THIEVES ARE WORKING.

Reports at the Police Station Indicate a Good Harvest for Them.

If reports at the police station can be relied upon, harvest thieves are doing splendid work these days.

E. H. Kime of 242 east Second South street in the afternoon gives the gentleman reporting the theft of a couple of harness, a bridle and a halter left for safe keeping at his stable.

G. C. Tuttle is also one of those who believe honesty does not prevail in the vicinity of North Temple and Third South streets. He lost a horse and a light rubber blanket, a horse blanket and a boxed strap. Other shippers have also been in the harvest.

Abraham Smith, Duke of the Walker House, lost a valuable horse from the premises, 111 Fourth south street.

Thomas A. Woodbury, an orthopedic worker whose headquarters are in the office of Dr. Lambert, Tyler continuing it in practice, lost a pair of N. Wheeler's bicycle lamps off by either thieves or owner.

In the European Mission.

[Millennial Star, Oct. 7.]

Mrs. Jennie Mitchell of Ogden came with the company to visit Scotland.

Daniel Clark, who been appointed to labor as traveling Elder in the Birmingham conference.

Safe at the Sugar Factory.

Lehi Banner: Fires are still burning down the mine at the sugar factory and the result, white crystals are being whirled away as fast as steam can carry them to sweeten life for the poor people of this valley. It is the great 1,000 tons of beets have been made into sugar, the most of which has been placed on the market. There are now about 2,000 tons of beets in the stack and the factory are pushing them to as fast as they can. From present indications the run will last about three weeks or nearly longer. The cold has been sentimental though. Lehi has suffered more than other districts. They are trying to get the crop as many months beets as possible but this is such a poor year that they will be unable to secure as many as last year so will raise less beet.

Returned from California.

The "News" has received a pleasant call from Elder E. A. Stoddard of Lehi, Utah county, who returned home on Saturday, October 17th, from a mission to California, on which he left April 7, 1896. Most of his missionary labors were in southern California, in and about San Diego, and he reports excellent prospects. The prospects for the future are very encouraging. The Elders receive good attention from the people in preaching the Gospel unto them, and the meetings are well attended. The people realize that the missionaries with marked kindness and courtesy. Quite a number of baptisms have been added to the Church recently in that part of the Golden State. Elder Stoddard enjoyed excellent health while on his mission.

NEW CAVALRY TROOP.

Organized With Thirty-Three Members, Joseph E. Cohen, Captain.

A new cavalry troop of the National Guard of Utah was organized at the office of F. J. Cheney last night. It will be known as Troop A. First cavalry, and starts out with a membership of twenty-three, the number which will be enrolled in at least thirty. Adjutant General Cannon was present and conducted the organization.

Officers were elected as follows: Joseph E. Cohen, captain; H. P. Jensen, first lieutenant; E. L. Carlson, second lieutenant. It is expected that there will be a second lieutenant, but the decision between the office of captain and the second lieutenancy caused a tie between Messrs. Cohen and Jensen for the office. It is proposed to make the troop a very efficient organization and all are expected to be on the alert and act as drill masters and make such organizations from time to time as may be necessary.

Coalville Items.

Coalville, Utah, Oct. 18, 1897.

To the Editor:

The Democrats and Republicans held their city caucus here last Friday, the former in the brick school house, and the latter in the stone school house. The Democratic ticket is as follows: Mayor, T. L. Allen; councilors, John W. Stephens, J. T. Holman, W. H. Hirsch; John Parkinson, and John Wilson; recorder, Walter M. Stephens; treasurer, John Robinson; marshal, Ira E. Eldridge; justice of the peace, George Huff.

The Republican ticket contained a ticket as follows: Mayor, T. Woolley; councilors, Robert Walker, Wm. E. Chappell, A. Jacobsen, Jas. E. Eldridge and Jas. E. Hoggan; recorder, Joseph E. Wilder; treasurer, Mrs. M. A. Hartley; marshal, Jas. Winkins; justice of the peace, Carl Allison.

A resolution of the officers of the Young Men's Mutual Improvement Association of the Coalville ward was held last night, in the stake tabernacle.

The following best presents was received: Lecture, "The attributes of a true lady or gentleman," by Elder J. Alma Smith. Quartet, "Come where the rose buds grow," by Sisters Bessie Pulsipher, Ida Fisher, Lizzie Walker and Hannah Hirsch; solo, "Sweet and low," by Sister Ida Fisher; duet, "Sweet Spirit hear my prayer," by Sister Walker and Hannah Hirsch; solo, "Sweet Bye and Bye," by Sister Ida Fisher. After this under the direction of the Hedquist sisters, a tableau representing the Angel of Mercy, Frank Craft and Hannah Hirsch, Frank Craft and Ida Fisher, Frank Craft and Lizzie Walker, Frank Craft and W. M. Hoxley, composers. The president elect impressed that all the weeks of the month should be spoken for, so the meetings were to be held on Sunday evenings.

The Sunday schools of this ward are in full working order and doing an excellent work. S. H. H.

A TRIBUTE.

Manti, Utah, Oct. 18, 1897.

To the Editor:

On Wednesday, Oct. 13, 1897, the spirit of President William Paxman of the Juab Stake, passed from the body of earthly clay to the great beyond. It would indeed be a hard task to even words adequate to express the goodness of heart of this truly good man. Time may erase from the memory of man events of the past, others may come and go, but the good deeds of this man, his unswerving fidelity to the cause of truth, his sincerity for the gospel of Christ and the Priesthood, his charity for erring humanity, his fatherly care for his numerous family, his extreme kindness of heart, all those have become indelibly impressed upon the hearts of hundreds and thousands of his fellow men. The sorrow of this loss bore heavily in the land of New Zealand, where he presided over the Australasian mission, which his virtues shed forth in all the grandeur and sublimity of his nature. Humble and meek as a child, his intense knew no bounds. The eternal goodness of life radiated from his entire person, and the sources of adversity were the only ones that he envinced the disposition to be calm and keep his temper. He was a father to our sick and feeble. He was a father to our aged and infirm. He was a father to our young and tender. He was a father to our sons and daughters. He was a father to us all. He was a father to our wives and children. In bonds of heart, in ties of love, in sympathy, he blended in the varied vocabulary of life in unison with the Spirit of God, and had a kind word and a hearty God-speed for every man, woman and child. No matter how low, no difficulty for him to surmount, and he met his secrets in solace. In the midst of affliction he never murmured, or complained, in the rich and the poor had a true and devoted friend, one whose friendship was as deep as the ocean and as enduring as the everlasting hills.

In the prime of his noble life, he has been cut down by the cruel hand of death. His family has been bereft of a kind and indulgent husband and father, his people, over whom he presided, have lost a true and faithful friend, the Church, of which he was an honored member, a faithful member, and whose loss has cast a gloom over the hearts of the righteous, but only in Zion, where the spirit of our departed brother is ever cherished by thousands of his people, and as we behold his work and feel the great void left by his departure, we rather mourn that we are so far behind him in noble deeds and good works.

"A man of God. Behold him where he stands
Rolled to the skies man have mistaken Earth;
Deep sleep has settled on those lifeless eyes
And stamped the palings of that Sovereign Power
Which, unseen, mingled not in human affairs.
Here he fainted or sunset the distrement
No more that step, which climbed Sinai with the Eternal
No more that step, which climbed Sinai with the Eternal
Shall wake the world and weary sex at rest.
That eye, whose gaze the pulse and soul would chill,
They heed not, whose gaunt current
Shall wake the whose face on earth
Shall wake the whose face on earth
Shall wake the whose face on earth
