THE TARIFF BILL.

The tariff bill passed the house of representatives last night by a majority of 204 votes. The vote was taken on the bill as it came from the committee on ways and means, without any material change. The bill will now go to the senate, where it will be subjected to a long and searching discussion, and it will undoubtedly be very much changed before it is finally passed. The vote in the house was almost a party one, the democrats voting for the bill and the republicans against it. The bill will be found in our telegraphic columns.

THE TARIFF WEEKLY, the magazine issue, is published and ready for mailing. Price, 10 cents. Subscribers who have not received their copies should call at the office for them.

THE TARIFF BILL will be found in full in the telegraphic columns of this issue. It will be found a very long document, and will need a good deal of study before its meaning can be fully understood. It will be found that the bill has undergone very little change since it was first reported to the house. The principal changes made in it have been in the direction of increasing the duties on some articles, and of placing some articles on the free list that were dutiable in the original bill. The bill will be found very interesting reading, and we shall publish it in full in our issue of Tuesday morning.

THE TARIFF BILL will be found in full in our telegraphic columns. It will be found very long and difficult to understand, but we shall publish it in our issue of Tuesday morning, when it will be found convenient for reference.
