THE REPUBLICAN TICKET.

As the NEWS is not in politics and has no candidates for office at the hands of either party, it cannot be supposed to [illegible] any man's defeat or any other man's triumph in the territorial Republican convention yesterday. We do not hesitate to say that some whom we regarded as very excellent candidates were unsuccessful in their efforts to be nominated. We can truthfully say also that in the ticket as completed there are many elements of undoubted popularity and strength. It would be too much to expect perfection in any ticket where so many jealous sections and politicians have their own favorites and objects to secure as is the case in a state convention of any party. There are always the inducements and opportunities for compromises, and in the seething turmoil created by five or six hundred enthusiasts, each with strong preferences, these concessions to sectional and personal predilections are almost invariably yielded. Hence tickets as generally presented are pretty sure to bear some names that cooler reflection, unhampered by the influences referred to, would have regarded as unfitting.

By all this we would not be understood as pointing in criticism to the ticket framed yesterday, for as tickets go, it presents a very good combination, and, as stated, it has some elements of unquestioned and unusual strength. If, on the whole, it may be likened to the lower part of Nebuchadnezzar's image, in that it is part iron and part potter's clay, it may still be warmly defended by its supporters as challenging the very best efforts of its opponents even to equal it in point of general merit.

AS SEEN BY "THE OUTLOOK."

A New York paper, The Outlook, of August 17, has an item concerning Salt Lake City, the burden of which is that "metropolitan vices" are displayed in this beautiful mountain region and that municipal reform is needed. The paper says:

Salt Lake City is already displaying metropolitan vices. A [illegible] sends us the account in a local paper of an investigation now going on, disclosing that a prominent firm had sold to the city for $[illegible] furniture that any private citizen could have bought at retail for about $[illegible]. Such, at least, was the testimony of the principal witness—a former employee of the firm selling the goods. Our correspondent writes: "There is no question about the need of municipal reform in Salt Lake City. This firm presented the city, when delivering the furniture for our new public building, a [illegible] for a picture of Brigham Young." This five per cent rebate to the Church on stealings from the public carries us back to the methods of Tweed.

The difficulty of forming correct conclusions concerning the details of objects seen a great distance off, even in a clear atmosphere and through good telescopes, is apparent to all who have any experience in the matter, on land or sea. The fact accounts, probably, for the extraordinary confusion The Outlook displays in that brief paragraph, where fact and fancies are mingled together, regardless of rhyme or reason.

In the first place, the furniture deal referred to was one in which county officials, and city officials, were interested.

No local paper had any account of any investigation regarding the contracts made by the city's public servants. And in the second place the presentation to the city of a valuable frame for a picture adorning the council chamber cannot reasonably be taken as a proof of existing corruption.

But the conclusion arrived at by our contemporary from these confused premises is most extraordinary. The paper insinuates that the picture frame represents a five per cent rebate donated to the Church on stealings from the public. This insinuation is of a [illegible] only on the ground of utter ignorance, which, however, itself is [illegible] in this matter. Journalists at least ought to know that a municipal or county government is not a church, in Utah or anywhere else in this country, and that no ecclesiastic body can be held responsible in any way for the possible short-comings of civil officers. And as for the Mormon Church, as is well known in this region, its organization never received the cent except out of the honest earnings of its friends and supporters, for charitable purposes or to defray its legitimate expenses. The recently voiced attack on the Church in The Outlook is therefore as unjust as it is without foundation, and our contemporary cannot neglect to correct the misstatement made without lowering itself in the estimation of all familiar with the excellent record of the Mormon Church.

RAIN NEEDED.

There are some farmers with hay and grain still in the field; others with their stacks uncovered or their threshing in progress; millers with the [illegible] not yet safe; [illegible] and others who will [illegible] the "News" [illegible] for a right good [illegible]. All the same, the country needs just that very thing, and needs it badly—the air wants a thorough bath, the soil a thorough soaking, the foliage and vegetation a complete drenching. The first is necessary to health, the second to future agricultural wealth, the third to refreshed beauty. As to the trees, horticulturists say there were hardly ever so many insects upon the leaves and branches as now, and they assert that the prolonged drouth is responsible for this—that where sprinkling of the foliage is impossible, the little pests have multiplied and cling in myriads. The soil is dry as an oven, and a great deal of plowing that ought to be done to aid the later growth of weeds is almost impracticable until rain shall come. The prevalence and extent of canyon fires round about this city and in other sections bears testimony to the dryness of the grass and underbrush. And lastly, physicians say that the atmosphere is full of injurious germs or microbes (or whatever the proper term may be) which are certain to produce a great increase in disease and mortality in a very short time unless heaven's cooling and cleansing showers are speedily forthcoming. It is only in rare and unusual seasons that the earlier and the later rains have failed us. This year the earlier contingent came along most generously, and by this time nearly everybody ought to be quite ready for a goodly installment of the later supply.

A DIVINE MESSAGE.

Unquestionably the great problems confronting the world at the present time, causing so much uneasiness and, in some minds, apprehension for the future, have been before mankind from time immemorial. The labor question, for instance, is probably as old as some of the pyramids in Egypt, or the "hanging gardens" of Semiramis. Other modern issues are of equally respectable antiquity. Time and again they have demanded a solution, and the sages of mankind have repeatedly tried to meet this demand, well knowing that there is a point beyond which the pressure cannot be allowed to go with safety, as is demonstrated by the empires and civilizations of which only the scattered ruins and other archæological evidences are left.

But while the problems remain essentially the same, new phases are constantly presented, owing to the ever changing conditions, and threatening a repetition of former disasters. Can there be a clearer demonstration of the inability of the human race, so far, to bring about the desirable condition in which each individual is fulfilling the measure of his or her existence on earth and, consequently, enjoying happiness? The matter is one that nations speedily must consider; for the discontent of the millions is already heard like the rolling of distant thunder, or the roar of a battle, yet far off but apparently drawing nearer. As already intimated, the conditions now in this late century must be met.

The time is past, at least in the more advanced countries, when the toiling masses bow in humility before their masters, accepting their position in poverty and misery as a divine decree. They have received some education and with it a self-consciousness of individual rights and strength. They calculate and form conclusions. If, for instance, a machine is invented by means of which a manufacturer can produce 4,000 yards of cloth a week with the same amount of personal labor formerly required for fifty yards, and, consequently, many laborers are turned adrift, while the manufacturer keeps nearly all the profit to himself, they argue that Providence is not responsible for their misfortune. They find that the ancient philosophers were mistaken, who predicted that the invention of machinery would ultimately emancipate all men and women and create a golden era, making the terms "slaves" and "masters" obsolete, and they will naturally take their cause in their own hands for the purpose of inaugurating that golden age. The greatest need of our time is therefore a political, moral or religious system by which different interests can be harmonized and place given the angelic [illegible] on earth.

The people that first settled this region were formerly considered peculiar, but anyone acquainted with their tenets will admit that this peculiarity was merely a firm belief, preserved [illegible] in their mission to proclaim to the world the eternal principles by which every want [illegible] of mankind can be solved. But, first, they held, and hold, that the Constitution of the United States is higher than a mere human document, inasmuch as its features [illegible] framing it were adjusted upon it by the Spirit from on High, for a special purpose. It follows, in their belief, that the faithful adherence to that Constitution in all civil affairs would result in a perfect state, as nearly as that can be obtained on earth. To this view of the great charter of liberty, they add the firm belief that in all matters pertaining to spiritual things, man must have access to the counsel and guidance of the Father who is above all. These two great principles comprise Mormonism. By it this mountain region has been transformed into what it is today. Its adherents have been made happy beyond expression, and by it all the world might be blessed. Mormonism is God's message to His children in this age.

WANTED: BODY OR BLOOD.

An interesting display of official impudence is reported from New York, where the coroner, piqued at being denied the privilege of holding an inquest upon a certain corpse, requested the military authorities at Governor's Island to turn out all the water the vessel which was bearing said cadaver out of the harbor. Whether the angry coroner was thus deprived of his legitimate fees, or whether as a silent partner of [illegible] in the profits of a private undertaking concern he was a loser by the [illegible] going abroad, does not appear; but his sanguinary irascibility can hardly be accounted for on the score of mere public interest. The incident is somewhat suggestive of the humoristic threat recently published as emanating from a local official as to stopping funerals even in the presence of the mourners or at the brink of the grave if need be, unless certain formalities are complied with.

In the consistent and intelligent fulfillment of his duty, no matter how unpleasant and unpopular it may be, every public official is entitled to support. At the same time, there is such a thing as being absolutely dramatic. A great many officers mistake the latter class of performance for real zeal; in which case they make themselves deserving both of criticism and pity in about equal proportions.

ANOTHER effort to form a community on the Bellamy plan is now on foot in Colorado. A lady is one of the promoters of the scheme. It will be interesting to follow the development of this colony with the view of ascertaining the practical workings of a theory perfectly charming to many. Will it succeed to an undertaking that so far has proven as futile as the attempts to reach the North Pole?

THE STEEL boom — the English racer [illegible] Valkyrie III is hollow. There are political booms in this our own Utah that have the same curious peculiarity, and still others that are merely "hollow."

Clinton, Missouri.

Mr. A. L. Armstrong, an old druggist, and a prominent citizen of this enterprising town, says: "I sell a great many different kinds of cough remedies, but have never in my experience sold as much of any one article as I have of Ballard's Horehound Syrup. ANOTHER RAMBLER DAY.

The Rambler boys made a great showing in the Ogden races. The first event of the day was the ten mile road race, in which McCumber finished third, taking third prize and third time prize. Then came the track race. Joe Beck taking second in the novice, Fowler first, Walker second, and Thatcher third in the mile scratch, class B, all "Rambler" [illegible] men. In the half mile class A, May took second, Carter third. Half mile, class B, Thatcher second, Fowler third. Five mile, class B, Fowler second. In this race a man in a yellow suit lost his head and fell, Omnibus and Walker being immediately behind him, the result was a spill for those parties and the race left to Evans. The five mile, class A, was another Rambler event, May taking first, Joe Beck second and McCumber third. Fourteen prizes in one day is glory enough for any man.

People may laugh and people may cry,
And does may bow if they please,
But Rambler's win races wherever they go,
Regardless of how much they tease.

Moral: Buy a Rambler! Ride a winner and you'll be a spinner.
