urges on the medical profession the necessity of giving the public a rational fear of disease, and of impressing upon them the idea that the greatest element of safety is to avoid the mistake of a bad general, i. e., not to underestimate the strength of the enemy.

SOLVED AT LAST.

The Problem of Propelling and Steering an Air Ship.

EXPERIENCE OF ALEX. VONIEU IN ITALY.

The Incendiary Paper "Egalite" Seized by the Police at Paris.

By Telegraph to the News.

THAT AIR SHIP.

A Second Trial Said to have Given Satisfaction.

CHICAGO, Jan. 30.—The air ship invented by William Pennington of Mount Carmel, Ill., was tried again today, and to all appearances it was thoroughly demonstrated that a craft has at last been invented that permits feats of aerial navigation never before accomplished. The propelling and steering ship tested today is only a thirty-foot model, made of oiled silk, and the practicability of using aluminum, which is to be the material of which the full-sized ships will be built, has still to be shown. The car which is to carry passengers was not attached today, and the ship, which is cigar-shaped and filled with hydrogen gas, floated in the air and was propelled by a wheel like that of a propeller, the motive power coming from storage batteries on the floor attached by a light wire, reduces being set at different angles.

The ship traveled in a satisfactory manner against the Exposition building. The speed attained was not stated, but the inventor is sanguine of much better results with a satisfactory battery.

He walked to Nice and was placed in jail as a vagrant. On his release he went to Marseilles, from whence he was sent home by the American consul. Great excitement prevailed in the district until night. A number of students were arrested.

Another Suicide in Monaco.

(Special to the Deseret Evening News.)

MONACO, Jan. 31.—(By cable to the New York Tribune.)—Among recent suicides in Monaco none have created more surprise than that of M. De Lenten, who for many years was such perfect and polite commissioner of the notorious town. In all probability no man was better informed of more terrible secrets concerning life at the gay little capital than Du Gourlet. As commissioner of police he was accustomed to keep an exact statistical record of the deaths at Monaco. The columns of his ghastly record repeated the age, sex and nationality of the unfortunate creatures who found their relief in voluntary death. As commissioner it was one of his unenviable duties to place bank notes in the pockets of those who had taken their lives in order to prevent people from saying that the despair of poverty had driven them to suicide.

A short time ago De Gourlet, who was known far and wide among visitors to the gambling hell, quarrelled with the officers of the casino and was discharged. He instituted at once a suit for money damages. The case, even in Monaco, was important enough to draw crowds from the green tables to the court room. The trial was almost dramatic. In the midst of the proceedings Theuillat, the attorney-general, produced a letter signed by Prince Maximoralde, affirming that De Gourlet had stolen 200 francs from him in the vestibule of the casino. A dead silence followed this damaging statement. De Gourlet, however, a moment later, asked the court's permission to make another letter. It was granted. The audience, feeling instinctively that an important revelation was to be made, listened attentively and gave De Gourlet an opportunity to produce a dramatic effect. Slowly he read his letter, in which the name of Prince Maximoralde was not attached, and which stated that Theuillat had given the prince 2,000 francs to sign a statement so baneful to De Gourlet. Maximoralde at the time had lost all of his money and was willing to pledge himself for gold. He regretted this action, however, and in order to protect the commissioner of police had signed a counter document. Theuillat himself was then proved guilty of bribery, and De Gourlet received the coveted reward at the hands of the jury. Since his discharge he has remained at Monaco, overcome at last by remorse and misfortune he, too, has ended an unhappy life.

How the Girl Secured Him.

Buffalo, N. Y., Jan. 30.—John Koch was to have been married at 6 o'clock last night to Emily Gann. He had furnished a cottage at Black Rock and was ready for the ceremony when he learned that Emily had eloped. This information disturbed him particularly because he had advanced her $1500 to buy the necessaries with which to begin housekeeping. He rushed to the health office where he found that according to the records Emily Gann had married John Weinlatner, a barber, last Friday and had left town yesterday morning on a wedding trip. Koch seemed to think more of the money the girl had taken than of herself. He raved about, bewailing the loss of his money and finally had a warrant issued for her arrest on a charge of grand larceny. He learned the girl had also taken considerable of the furniture he had in his cottage.
