PROVO, UTAH, MARCH 23, 1896.

FOURTH DISTRICT COURT.

Harry Hayes of Eureka Placed on Trial for the Murder of Albert Eastman.

Yesterday morning the trial of Harry Hayes, indicted for killing his stepson, Albert Eastman, alias Albert Hayes, commenced in the Fourth district court before Judge McClatchy. The State is represented by A. H. Smith, prosecuting attorney for Utah county, and Tout, man & Wedgewood; defendant's attorneys are J. W. Wentworth and Chas. DeMoisy.

Readers of the News will remember the excitement that ensued the discovery of the bodies of Albert Eastman, Andrew Jackson and Albert Hayes on the shores of Utah Lake, near Pelican Point, about a year ago. The body of Eastman was found on the 12th of March, 1895, and was found to be with a rifle-ball hole in the right side and one on the left side of the chest, and had been been thrown into the lake and weighted down with stones. It was known that Nelson and Jackson, cousins of Eastman, had been living with him in a cabin on the Hayes ranch at Pelican Point, and as they were also missing, a vigilante search was commenced by the officers and citizens of this county, and on the 22 of March their bodies were found on the shores of the lake, some distance south of the place where Eastman was found. Jackson had a bullet wound in the head, the ball having entered on the right side, back of the ear, and passed out on the left side. Nelson had two shot holes in the back, the bullet passing out between the eyes. The dead men were last seen alive about the 10th of February by one of the neighbors, who says after that other neighbors noticed that the ranch was deserted and that the stock needed attention, and notified Mr. and Mrs. Hayes, who lived in Harmon, of the fact. They came to the ranch and placed a man in charge of it, and he says that the missing men disposed of on a prospecting trip, was expressed by Mr. and Mrs. Hayes. When the bodies were found suspicion at once pointed to Hayes, who had had been friendly with his stepson, but he was not arrested, the officers hoping that he would make more mistakes and be more confirmed in his guilt. The officers worked industriously on the clues that were furnished by the evidence given before the coroner and had fell the case was taken before the grand jury in session in this city, over forty witnesses were examined and over a month devoted to investigating the case. On the 6th of December, 1895, an indictment against Hayes, charging him with the murder of Eastman, was returned and he was arrested, arraigned and pleaded not guilty, and has been imprisoned in the county jail awaiting trial since that time.

The officers have been at a great disadvantage in working up the case on account of the lapse of time between the murder and the discovery of the bodies, and have necessarily been very guarded in giving publicity to the results of their investigations, but it is rumored that some startling circumstances will be brought out during the trial.

A team and wagon have been missing from the Hayes ranch since the time the boys disappeared from the ranch, and the theory of the defense is that the boys were murdered by some tramps, who took the team and wagon away with them. The officers have never believed this, but it is thought the horses and wagon had been sunken in Utah Lake at the same time the bodies were placed there, and spent a great many days dragging the lake in the hope of finding them, but were unsuccessful. If the horses and wagon have been found the circumstances of their disappearance will throw great light on the case.

Hayes is a man about 45 years of age, of medium height, sharp features and steel blue eyes; he has a nervous and irritable temper and shows under his imprisonment and the accusation brought against him. He speaks with quite a German accent, but claims to be of American birth.

The following jurors were peremptorily excused in the case: R. F. Woodward, Joseph E. Wilkins, Spanish Fork; John S. Park, A. G. Johnson, Provo Bench; John D. Halladay, S. D. Cushing, Smithfield; Hewson Walker Jr., Pleasant Grove; George Finlayson, George Montague and J. J. McClellan, Payson. Tom exhausted the panel and a special venire for 50 jurors, returnable this morning, was issued. Twenty jurors, T. B. Parker of American Fork and Hiram Allred of Lehi were excused for cause, having formed an opinion in the case. The State exercised three peremptory challenges and the defense five. As cause was made to have seventeen witnesses for the defense subpoenaed at the expense of the State on the ground that deceased was unable to pay for their attendance, after he had testified that he owned no property.

A CHICAGO LAWYER THE CULPRIT.

Clark to McCormick and five other heirs of Moses McCormick, who died at Rock Springs, Wyoming, in 1893, have filed a suit against Utah county for $10,000, which they claim is due from the county by reason of the sale of a piece of real estate and for delinquent taxes in 1893, and from which sale the above amount was realized over and above the taxes assessed against it, and put into the county treasury by W. H. Brown, the assessor, in 1893.

The county court has refused to pay the amount for the reason that there is no account of the money being taken into the county, and they do not think they are responsible for the amount. The treasurer has been in the habit of keeping a separate account of the funds received from property sold for taxes, but the sum in question does not appear in such account, nor does it appear to have been paid into the general county fund. And the question is whether the county, or the assessor or the treasurer is responsible for it.

Notes.

Yesterday evening three men from Nevada brought an insane patient to the city with the intention of taking him to the asylum. Dr. Pike refused to receive him, as he was not properly committed, and he was placed in the county jail and Dr. Allen summoned to lend aid. He claims that he is have him committed to the asylum if possible, although there is some difficulty in the way because of the fact that the patient is not a citizen of the state. He complained of his treatment after having been placed in a cell, and their names could not be learned.

These families have been made happy by the arrival of new members: Mr. and Mrs. B. Cluff Jr., a boy; Mr. and Mrs. W. M. McKendrick, a girl; Mr. and Mrs. Joseph C. Faires, a girl.

A marriage license was issued yesterday to Brigham Madsen of Lake View, aged 22, and Mattie Chesely of Provo, aged 20.

A Republican county convention will be held in Springville on April 2nd.
