The young ladies of the Nineteenth ward have been busy the last month preparing fancy work, dressing dolls and other incidentals suitable for Xmas presents, which they propose—next Tuesday evening—to dispose of at a bazaar held in the meeting house. A good musical program and a candy pulling will be further inducements towards furnishing a pleasant evening's entertainment.

From California.

Elder Charles J. Nebeker of the Fourteenth ward of this city is home again after an absence of sixteen months, during which period he was engaged in missionary work in California. His return is earlier than it would have been had his health been good all of the time, but unfortunately he was the victim of a serious attack of typhoid fever. He is, however, steadily improving now and expects a complete recovery soon. He enjoyed his work thoroughly. His labors were confined entirely to San Francisco and Oakland. The California mission, he says, is in a very promising and prosperous condition.

SATURDAY SIFTINGS.

Salt Lake was an applicant for the Republican national convention. The nearest she got to it was St. Louis.

***

Salt Lake's incoming council will be composed of seven Democratic and eight Republican members, but it does not necessarily follow that in all things they will be a "Solid Seven" or an "Immovable Eight."

***

The official status is set up that faro banks are things of the past in this city. The same contention was recently made in San Francisco, but was conclusively disproved by a "tenderfoot" robbing one of the "defunct" institutions while in full blast. He was arrested, convicted and sentenced to jail for fifteen years and now the peace conservators of that city are silent on the question of faro banks.

***

It is understood that Governor-elect Wells is not likely to consider it either courteous or complimentary to be addressed by the distinctively un-American title of his "Excellency." Scores one for the State's new executive. The expression was introduced into this country from England in colonial days when governors were sent from across the waters to rule in the new world. No more will they wield the scepter of power in this land. Then let there be no employment of terms in our political vocabulary reminiscent of a period in our national history happily passed forever.

If the signs which are beginning to assume definite form and legibility on the legislative horoscope are to be relied upon, then at least one ambitious aspirant to senatorial honors will discover to his mortification and regret that as a political egg hatcher there is something out of gear in his bird coop. For a long time past he has apparently been as happy and hopeful as the hen engaged in the unprofitable process of incubating a nestfull of billiard balls. And like that fowl of the barnyard and farm, he will certainly be doomed to disappointment. There are other essentials to successful incubation than sunshine and sitting. The yolk of the egg must be all right.

"An idea" exclaimed Prof. Augsberg enthusiastically, to a class of city teachers in the High School one afternoon this week, while instructing them in the art of drawing, "is the most powerful thing in this world." "Well, that may be so, professor," sententiously rejoined one of the school ma'ms, "but my experience has convinced me that it depends somewhat on who gives expression to the idea." Then there was a general manifestation of uneasiness on the part of the other teachers who wondered if the reply were intended to be personal. But it wasn't and the professor made his "line" plain, a faculty that is, by the way, characteristic with him.

In these days of preponderating inclination to political equality between the sexes and the boasted desire of the male member of society to "tote fair" to the New Woman, it is highly important that Utah should start right officially. The Legislature will soon meet. It is made up wholly of men. It will have appointive officers and clerical assistants to name. The writer is not the deputized adviser of the Legislature, nor does he belong to the same political party; but he suggests that it might be convenient not to forget the women, for they are now full-fledged American citizens and will vote next year. It is said one bright woman wants to be chief clerk of the Senate, and that her prospects are like verdure in the spring time—looking up fast. But there are other places of trust to fill; stenographers, typewriters and pages are needed. What would be more picturesque than a pretty girl page attired in bifurcated skirts or knickerbockers? Certainly not a long, lean, angular and awkward school boy. In the event that the State solons do not have young lady acquaintances who would like to be transformed into legislative errand boys the writer will again suggest that he knows more than a baker's dozen diminutive vivacious Republican maidens who would fill the bill admirably. Further particulars on application.

It is wonderful how the free silver sentiment, so much encouraged here a year or two ago is subsiding. Men who at that time had bimetallic fever in its most virulent form are today practical gold monometallists. Inquiry into this radical reconstruction of views shows that in most cases personal selfishness is at the bottom of the whole business. In years gone by, Utah gave much more attention to the development of her silver resources than to her gold. In them, therefore, her citizens were most interested and when they received the heavy blow that adverse legislation dealt a great hue and cry went up. But recently it has become apparent that vast gold deposits, heretofore hidden from man and his sordidness lie within the confines of our magnificent mountain empire only awaiting the magic touch of enterprise and capital before pouring out their rich streams of wealth into the laps of an energetic people. And therein is the danger to the white metal. Its cause is temporarily forgotten or left for others to espouse. Men are going gold crazy. They say without hesitation or intended injury to silver that after all it will probably be found that this region has more gold in its composition than silver and that probably it is best not to be too rabid on the question. The man who would have made that argument in Utah two years ago would have been denounced as an enemy to its welfare. The facts seem to be that the best friends of silver are not found among the mining, but among the agricultural men of both the West and South.

There is something sadly, almost tragically romantic in the career of Alexander Collier, the once famous "blockade king," who crossed the dark river of earthly life in New York a few days ago. The dispatch to the News which chronicled his death and burial said that only two men were the mourners connected with the obsequial ceremonies in Woodland cemetery. Possibly this was in accordance with his own request. He was a strange man. He led a strange life. No dramatist could ask for better material on which to found a realistic and powerful play than his experiences will furnish. From obscurity he rose to be the greatest commercial character of his day. He made almost fabulous sums of money by hauling cotton and contraband articles during the Civil war. He became a multi-millionaire and spent his gold and silver with the lavishness of a profligate prince. His London home was a gorgeous palace. In it Confederates and friends of the Confederacy were always given a warm welcome. In 1870 Collier failed with liabilities amounting to hundreds of millions after a determined and unsuccessful attempt to corner the cotton trade of the world. The indignation of the English was boundless, and in order to escape summary punishment he fled to Spain. Special detectives were put on his trail and he escaped to South America. From this time forth his lot lay over chequered routes. In time he came back to this country and soon had such men as James G. Blaine and General Butler as business associates in railway and other enterprises. Temporary prosperity attended his affairs but it was soon succeeded by a protracted period of adversity. He could have received financial assistance from friends but his personal pride was such that he preferred the life of a stranded recluse to that of an aided pauper. It is asserted that while he was ending his days in sorrow and obscurity in New York his wife lived in luxury and ease in London, a condition made possible by his own business cunning and self-denial.

THE BEST

Tea or coffee is delightfully drinkable. We have them in our stock, and right here we want to say that it is a mistake to suppose that good tea or coffee can be bought anywhere, for they can't be. The market is flooded with spurious brands, and careless dealers are more apt to handle them than anything else. There is adulteration abroad and adulteration at home, and consumers need to be careful of the place where they buy. Intelligence and commercial integrity and honor in the local merchant afford the guarantee of purity which all are interested to find, for there are pure goods in the market, and careful and honest merchants know how to get them and do get them.

ANOTHER RAMBLER DAY.

The Rambler boys made a great showing at the Ogden races. The first event of the day was the ten mile road race, in which McCumsky finished third, taking third prize and third time prize. Then came the track races, Joe Hock taking second in the novice. Fowler first, Weller second, and Thatcher third in the mile scratch, class B, all "Rambler" you will note. In the half mile class A, May took second, Carter third. Half mile class B, Thatcher second, Fowler third. Five mile, class B, Fowler second. In this race a man in a yellow suit lost his head and fell, Crossman and Weller being immediately behind him, the result was a spill for these parties and the race left to Evans. The five mile, class A, was another Rambler event, May taking first, Joe Hock second and McCumsky third. Fourteen prizes 7 in one day is glory enough for any one.

People may laugh and people may cry,
And dogs may howl if they please,
But Rambler's win races whenever they go,
Regardless of how others feel.

Moral—Buy a Rambler! Ride a winner and you'll be a spinner.
