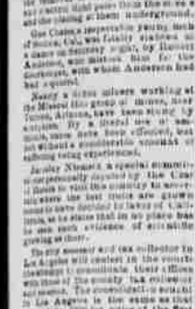
Reno, Nevada, Gazette: A lady in Reno for a lady less than a year old which has developed a peculiarity. The child has been very good and apparent in its constantly crawling something. One thing after another has been given to and every means known to persuasion or force was used to stop its crawling. The mother is an expert bicycler and is very fond of riding. She was heard to tell that before the birth of the child she had no school time strong desire to take a spin on her wheel, and it was through fear that the child had been marked in this respect. About two weeks ago a better arrangement was decided by a surgeon, the child put into it and given a ride for a mile or two. A change was immediately noticeable in its condition, and every vestiges of this strange habit have resulted in a complete cure of the child's peculiarities, and the child has rapidly gained strength and flesh.



CIRCULAR COW BARN.

It Will not Substitute in Nearly Every Window Anything.

Here is the man's idea of a model barn. It has the cows and horses both with the continual for grain. The objections to basement stables are as many outlined here as they could be anything.

In this barn, or any barn, the animals should all head outward so as to get the air and light. The best ventilation is this
