OBEY THE LAW.

The Salt Lake saloon keepers are an afflicted lot. The board of police and fire commissioners intend that violations of the law forbidding the sale of liquor on Sundays shall cease, and the whisky vendors therefore are aggrieved. At their business meeting on Monday they expressed the view that an injustice is being done by requiring them to observe the law, and they agreed to present the matter before the commissioners with a view to securing a change in the official procedure. They also urge that they are paying a license which contributes to the city a revenue of nearly $50,000 per year; that many of them now are on the verge of suspension; and that by the closing of the saloons on Sunday they are deprived of from $300 to $500 per month in business. Therefore they will urge the commissioners to revoke the order requiring the saloon men to do other than draw the blinds on Sunday, or if this be not granted, to allow them a rebate on their license.

Under these circumstances would it not be a very kind and liberal thing to allow the saloon men to disregard the law once in a while—only one day in seven, or every day in the week that there is a possible opportunity for violating the statute? And is it not a little severe to insist on punishing these proprietors when they do a little law-breaking by carrying on at forbidden times a business which is directly responsible for four-fifths of the crime committed in the country; which does more to augment the ranks of lunatics, thieves and murderers than any other known cause; which is more expensive to the state in paupers, lunatics and criminals than all other lines of business traffic combined; which impoverishes and degrades its millions of victims and brings untold misery on countless homes, regarding neither age, sex nor condition; and without which a large proportion of the almshouses, asylums and jails would disappear from the land because unnecessary, and the constabulary of the country would be greatly reduced in numbers? And is it not just as severe to punish the thief for stealing and the murderer for killing? But then the law is always severe—from the lawmaker's standpoint.

Again, it is insisted that those engaged in this business contribute to the city's revenue a large amount each year. Even if this were true, would that afford an excuse for illegal acts or a case for officials to ignore statutory enactments? Is money the price of sanction for lawlessness? The property owner, the workingman who owns his little home, the manufacturer and mechanic who are building up the country and making the city desirable for habitation, contribute to the municipal revenue as taxpayers. And because of this ability to contribute permission is granted our saloon and resort criminals to violate the law with impunity? Or, failing to contribute as do the law-abiding citizens, have these criminals their license? Did the claim that the saloon keepers contribute even a trifle toward the municipal income be not honest, because it is not true. What they pay as license is a miserable pittance compared to the expense entailed through their business. For every dollar received from the whisky interests in this city, the corporation has expended two dollars on the direct result of that business through the moral or open law-breaking proclivities of saloon keepers and their patrons, to say nothing of indirect expense. Instead of being constituted contributors to the city's financial exchequer, they are a heavy monetary drain. They now want to add a contribution to the nation's revenue by selling liquor to minors and they may yet succeed.

By the time the social reformers get in their work there will be only four or five more anything. They have not made a place in any charitable institution to the municipal revenue, and have no right to consideration from that point of view. They have been identified or indeed of institutions to the financial prosperity of the municipality, and it would be a better compliment to their good judgment if they would recognize that the instead of demanding the privilege of adding to the expense of the city and furnishing its name by aiding its officials to permit law-breaking. As for the board of police and fire commissioners, the gentlemen who hold the positions know the law and the official obligations which devolve upon them, and are to be commended and applauded for vigilant efforts to perform their duty within the bounds of law. Saloon keepers as well as other people should obey the law.

SOMEBODY'S AT LARGE.

Does anybody happen to know among the international gleaners of news late days one "Elnon E. Yewell, of Ogden?" According to the Washington Star such a person was at one of the hotels of the national capital lately, and just lately occupied a reporter with information about Utah. President Woodruff, he said, was nearly seventy years of age. He expected vacates passed this unknown more than seventeen years as head of corresponding secretary on some of his speculations as to the future policy of the Church. The 10,000 men whom he finds "settled in the Territory in Utah," although "each one of them has no fixed office to perform," still have "just as heavilies a hold upon the people," which would seem, if reduced to mathematical terms, that each man wields have the "ignorance hold" upon about six and two-thirds persons, probably about the average in his family—and upon those who has a better right to have a "mission hold." "Polygamy flourishes all over the Territory," said Mr. Yewell, and as to baptism for the dead, he (Yewell) informed the wondering reporter that by such ordinance "the soul of the deceased in question will be made spotless in its spiritual abode and relieved from any obnoxious that might have attached attached with its enjoyment of heavenly happiness."

If Mr. Yewell, of Ogden, has any relatives or friends handy, can they think it their duty to try to give him something to do at home, so that he cannot go roaming around the country making a show of himself?

THE SEEDS OF ANARCHY.

The bill introduced in the House of Congress by Representative William A. Stone aims a tremendous blow at anarchism, but in view of the terrible deeds of members of that organization, the enactment of some such measure will be endorsed by all friends of law and order and peace among men. The proposed bill defines as an anarchist any person who belongs to a society that countenances the unlawful taking of human life or the destruction of property, and makes it a capital offense for such persons to attempt violence against the life or property of their fellow men. The measure is truly Draconic in its severity, but something must be done to meet an abnormal condition. The knife of the surgeon is sometimes the only efficient remedy, and the disease of anarchy, threatening the very life of the social organization, should certainly not be treated with palliatives. It needs radical measures.

It may be doubted, however, whether legislative enactments alone can accomplish the object. The fact of the matter is, as will appear to anyone who gives the subject a deeper thought, that the sentiments of anarchists are not confined to the members of that organization. There is an alarming lack of regard for the sanctity of human life and property discernible almost everywhere, and to this comes a notable absence of determination to submit to the majesty of the law. Expressions calling for revenge are heard on every hand, often on slight provocation. "Kill him;" "I am going to shoot him;" "why don't they cut his throat?" Such remarks are frequently made by men and women too, with reference to persons against whom a grievance exists, or if the taking of a human life were the moral trifle, and as if there were no law and no lawfully constituted authorities in the land. Even others who intelligent persons indulge in such language in the presence of those who are not accustomed to govern their passions, and in the hearing of children who form much of their ideas by what they hear from their seniors. The effect of it all is that the foundations of society are gradually being undermined and the seeds are sown which in time will bear the fruits of anarchy.

It has already come to this that the murder of a human being no longer sends a shock of horror through a community with the same force as it used to, across the victim is some person occupying an exalted position. And even gentlemen, when men commit and slay a supposed offender, they hardly arouse a feeling of just indignation and hate among the great multitude of the people. These men, although they break the law and usurpe the prerogative of justice during their task, are often acclaimed the instruments "responsible to God," and unholy premium. With their hands steeped in blood they depart their fellow citizens, and were the sacred instruments of society with the dirk in their crime, and yet they are a portion of that in the state and the so-called statesmen. The condition of the antediluvian world is described as one of corruption and violence, culminating a speedy termination of the earthly career of the race, and it is not too much to say that the world at present is many degrees nearer that age. The rule is violence confronts us everywhere where men reigns without restraint from the great fountain of life and love. Against such a condition something more than law-making is needed.

The world must come back to original principles of justice, of virtue, of truth. It is a great mistake to suppose that these principles are antiquated and that the modern nations born of a spirit of contempt for religion are an advancement. Truth is eternal and can never change. What was true in the beginning is true today. The standard for all of virtue and justice. There must be a revival and a return to the eternal path, outside of which there is no happiness. And this revival must extend to every part of the human family. Only an era marked by changed hearts and the world be saved from a state which at present seems inevitable. The present society is drawing to an end and the question is whether it shall close in revolution and bloodshed. The signs of the times are portentous.

Our brethren Logan contemporary, the Journal, is accomplishing a considerable improvement in its plant in the way of a fast printing press, etc. To make, in these times, the outlay necessary for extensive additions as proposed is evidence of strong faith in the stability and progress of the Journal and indicates which governor commercial and commercial, no doubt the good people of Cache Valley will show their appreciation of the thrift and energy exhibited.

This letter comes to hand from the Millard Press of the 23rd:

Reading the Salt Lake papers since days, and seeing all the strange news, one gets the impression that we are somewhere between Salt Lake and the Missouri River, and could be in any city in the union when

It was the Tribune that gave this false impression of the public opinion here, but it was the only paper that printed what was calculated to do so, and she [illegible] Salt Lake Tribune, June 22.

Could the Tribune's conscience allow it to wait for the Millard Press to make that last observation?

SUNSTONE A. CO., the entertaining editors of Provo, have just issued in neat pamphlet form, the thoughtful and admirable lecture on "The Employment of Teachers," delivered on May 11th, by Prof. George H. Brimhall, director of the normal school of the B. Y. Academy, before the Utah County Teachers' association. The subject is well-treated, and in the convenient form the lecture is now given, it should receive the perusal of every school trustee.

The Genuine and the Sham.

Every good thing has its kinds of imitators; every genuine article its counterfeits. The imitators always choose the most valuable and popular article to counterfeit, so that when they attempt their sham to be equal, or as good, or the same as "the-same-do's," the public may depend upon it that "the-same-do's" article is the best of the kind. The sham proves the genuine merit of the thing it copies and never can this been better illustrated than by the imitations of Allcock's Porous Plasters.

Allcock's Porous Plaster is the standard of excellence the world over, and its imitators in their cry that there is "as good as Allcock's" are only emphasizing this fact and admitting "Allcock's to be the acme of perfection, which it is their highest ambition to imitate. The difference between the genuine and these imitations, which at first only general appearance, is as wide as that between copper and gold.

The only safe way for purchasers is to always insist upon having Allcock's Porous Plaster. They are the only perfect plasters ever produced.

This Summer is the Time to Visit the Famous Shenandoah Valley, Va.

This valley is not only full of historical reminiscences, but is one of the finest agricultural, fruit growing and grazing countries in the world. The place for the farmer, the manufacturer, the capitalist and the stock raiser. The hills are full of iron ore and coal, and the valleys abundantly productive. The climate is a golden mean, pleasant in summer and delightful in winter. The water is abundant and pure. Lands are now cheap and to be secured by homeseekers on the most favorable terms. Come and look over this region, with the glorious crops and then demonstrate the fertility of the soil and the geniality of the climate. If you wish to make an investment that you will never think of except with unalloyed pleasure, or to secure a home which will be the delight of present and family, don't let this opportunity pass unnoticed. This is not the veritable Garden of Eden, but it is one of the best regions to be found in the temperate country in the world. For further information, call on or address M. V. Richards, Land and Immigration Agent, B. & O. R. R., Baltimore, Maryland.

The most striking feature of the age is best shown in the new White-sewing machine. Superior to all others, they are sold at lower prices and on easier terms for L. D. Hall, 257 West First South street. Call and examine or write for circular and prices.
