A WESTERN VILLAIN.

Career of Adventurer Who Created a Sensation in Cheyenne Social Circles.

CHARLES A. WHITE, THE FELLOW'S NAME

The Ex-Husband of Mrs. Nagle Prevented from Marrying a Sue Francisco Heiress

The society of San Francisco yesterday was greatly stirred up by the publication of what purported to be the true story or rather the whole record of Charles A. Williams, who was to marry Miss Genevieve Hook, heir Kimm, today.

This story was substantially the same that was printed six years ago in Chicago and Denver, at the time when Jacob-sided text society matron was that Charles A. White, who Harried at the leading character in the wonderful life, was using a disguised Williams, who had cut a large social swath here for nearly a year.

Williams came here from South Africa and was noted at once and with the exclusive social set by E. A. Wilson, also of Johannesburg, South Africa. Wilson searched for Williams and led Williams into the circle of clubs and society. Williams had no difficulty in getting into the social circles.

He is a handsome and lovable fellow, and it was not long before he gained the affections of Genevieve Hook, one of the idolized of San Francisco society, and who, by her father, was to her own right. He too quickly to love with Williams when White, and the engagement was announced and formally set. All preparations had been made for a few church weddings today when the informal one of a close city, under the circumstances that were so dramatic of Williams' record.

It is already rumored the girl and her friends for after a sensation had been given to the affair, and it appeared that Williams all about Williams's record and that the wedding would take place as announced, the announcement was made public that the wedding was postponed indefinitely.

This probably means that Williams will never get the young woman. Both simple justice as she has many wealthy admirers who will more for the impossibility of having such a record as Williams and White. Williams himself talk today, but his friend Wilson tried to lighten some dark spots of his record.

HIS CHEYENNE CAREER.

The most sensational episode preceding ever initiated in Laramie county, Wyoming, was brought when Mrs. Bessie J. White commenced a suit against her husband of a year for absolute divorce with alimony. This was on Sept. 16, 1891. Mrs. White was quite a handsome woman. She was formerly the wife of Lawrence Nagle, a person of very high standing in the business community for many years. He had been regarded as one of the most solid men in the state. At his death he left an estate valued at half a million dollars and a magnificent residency in the city of Cheyenne. Mrs. White met and married White at Hot Springs, Ark., where she was spending a short season. White was some years younger than his wife. He represented himself as a distinguished young American, who had traveled extensively as correspondent of the London Illustrated News, of which he was the American manager under a salary of $5,000 a year.

A match was soon struck up between the pair, which on White's side was apparently necessary from the start. The day of the wedding was fixed and White made his first visit to Cheyenne.

It is now known that as a preliminary to the marriage White insisted that $25,000 be placed to his credit in bank. This was done before the ceremony was performed. The couple were married in August, 1891. White's honeymoon was spent upon the Nagle ranch. He left for New York, taking with him Mrs. White's son George, whom he was to place in school, in either with Mrs. White's aunt for $75 per.

According to the story as now told, White began soon after his marriage to systematic course of abuse. He accused her of his life with the most language, hot only to her face, but in talking about her to her friends. He accused her of criminal intercourse with various men, about Cheyenne, who he knew there was not a shadow of a case for the charge. In July, 1891, he reached home early in the morning after some months absence in the East, and threw his wife's bedroom and threw a pitcher at her. The pitcher was broken and the ceiling badly damaged.

Four days later he struck her with in the face three or four times so that she fainted. The same night he kicked her out of bed. Three days later he struck her in the face, causing her to drop to the floor. He chided her so severely she was obliged to call a physician. Later he drove her out of the house at 4 o'clock in the morning.

In one of his fits of anger he threw something at her at the table, and was very provoked because she had her young by her son threatening to shoot him. He struck her in the face, causing her eyes to swell to three times their usual size. From the effects of this beating, her face was black and blue for three months.

The feeling against White in Cheyenne became exceedingly bitter. While it was suspected that Mrs. White was not particularly happy, her friends did not know her troubles to be so intolerable. Mrs. Nagle thought that White had been in the city where the Nagle house. Known to White were been informed of Nagle's. White was rather a good looking young fellow, but strange to his success and an admirer of the fair white.

It was rumored during the development of the case that Attorney Amos was in New York taking after Mrs. Nagle's interests, that he was a member of a company going to Africa from New York city. This organization included White with money to make representations from Mrs. Nagle and to create a favorable impression in Cheyenne. White deliberately went to Hot Springs, Ark., to meet Mrs. Nagle and to make an absent promise and to make the most his presentation he was artful enough to be introduced by Stanley Dick W. Young of Indiana. After a brief courtship the marriage was consummated. Mrs. Nagle notifies on Aug. 31, 1891. It was celebrated by a grand social, which attracted the elite of the city of Cheyenne's best society. It began by organ music, Mendelssohn's wedding March was first played by the bride, musician of to wife.

At the May, 1891, term of District court the association of the Nagle estate was closed and the estate distributed between Mrs. Nagle and her son George. About the time of the distribution of estate, Mrs. Nagle's city removed to the latter part of August, 1891. Mrs. Nagle left Cheyenne to join her husband in New York and arrived it by a mortgage upon her real estate and by her stocks and bonds which she put up as security. Proceeds to White's marriage with Mrs. Nagle, which occurred Aug. 31, 1891. Mrs. Nagle had executed a marriage contract whereby she agreed to pay White a sum of $50,000 in consideration of the marriage. She had paid on this contract the sum of $25,000 in cash, including a balance of $15,000 under the contract.

Mrs. Nagle's stock of cattle on hand and her stocks and bonds were to upon lower turned over to her and George's share was in turn turned over to his guardian, Mr. Dubois.

On September 21, Mrs. Nagle went to Attorney Hall and asked him to prepare her from White. This was about two days before the trials for the were very badly shattered and a settlement was not made until the second day, when Mrs. Nagle stated that White had obtained the key to the box in the bank and had taken therefrom the stocks and bonds and Mrs. Nagle's money amounting to $25,000 and placed them in the box and at no time had given White the key. It was also ascertained that of the amount of cash which had been turned over to her in the form of a check and which was deposited in the Stock Growers' bank, there was left a little over $10. A bonus of $5,000 had previously been given by Mrs. Nagle to White, presuming him to remain her husband and sign her name. The check turned to her is the most honest sum for them.

Attorney Hall at once commenced proceedings for divorce and for recovery of the property and the recovery of the cash and stocks and bonds. Mrs. Nagle thought that White had been in the city of Cheyenne with the Nagle property. Telegrams were sent to relative made to find him and also to New York, and no trace of him could be found. A complaint was filed, charging White with larceny and embezzlement, and Sheriff Kelly arrested White in New York. Under the statutes of New York, to find a right to demand a hearing before the governor. Kelly went Mr. Hall to come on and he did so. The hearing was had in New York City at the Weldon hotel and the Governor remanded White to the custody of Sheriff Kelly. Before a warrant of extradition was issued White succeeded in the circuit court of appeals. A hearing was had and Judge Wallace also remanded White to the custody of Sheriff Kelly. Under a warrant of extradition White was permitted to the circuit court of appeals. White took an appeal and made application to be released on a writ of habeas corpus. Attorney Hall and Judge Wallace denied it and remanded him to the custody of the United States marshal. White was then in the Tombs prison in the city of New York and when he could get no trial, he made application to be released from the Tombs on the ground of a year for his confinement. Judge Wallace granted his application and he was confined at Ludlow street jail, where he spent some weeks after. While the main Divorce proceeding made application for a revocation of his registration. Mrs. Osborne decided to revoke the order of the Supreme court and Judge Lacombe granted the application. Judge Lacombe for bail. This application was granted and White was permitted to deposit $12,000 with Commissioner Shepherd and be released. The court of appeals reached the case and handed down a decision remanding White to the custody of the Wyoming authorities. When the mandate arrived, White was not found. Negotiations, however, were pending, the result of which was that, in September, 1893, Mrs. Nagle's stocks, bonds, property note and marriage contract and money were delivered to Attorney Hall in New York City, who has since received several inquiries from South Africa concerning White—Cheyenne Sun-Leader.

FIRST SESSION.

Gen. Garcia Attends the First Meeting of the Cuban Assembly.

Santiago de Cuba, Oct. 25.—The first session of the Cuban assembly was held yesterday at Santa Cruz del Sur. A majority of the delegates were military leaders, each of the six army corps being represented by eight. The sessions of the assembly was the appearance of Gen. Garcia, who is one of the delegates from the First army corps, a fact which practically renders the success of the assembly's work. Gen. Garcia's presence at the assembly's meeting is considered a congress conclusion, as it is expected that he controls a majority of the delegates. The Cuban Junta in Jamaica, the leaders now fear that they had any degree to discredit Gen. Garcia, and the fear of the charges in Santiago, Gen. Garcia's presence at the assembly probably will not be made.

The principal question for consideration will be that of extending the war to the Western provinces, which appear disbanding unless the words of one of the military delegates—"Some success is necessary to prevent President McKinley that he intends to conserve the resolutions of the United States Congress regarding the absolute freedom of Cuba."

If being a military assembly, the secession party has but a small representation. One proposition to come up for discussion is that the army should remain in armed force for the purpose of polling and governing the island from the time of the withdrawal of the United States troops are expected to move. The assembly will appoint a committee to wait on President McKinley regarding the status of Cuba, including probably of Garcia, Quesada and Parrogan, and it is safe to assume that the assembly will remain in session until the army in any event will be disbanded until the report of the commission is received.
