NO TIME TO BE LOST.

Appeal to the People of Utah to Make an Exhibit at the

COLUMBIAN WORLD'S EXPOSITION.

A General Desire That Utah Should be Creditably Represented.—Substantial Support Asked.

To the People of Utah:

The time is at hand when Utah must say she will or she will not make a display at the coming great Columbian World's Exposition. There is not a day to be lost. The managers of the exposition set May 1st, 1892, as the limit which States could have for beginning work on their respective buildings. This has generously been extended till June 1st, 1892. In order for Utah to avail herself of the very favorable location accorded her [illegible] upon which Idaho [illegible] to expend [illegible] if she can have Utah's location, most prompt and active steps must be taken at once by her citizens. The great importance and urgent nature of the movement can not be too fully appreciated. It will not do for any person whose interests or ambitions are centered in Utah, to remain inactive, upon the theory that others will attend to these matters. On the contrary, when called upon, every person should promptly and freely respond to such reasonable requests as the commissioners will make in conjunction with their advisory board of leading citizens of Utah.

At the solicitation of the commissioners, leading banks of the territory have consented to advance funds needed to the extent of $3,000 or less per bank, upon the following conditions:

The treasurer of the commission is to draw such moneys only as are ordered by the commissioners, and interest at the rate of 8 per cent. per annum is to be paid from only such times as that particular money is actually drawn.

There is not the slightest doubt that the money will be promptly appropriated by our next legislature, as the last legislature acted upon that line and the strong public sentiment in favor of a proper exhibit for Utah, will result in an adequate appropriation. But, banks cannot do business as individuals do, and hence, to advance the money, ask that an agreement with them for each loan be entered into by six or more persons. No one person's name being asked on more than one agreement. The banks themselves, do not doubt that an appropriation will be made, nor is there any reason why any person should hesitate about entering into such an agreement with one of these banks. It resolves itself into a mere matter of form, to the extent of allowing the commissioner to temporarily use the name of each person signing.

It should not be necessary for the commissioners nor any committee to call upon the public spirited citizens of Salt Lake or of Utah, in order to secure their assent to signing such an agreement, but all persons who feel that Utah should and must have proper representation, are hereby urgently requested to send their names at once to H. C. Chambers, president of the World's Fair commission. It must be borne in mind that this is no begging or donating proposition, but simply a public spirited movement in which we hope to receive that prompt and hearty response which has always characterized the actions of Utah's people in matters of public moment and local ambition.

There is no State or Territory which has more to present to the world, or which can make its presentation to better advantage than can Utah. There is no other State or Territory so thoroughly misunderstood or so woefully unappreciated as is Utah. In [illegible] this is the one grand opportunity for Utah to make a truthful exposition and secure to herself, her people and her resources, that recognition to which their combined merits so justly entitle them. And the ratio of benefits, which will thus accrue to Utah, will be greatly in excess of the benefits which may result to any other State or Territory which will exhibit at this exposition.

Utah is a part of this great nation and every citizen should feel an interest in this greatest of world's fairs yet held. All of the other States and Territories are making elaborate preparations to participate and have made appropriations ranging from $75,000 to $245,000 to pay the expenses of their exhibits. Many States expect to make additional appropriations ranging from two to five times the amounts now appropriated. In no less than nine States the constitutions prohibit appropriations of this nature, but their citizens have taken the matter in hand and have raised from $75,000 to $200,000 by private subscriptions.

California has appropriated $300,000 and this amount is being supplemented by county appropriations aggregating $500,000 more. In addition to these, the county organization are raising from $1000 to $10,000 each, by private subscriptions, which will make California's grand total about $1,000,000. It is estimated that her private exhibitors will expend $[illegible] to $500,000 in addition.

The general desire is that Utah should be creditably represented at the World's Fair, and this commission, in conjunction with the advisory board, hopes to gratify that desire. In the brief time that the commission has been considering the matter, it has become convinced that it is possible, by the expenditure of a reasonable sum of money and the hearty co-operation of the people in all sections, for Utah to make an exhibit that will be second to that of no other State or Territory, in comparison with her wealth and population.

Utah's exhibit will not only attract the favorable attention of millions of non-residents, but will be a wonderful surprise to her own people, scarcely one in ten of whom realize the extent of the wonderful resources of our Territory.

With hearty co-operation by all of her citizens, Utah's exhibit at the World's Fair will be worthy of the pride of her people, and it now remains for them to say what shall be done. The commissioners and advisory board will devote all of the time and energy at their command to make this exhibit worthy in every respect, but in order to accomplish anything we must have the substantial assistance and hearty co-operation of Utah's citizens.

H. C. CHAMBERS,
President,
R. MACINTOSH,
Vice President,
N. A. EMPEY,
Executive Commissioner, Utah World's Fair Commission.

NO USURY LAWS IN UTAH.

Hon. John T. Caine Asked for Information.—The Natural Gas Discovery.

In response to a letter received from W. S. Winslow, of Park Rapids, Michigan, Secretary Sears, of the Chamber of Commerce, has written as follows:

"There are no usury laws here and money loans on good security at [illegible] per cent. This is a good field for investing this kind of business, and for your further information will say that we expect a large increase in population in the next year in consequence of the recent developments in natural gas. Any further information that I can furnish you will be done with pleasure."

HON. JOHN T. CAINE APPEALED TO.

Secretary Sears has also written to Hon. John T. Caine, Utah's Delegate, at Washington, for the full text of the decision of the Interstate Commerce Commission against the Northern Pacific and Union Pacific roads in the case of Fargo, N. D., and St. Paul, as this decision covers the long and short haul clause, and is therefore of special interest in the case already brought by the Salt Lake Chamber of Commerce against several of the railroads for discrimination against this Territory.

NATURAL GAS.

Secretary Sears has also written the following self-explanatory letter:

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah, April [illegible], 1892.
M. S. Home, Esq., Wabash, Ind.

Dear Sir—Your letter to Mr. Frank [illegible] of this city has been handed to me for reply, and it gives me pleasure to be able to extend the wonders of our recent developments in the discovery of natural gas.

The existence of this gas has been known for years, but it was not until recently that any active measures were taken in the development of the same. After the preliminary work several companies were organized, the first and most active being the American Natural Gas Company which has already succeeded in sinking three wells with great results, and promises to have the same as soon as the machinery can be placed in position. These wells are located about nine miles north of the city, at what is known as Lake Shore, [illegible] have more successful developments within the city limits and altogether natural gas bids fair to be Utah's greatest resource. This gas is found at a depth of [illegible] to [illegible] feet in sandstone and shale, further penetration being impossible on account of the great pressure of the gas, which shows a full pressure of 120 to 150 pounds in less than thirty seconds, and has an estimated daily output of 12,000,000 feet.

[illegible] the Eastern gas man, is heavily interested in this field, and is at present [illegible] having pipe and other material for bringing it into the city, and he is also working up [illegible] and Indiana people who are anxious to come out here and investigate the situation for themselves.

The Territory of Utah, which for years has struggled for favorable [illegible] with many obstacles to retard her most rapid advancements, has at last reached the period where she can stand [illegible] and offer to the world her benefits of her vast resources, which lie not only in her natural gas, but in her many [illegible] where rich [illegible] in other parts of the country remain hidden in untold quantities, also in the charm of her unrivaled climate.

Trusting that we shall have the pleasure of a further correspondence with you on this subject, and that you will, if possible, take some active part in the matter, I beg to remain, yours truly,

S. W. SEARS, Secretary.

In New Mexico.

[Correspondence of the DESERET NEWS.]

Grand Junction has a population of 2,000. Some fruit is raised here as well as [illegible] and grain, but a large valley surrounding the place seems barren. There are two lines of the Denver and Rio Grande road from Grand Junction, one going over Marshall Pass, while the other passes northward through Newcastle coal fields and Leadville. Both roads join at Salida, also another, the Colorado Midland, which runs from Salida to Denver. Having traveled over the world-renowned Marshall Pass, I preferred the new and romantic route through Newcastle, which is a good coal country, but high up in the rocky crags. Glenwood is only twelve miles further on, and has an elevation of 5200 feet. Still climbing up with double headers to Leadville, which is 10,200 feet elevation, and snow is eleven inches deep. This route is a very picturesque one, following up Eagle river until it becomes very small. Some tunnels are met with and many very deep cuts through rock, and so close on the coaches pass to the rocky sides that a child would be crushed if it chanced to be between the narrow pass. The cliffs tower far above, and in some cases they fairly hang over the trains. Fourteen perpetual kilns were passed, which we named Coke Town. There was a delay of about three hours at Pueblo, distant 645 miles from Salt Lake City, where we awaited the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe train, but we fear we shall not better the condition and comfortable surroundings of the D. & R. G. W. coaches.

We were pleased to hear the welcome words "All aboard for Deming and El Paso." Moving with some level prairies, with some good farms, we arrived at La Junta, sixty-three miles, where we changed cars and went more southwest (seeing some worthless country) to Thatcher, forty-five miles from La Junta. Here we observed more signs of civilization. Trinidad, which is the only town of importance just before arriving in New Mexico, has a courthouse and churches, but its surroundings are rather uninviting to those who come from Utah.

From Trinidad we climbed up and through a chain of mountains. Following the line into New Mexico, our admittance into New Mexico was through a tunnel five-eights of a mile in length. Raton, eight miles from the New Mexico line, and just over the range of Mountains, is a town of 2500 population. Here we hear the Spanish language already. Immediately around here is more of a stock country, but southeast is said to be a good farming country. Red river, heading in the Rocky Mountains, spreads out to the southeast, running through New Mexico into Texas, and finally into the Arkansas river, which we crossed this morning. There are other streams south of Raton, all of them heading into the Rockies.

I am indebted to a Mr. J. M. Whitlock, who I met on the train with a few others who live ninety miles over the mountains in Taos county, for the information that they can there raise good wheat, as much as twenty bushels per acre, also oats, potatoes, beans, etc. Mines are also worked over there. Mr. Whitlock gave me the names of other streams running into the valley on the east of the Rockies, named Vermejo, Ponil and another [illegible]. Mr. Whitlock is a Mexican by birth, and was born in New Mexico, but his associates are from Old Mexico, and are mixed with Indian blood. He is a Presbyterian minister, and I took the opportunity of showing and explaining to him the pictures Cumorah and Moroni. He informs me that there are sixty-seven church and [illegible] churches (small ones) among the Mexicans, and that the [illegible] are favorable to converting his people. He is a worker, and says he believes in the efficacy of prayer. He feels disposed to read communications sent to his address.

I feel more pleased with my journey so far toward Old Mexico.

EDWARD STEVENSON.

Another Foundling.

Mrs. Charles L. Lowe of 2350 Adams avenue, Ogden, has for some time contemplated coming to the Home for Foundlings in this city and adopting a little child, she never having been blessed with one of her own, but Monday evening some unfortunate mother saved her the trouble by leaving a baby on her doorstep.

About [illegible] o'clock the front door bell rang and Mrs. Lowe hurried to answer the call, expecting to meet some friends, but no one was there. She looked around a moment, and her eyes fell upon a basket at her feet. Quickly catching it up she hurried into the parlor and removing a shawl of fine quality, looked down upon a beautiful little girl baby about five days old, dressed in clothes of rich texture and sleeping as soundly and sweetly as if in its mother's arms. There were no notes or sign by which its parentage could be traced.

The little waif was taken at once to the kind heart of Mrs. Lowe, and will never miss its natural mother.

Amusement Notes.

Reno and Ford's comedy, "Joshua Simpkins," at the Theatre tonight. The "rural band" paraded the streets at noon, and attracted some attention.

"THE POWER OF THE PRESS"

which opens Monday at the Salt Lake Theatre is a powerful drama by Augustus Pitou and Geo. H. Jessop. It has six sets and thirteen scenes, among which are a realistic representation of the Warden's office in the Sing Sing prison; the Manhattan Athletic Club; the corridor of the New Imperial Hotel; a full working ship yard at Astoria, with a vessel on the stocks; a wharf on the East river; a vivid picture of South street; a view of the Battery and Bay, and a full rigged and equipped bark, upon whose deck the final struggle takes place.

The play is well worth seeing as it has an interesting plot, and is well performed by the company.

Petition for Pardon.

The following petition has been received by Governor Thomas, from Manti, Sanpete County, on behalf of A. M. Blanchard:

"That on the eighth day of December, 1891, the said Blanchard was arraigned before a justice of the peace of Sanpete county, sentenced to three months' imprisonment in the county jail and fined $150; that the prisoner is a very poor person and unable to pay such fine; that he has no resources but the labor of his hands; that his family, consisting of his wife and three small children, now at Springville, Utah, are in a destitute condition, and these, with his aged mother, are dependent upon him for subsistence. Therefore, the petitioner ask that executive clemency be extended.

The petition is signed by G. E. Snow, deputy sheriff and jailor; and Dr. F. E. Kenner, William Luke, ex-mayor; Jacob Johnson, probate judge; Ferdinand Erickson, county attorney; S. O. Nelson and N. C. Swenson, selectmen, and about thirty others.

A Sad Case

Yesterday Sheriff Bishop took Mrs. William Turner nee Fanny Crosby, of Ogden, to the Insane Asylum at Provo, she having been adjudged insane by Probate Court and [illegible], acting at an examining board under the direction of Judge Bishop. The examination was held on Friday last but the Judge had been notified by Superintendent Pike that the institution could at present accommodate no new patients and the unfortunate woman was kept at her father's home until yesterday, when arrangements were made by which she could be accommodated at the asylum.

She leaves a little [illegible] baby, which will be cared for by Mrs. Crosby.

SAFEGUARDS OF HEALTH.

THE [illegible] OF A DOCTOR'S SKILL IS [illegible] WELL.

[illegible]

While disease at one time of battle is ever yielding to the advance of medical skill, at another it is surely surrendering to the progress of hygiene. To-day the physician is asked not only how the sick may be healed, but how the well may stay well. From year to year investigation lengthens the list of diseases strictly preventable, and diphtheria and typhoid only linger to mark the neglect of well-understood precautions. Vaccination has been so striking an example of what prophylaxis can do, that hundreds of eager experimenters are endeavoring to bring consumption and scarlet fever into the same category as smallpox.

From maladies less serious, but much more common, the public is fast learning that immunity is largely a question of taking care of one's general health and vigor. Seeds of disease which find a foothold in an enfeebled frame are either repelled by a sound and hearty constitution or harmlessly digested by it. To maintain this happy condition wholesome food, abundant exercise, personal cleanliness, temperance in all things, and the avoidance of worry are indispensable.

There are a great many people who know their long disease to be chronic, or their heart-action to be irregular, who suffer from some other constitutional weakness. Among this class the custom is gradually spreading of consulting a physician, not when acute difficulty has arisen, but as soon as the infirmity is detected and periodically thereafter. Nor seldom health is maintained in this way and life lengthened, for it is in their early stages of development that many diseases, especially the alarming derangements of the nervous system, can be most successfully treated.

Perhaps it is the daily glass of spirits or the weekly supper party, which the physician interdicts. Quite as often it is the amusement of the stock exchange or the card-table, which he has to prohibit. Whatever his advice, it has incalculably more value in preventing a crisis than in dealing with it after it has come to pass. Just as the best services of the lawyer are not in advocacy so much as in steering his client clear of the courts, so the doctor finds his worthiest skill to be in keeping his patient free from the needs of cure or healing. In the task of maintaining healthful conditions general and special, a science has grown up in which not only the physician but the architect, the sanitary engineer, the purveyor of food and drink, the manufacturer of clothing, have deep interests.
