CONFERENCE NOTICE.

The Sixty-sixth Semi-annual Conference of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints will convene in the Tabernacle, Salt Lake City, on Friday morning, October 4th, 1895, at 10 o'clock a.m. A cordial invitation is given to the officers and members of the Church to be present.

WILFORD WOODRUFF,
GEORGE Q. CANNON,
JOSEPH F. SMITH,

First Presidency of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

POLICY SHOPS AGAIN.

A distressed father writes to the News applauding the remarks made in these columns some weeks ago concerning policy shops and other forms of petty gambling, of which young boys and even some shop girls are understood to be the principal victims; and he asks us to continue the warfare until the police authorities are stirred to such a degree of moral activity as to stamp out the iniquity, root and branch.

We accept the task with pleasure, though not without regret that any further remarks on the subject should be necessary. It is observable that every now and then a raid is made upon the well-known gamblers, whose gilded rooms entice only those who are experienced in play or those who are of sufficient years and presumed intelligence to keep away from the tiger if they do not desire to feel his claws. With considerable regularity the fallen women of the town are pounced down upon in like manner, and made to contribute toward the defraying of municipal expenses with money acquired by the barter of their souls. But there are few raids heard of as being directed against the class of offenders first alluded to. They enjoy an immunity that is perfectly astounding, and yet the extent of their boldness and of the havoc they create is known to be tremendous. Children are being led to ruin, honor sullied, falsehood encourage, theft stimulated if not almost compelled, and moral degradation in all its minor forms propagated if not completed in these little seats of crime.

We shall probably not be told that the city constabulary know nothing of the existence of the evil, for that would be a confession of such innocence as no one would be able to credit. The only other excuse for dallying with the infamy would seem to be the difficulty of making arrests and securing convictions; but such a plea is as puerile as the other would be. If instructions are given from headquarters that the policy-shops and all other similar nests of wrongdoing and their proprietors and frequenters are to be given neither rest nor quarter, the business will soon be broken up. Let the word go forth that they are in peril every hour, and give the detectives to understand that the permanence of their employment depends on carrying out these orders—all complaint such as we now have to voice will be unnecessary and the moral tone of the community will be materially improved.

CHICAGO'S HERO-WORSHIP.

Select and deny it as we may, the fact remains that in what the world calls caddishness and snobbery the great American people—especially the eastern part—take a second place to hardly any nation on the globe. A title turns our marriageable girls nearly crazy—many of those, at least, to whom life is easy, wealth abundant, and "society" the chief aim of existence. But this is a weakness which, if developed on a comparatively small scale, is not to be compared with the prevalent and growing desire for aping aristocracy in Europe, in liveried flunkeys and in all the other follies which idleness can think of and wealth pay for. Such degeneracy has heretofore made slow progress in the West, where if there were fewer large fortunes there was also more sturdy independence of spirit and that peculiar breeziness and abandon that have been proudly regarded as typical of the race.

A recent outbreak in Chicago, however, really caps the climax of snobbish sublimity. The occasion was no less than the hanging of the portraits of two French kings, Louis XIV and Louis XV, as "the first rulers of Illinois," in the place of honor in the new building of the Chicago Historical society. Readers of history will remember that these two sovereigns held the reins of power during a more or less important part of French history, and it has been commonly understood that whatever of salary or fame they earned was acquired by attending to business in that sunny land. We are now desired to believe, however, that their French sovereignty was merely a side-issue, a sort of blind as it were, while the real importance of their place in history is due to their benign government of the present state of Illinois. For one thing, we are assured that the Chicago portraits are accurate and lifelike, not haphazard affairs taken at any chance period of the kings' lives, but studiously reproduced from portraits that represented them as they were when actually rulers of Illinois.

Whatever is commendable in the Lake city's determination thus to preserve the lineaments of her heroes, will be enhanced if she recognizes and acts upon the fact that in the business of painting her dead sovereigns there is a vast, wide field enough to keep many a brush active for years and years to come. The rulers of Illinois are by no means circumscribed by the two Louis's—there are others—both before and since. There was old What's-his-name, the famous Iroquois chieftain, long since gathered to his fathers in the happy hunting ground; and there is Phil Armour, Senator Cullom and the "All-Hog" railway, who are still with us in the flesh.

THE CHINESE EMPEROR'S EDICT

The Chinese emperor may be sincere in his expressions of regret on account of the massacres that recently occurred in his domain, and he may even entertain an earnest desire for the punishment of the murderers; but it is evident that, if foreigners are to be safe in China in the future, something more than an imperial order is needed. The Mongolian ruler "commands" the Tartar generals and others "to impress upon their subordinates the necessity of granting protection," and threatens anyone who dares to disturb the peace with the severest Chinese punishment. But what respect can he command among his subjects; what awe can his power inspire among the millions that have so recently witnessed his humiliation in being unable to keep from his shores a handful of soldiers of a despised nation? If the Chinese emperor, instead of threatening to let his own broken rod fall upon future offenders, had plainly told his subjects they must leave the foreigners alone, because if the outrages are repeated Western powers would sweep down upon them and wipe some of their cities and towns off the earth, and if he had candidly added that he is unable to defend them, his argument would probably have had force. Besides, he would have spoken the plain truth and been entitled to the esteem of all. As it is, his document is about as worthless as others of a similar nature have been, and is not calculated to inspire confidence in the safety of the foreigners in China.

THE QUESTION OF CO-OPERATION.

Not long ago an international co-operative congress was held in London. It was attended by delegates from Italy, Belgium, France and representatives of co-operative stores in America, Great Britain, Germany, Switzerland, Denmark, the Netherlands, Austria, Roumania, Russia, Servia and Australia. The chief purpose of the gathering was to discuss the question how far the principle of co-operation had been or was capable of being carried out successfully in the industrial enterprises of the respective countries. According to the addresses made and papers read, it seemed to be the general experience that co-operation, while successful in commercial undertakings, had failed of success in productive enterprises.

One of the delegates expressed himself to the effect that labor's copartnership could only be said to exist in workshops were a definite share of profits was allotted to labor over and above the current rate of wages, and where arrangements were made for the worker to capitalize all or part of the profit or other savings of industry. This experiment had been tried in Belgium, and a delegate from that country said he felt obliged to report unfavorably. The main course of failure, according to his view was that the workingmen were wanting in the necessary recognition of the difference of capacity, which made it necessary that the manager of a co-operative productive institution should exercise adequate authority.

In people's banks, notably the building and loan variety in the United States, and in co-operative stores, more particularly in the United Kingdom, far greater success has been attained, although it is explained that people's banks in Europe have not been a co-operative success, national or other support having been obtained in many instances to prevent failure.

The subject of co-operation is coming to the front gradually, and it is not improbable that in a near future it will command the widest attention. It is a question of a practical nature and not merely a dream like so many of the propositions of ideal socialism, which are absolutely valueless for everyday life purposes. Human progress is slow, however, it being necessary to advance with caution on a road where there are many pitfalls, many obstacles. But co-operation once being established as a correct principle, its application in the various departments of human activity will follow until the whole race shall reap its benefits. Reason already points in this direction as persistently as the magnetic needle turns toward the Pole; human energy reaches out for the goal, and when knowledge and wisdom strengthened by virtue are allowed to throw their light on the only road that leads to it, advance will be easy and safe, and success assured.

THE ATLANTA EXPOSITION.

The cotton states and international exposition at Atlanta opens today, Sept. 18, and is to continue until the end of the present year. The main object of this great undertaking, that will cost about two million dollars, is to show the world the resources of the South with a view of bringing that part of our great country into closer relations with the trading nations of the earth.

The exposition is in much modeled after the World's Fair in Chicago. There is a U. S. government building, with 15,000 square feet of floor space, containing exhibits from the various departments. Notable among those of the state department is a collection of historical documents, such as the Declaration of Independence in facsimile, many rare and interesting relics of Thomas Jefferson, including the desk on which he wrote the Declaration papers, notes, etc., and the most complete set of pictures of the signers of the Declaration.

The U. S. army display includes numerous relics from the war and the navy exhibits consist chiefly of models of battleships from the beginning of the century to the present time.

There is also a Woman's building in which can be found a library of books, magazines, newspapers and other publications by women; a music room for their musical compositions; a scientific room for their patents, inventions and copyrights; halls for their work in sewing, embroidery, drawn work, wood carving, ceramics, china, painting, glass decoration, illuminating response work, clay modeling, bric-a-brac and art design. There is a cooking school and a fine display of kindergarten games, toys, furniture and other paraphernalia.

The forestry exhibit in the Minerals and Forestry building is said to be the most complete representation of the flora of the South ever gathered.

These are of course only a few of the features of this great fair. There is a Manufactures and Liberal Arts building, a Machinery hall, an Agricultural and an Electricity hall, a Fine Arts building, an Auditorium for concerts, conventions and other meetings; a Negro building and a Fire building for the display of fire apparatus as well as for service if required.

Foreign countries are well represented, and the exposition bids fair to prove a success in every particular.

What a Prominent Insurance Man Says.

H. M. Blossom, senior member of H. M. Blossom & Co., 217 N. 3d St., St. Louis, writes: I had been left with a very distressing cough, the result of influenza, which nothing seemed to relieve, until I took Ballard's Horehound Syrup. One bottle completely cured me. I sent one bottle to my sister, who had a severe cough, and she experienced immediate relief. I always recommend this syrup to my friends.

John Cranston, 908 Hampshire Street, Quincy, Ills., writes: I have found Ballard's Horehound Syrup superior to any other cough medicine I have ever known. It never disappoints. Price 50c.

Ballard's Snow Liniment.

This liniment is different in composition from any other liniment on the market. It is a scientific discovery which results in it being the most penetrating Liniment ever known. There are numerous white imitations, which may be recommended because they pay the seller a greater profit. Beware of these and demand Ballard's Snow Liniment. It positively cures Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Sprains, Bruises, Wounds, Cuts, Sciatic and Inflammatory Rheumatism, Burns, Scalds, Sore Feet, Contracted Muscles, Stiff Joints, Old Sores, Pain in Back, Barb Wire Cuts, Sore Chest or Throat, and is especially beneficial in Paralysis.

ANOTHER RAMBLER DAY.

The Rambler boys made a great showing in the Ogden races. The first event of the day was the ten mile road race, in which McConahay finished third, taking third prize and third time prize. Then came the track race, Joe Beck taking second in the novice, Fowler first, Weiler second, and Thatcher third in the mile scratch, class B, all "Rambler" you will note. In the half mile class A, May took second, Carter third. Half mile, class B, Thatcher second, Fowler third. Five mile, class B, Fowler second. In this race a man in a yellow suit lost his head and fell, Crumbner and Weiler being immediately behind him, the result was a spill for these parties and the race left to Evans. The five mile, class A, was another Rambler event, May taking first, Joe Beck second and McConahay third. Fourteen prizes in one day is glory enough for any one.

People may laugh and people may cry,
And dogs may howl if they please,
But Rambler's win races wherever they go,
Regardless of how others feel.

Moral—Buy a Rambler! Ride a winner and you'll be a spinner.
