POLYNESIAN HOUSES AT SALTAIR.

Unique Attractions for the Pacific Islanders' Reunion-Big Hawaiian Feast, at Which the Native Dish of Poi Will Be Made -Songs, Chants and Scenes of Pacific Life.

The general committee having charge [ of the Pacific Islanders' re-union, of which Hon. John T. Caine is chairman, have issued a fine official program and invitation circular which have been mailed extensively throughout the state to all returned missionaries from the Pacific islands.

These gatherings have been exceedingly popular each year as many unique and original features have been introduced. Arrangements have been made with the management at Saltair to enlarge the stand in order to permit of suitable scenery and Polynesian houses will be specially erected for this occasion.

Seating capacity will be arranged for about three thousand people in the af-ternoon and every possible arrange-ment will be made to enable the crowds to witness the vivid representations of life in Polynesia. Among the after-noon attractions will be the Hawailan luau, or feast of honor which will include the making of pol (the popular native food) and the native method of cooking vegetables, fish, etc. Numer-ous songs, chants, etc., will be rendered by native Hawaiians.

A scene from Society Islands will portrary wash-day at Tahiti, and the amusing method of washing and ironing clothes by natives in costume. A impany of returned missionaries from Utah county will present features of life in Samoa, introducing a "Siva," or native motion song and New Zealanders will give a series of scenes from Maori-land including their tangihanga or weeping, Hongi, or nose salutation, greetings by the aged Maori chief Hfrini Whanga, the haka, or war dance, In the evening stereopticon views will be given illustrating a trip across the Pacific. All returned missionaries who have not received official programs and people who have imigrated from the slands are urged to correspond at once with the general secretary, Frank Cutler, Sait Lake City. The re-union will be held at Saltair, July 31, (Wednesday)

Special excursions will run from Ogden, conveying passengers Dayis county points and from Nephi, Tintic and Utah county. Special rates will also be in force from St. Anthony and all intermediate points at single fare for round trip good from July 39 to August 1, inclusive. The celebration will take place at Saltair on July 31.

Special Correspondence.

Eureka, July 19 .- The Oxford rooming house in Eureka is made lively these days by a jolly lot of boys who compose the University of Utah surveying class now doing practical work in mining engineering in this camp.

Each member of the class has been given a claim to re-survey. The student must find his own corners from the information given him, must measure the angles, tie the survey to the nearest corner of the public land survey and also to the one or more corners of the claims in the neighborhood with which the one to be surveyed may be in conflict. From an abservation on the sun the true bearing of the lines run must be determined, and the results thus obtained are checked by an observation on the north star. The latitude of the place is also determined by similar observations. The area of the whole claim is figured, as also the area the claim has in con-flict with those in the neighborhood that have already been located. In short the students make a complete survey, with notes and maps, made in the required way, and put in the form prescribed in the "Manual of Instructions for the Survey of Mineral Lands," just as if they were to be presented to the surveyor-general with an application for patent. Through the kindness of Edward H. Anderson, surveyor-general, the stu dents are provided with the notes of hese surveys, and with copies of the Instructions to Mineral Surveyors. so that they are getting actual prac-tical experience for their efforts. The members of the class are indebt-ed to Hon, C. E. Allen for permission to spend a day in the Centennial-Eureka mine, studying timbering, and other mining operations. They are also under obligations to Mr. Hansen, the gentleman in charge of the construction of the new May Day mill, for the privilege of inspecting the machinery Although the mill is not yet running Mr. Hansen was kind enough to explain its intricacies, and turned on the electric power to show the machinery in motio When the surface work is completed the students will take up some under ground work in the Bullion-Beck mine, whose authorities have kindly given permission for them to do so. Complete maps, including plan, longitudinal section, and lateral section, will be made of the work done.

The boys while at work today heard a lady who was driving by say: "Those surveyors have been at work a good while, haven't they? And aren't they young looking to be doing work of that kind? Those who are at the instruments get $10 a day. I tell you, young fellows make plenty of money when they once get into that business.'

I have been watching the construction of that edifice from the beginning and I must say it is superb in every respect. I would judge that a monster bonfire could be built on its interior, and that it would simply die down to nothing for lack of anything combustible in the prise and pleasure I learned that Hyum B. Clawson was the "boss" masor n charge of the work. The reason was that he and I had worked together in St. Joe, Missouri, a year or two previou on various buildings and I was cheered by the reflection that as he had been fortunate enough to obtain work so soon in the new land there was also hope for us.
