A BABY IS BURNED TO DEATH.

Fell Five Stories—Woman and Two Children Murdered—Maniac Strangles Himself.

Thirty thousand rabbits were killed in a rabbit drive at Fresno, Cal., on Saturday.

The first shipment of celery from California to the New York market was made from Bakersfield, on Saturday. Gardeners believe they can work up a big trade for late product next winter.

Captain William Steinbrickler, a native of Hungary, aged 83 years, died at Napoel, Cal., Saturday. Deceased took a prominent part in the Hungarian revolution in 1848, and was one of the few surviving patriots.

Hunter B. Randall, the La Grange, Cal., driver who killed his wife at his ranch on Friday and was taken to jail in Modesto, was found dead in the jail Saturday morning, having strangled himself during the absence of his guard for a few minutes. Randall was a raving maniac from the time he was placed in jail.

W. H. Tangeman, superintendent of the Hale and Norcross mine, in Nev da, who warned out of the county by the miner's union, is in Reno, and declares his intention of returning to the mine if it costs him his life. Tangeman would have fought when being run out only he was disarmed and half 100 men against him, so got no chance.

Joseph Grabowel, a three-year-old boy, was playing on the balcony on the fifth floor of a San Francisco building on Saturday, and fell over the railing. He struck a clothes line on the way down, which partially broke his fall, but upon his contact with the ground with such force that many bones were broken and death resulted in two hours.

Kansas, the country home of Capt. W. R. Collier, on the border of Clear lake, Cal., was burned Saturday night at 10 o'clock. The fire started from a lamp explosion in a child's room. The nurse had just left the room a few moments before, leaving a child alone in the room. The child, who was two years and one-half old, Jack, was burned to death. Mrs. Collier was seriously injured in an attempt to rescue her little son. The fire had obtained such headway that no one was able to enter the room to save the child.

From passengers on the steamer Al Ki, which arrived at Port Townsend, Wash., on Saturday, from Alaska, it was learned that the night before the Al Ki sailed the dead bodies of a squaw and her two half-breed children were found murdered in a cabin on Douglass Island. The white man who had for several years lived with the squaw, and who was the father of the children, is in the Yukon country, and had recently sold the squaw a large amount of gold dust. It is supposed the inmates of the cabin were first murdered, then robbed. The bodies had been mutilated with an ax. Douglass Island is across the bay two miles and a half from Juneau.

Less than thirty days remain to redeem the Nevada Southern from the receiver's sale, sheriff's sales which were made last October for the sum $300,000. William H. Carlson of San Diego, since the receiver's sale, bought the right to redeem the road. He says there is plenty of capital behind him to rebuild the road to Salt Lake. The claim is made, on the other hand, that the deed to Carlson is defective, it having been signed only by the president of the road, A. E. Blake, and not in conjunction with the secretary. It is further stated that the Nevada Southern, as a corporation, never authorized Blake to transfer the property to Carlson. It is understood that the purchasers of the California and Eastern Railway company are in the field, and will begin the active construction of a road to Salt Lake as soon as the time of redemption expires, in case Carlson is unable to redeem the Nevada Southern.

Expert Money Counters.

Women have at the treasury department four of the most expert counters of money in the world. They are women, and their names are Miss Calhoun, Miss Roff, Miss Cooke and Miss Burns. Each of these young ladies is able to count from 20,000 to 30,000 pieces a day, throwing out the counterfeits at sight. They are so clever at the work that it is hardly possible for a bad note to escape detection by their keen eyes. The pieces are spread out on tables in such a manner as to be flat, the bills accumulated by two or three quick movements of the hands. Then they are counted two at a time, with two fingers of the right hand, throwing them into the left hand, which is held below the edge of the table. In this manner all fairly worn notes are put aside, to be sent to the mint in Philadelphia.—Washington Star.

New Woman as Elevator Girl.

The new woman has invaded another field of labor. She is going to be an elevator girl. Strange that some bright woman did not think of it before. It is alone, conservative Philadelphia that introduces the elevator woman to an appreciating public. In the Young Women's Christian association building, at Arch and Eighteenth streets, are two young women pioneers at this line of work. They like it, too, and say it is not near as hard on an employee as attending all day to a store. The association building is eight stories high, and there is a large amount of travel up and down the elevator. The restaurant on the eighth floor is patronized not only by the permanent and transient boarders of the association, but also by crowds of Sunday shoppers.
