PROVO.

PROVO, UTAH, - OCT. 12, 1893.

The Tinlin Case.

In the Collins assault case, the jury failed to agree and was discharged. The case goes over until next term.

The Tinlin and Jones cases came on for trial. Mr. King, attorney for the defense, submitted a proposition to try the defendants in four batches. The division was not acceptable to the prosecution, whereupon the defense demanded a separate trial for each defendant. The first defendant to be tried was John O. Sullivan. A host of witnesses, including the mayor and city marshal of Provo and deputy U. S. marshal offered testimony for the prosecution, the substance of which was as follows: On the evening of May 20, 1893, the Croft family moved into the Gardner house, located near the R. G. W. depot, Eastside. While the furniture was being unloaded a crowd gathered around and made threats that Croft would not be allowed to live there and without issuing remarks, "sent" into a favorite spittoon. As the wagon was entering some Sullivan clerks, his father, Croft and threatened to kill him if he came back. When Croft did return seven out of the eight window lights had been smashed in. The city officers were notified, and the officer appeared on the scene and commanded the crowd to disperse, which was done, but not immediately.

Mrs. Jacobs, Mrs. Quinn and others who were present on the occasion of the alleged disturbance, testified for the defense that they had heard no threats or insulting remarks or seen any acts of violence on the part of adults present. One witness had heard a rock crash through a window, but he did not know where it came from. There was some talk about "scabs" and scamps at the Bullion-Beck, but it was not loud or threatening. The broken windows were announced for on the theory that some boys had thrown stones.

The case was argued and submitted to the jury.

A Recalcitrant Witness.

The S. S. Jones adultery case was before the grand jury yesterday. While the civil case was in progress in court, Mr. Thurman prosecuting, the district attorney came in and announced to Judge Smith that Amelia Gessler, the lady in the Jones case, had refused to answer the question before the grand jury, "Has Mr. Jones ever visited you?" His honor summoned the lady to appear, and the following conversation ensued:

"Do you refuse to answer this question?"

"Yes, sir, I do."

"This is a perfectly proper question for you to answer; if you refuse, it becomes the duty of the court to punish you. You understand this, do you?"

"Yes, sir."

"And understanding this, you refuse to answer this question?"

"I decline to answer it."

The court was still loth to punish the lady and requested Messrs. Thurman and King, attorneys for Mr. Jones, to [illegible] with her and induce her, if possible, to [illegible] the question. After a brief [illegible] the court announced that she was [illegible] to answer. She refused to answer had been questioned, he said, by a fear of criminating herself, but on being assured that she would not be prosecuted, she had consented to answer.

Other Court Matters.

The bonds of Arnold Castor, an alleged cattle thief, were ordered forfeited, he having failed to appear to court.

The case of forgery against Samuel Stoker was dismissed on motion of the prosecuting attorney.

Notes.

The housebreaker who stole six dollars from Willard Bostic's residence a week since has been apprehended, and proves to be a young lady. Her parents were grief-stricken on learning of the guilt of their daughter, and on their account the name is withheld.

John O. Collins has come into possession of his father's, Zebedee Collins, written while on a mission in 1832 to 1834. The book has passed through water and fire, but the writing is still legible, and relates several interesting incidents in the life of the deceased patriarch.

A chambermaid at a lodging house in Bush street, San Francisco, was attracted by the smell of gas coming from one of the rooms, and, opening the door, found the occupant dead on the floor. The remains and the effects of the deceased were removed to the morgue, where it was learned that the name of the dead man was Isadore Batten, a French chef of considerable note. In 1878 he was a cook at the Palace hotel, since which time he has been traveling in Europe and the western states. A month ago he left Boston for San Francisco. From papers found in his possession it was learned that he belonged to the principal military societies of the large cities of the United States.

LOGAN.

LOGAN, UTAH, - OCT. 12, 1893.

Testing the Waterworks.

A very satisfactory test of the new system of waterworks was made on Monday afternoon under the supervision of the consulting engineer of the new system, Mr. S. Fortier. The fire department had just received their new hose and nozzles, and the trial tested not only the length to which water could be thrown, but also the strength of the new hose. The plugs were opened to their full extent, a stream was thrown over the Opera House, and the gauge showed a pressure of 130 pounds. When they were closed the indicator ran up to 175 pounds. The water was thrown to a great height and it took four men to handle each hose. The pressure is not usually as nearly as this, as a pressure regulator is placed upon the house and is regulated to allow a pressure of about thirty pounds, but in case of the use full pressure is turned on. Another very gratifying fact in connection with the new system is that Logan City owes it to no one and have to pay tribute to any other corporation for an unlimited supply of pure water.

Nominating Candidates.

On Tuesday evening Democratic primaries were held in each municipal ward of Logan, at which two candidates for city councilmen were nominated as mere delegates to the city and county conventions. The nominees for councilmen are as follows: First municipal ward, Joseph Wilcox and James A. Leishman. Second, Nephi W. Kunzler and Lorenzo Johnson. Third, Morgan S. Evans and William Watsons. Fourth, Nicholas Somers and Elias S. Kimball. Fifth, Andrew King Sr. and Ephraim Michelsen.

Republican primaries will be held on Saturday evening, when the Republican nominees will be named. Not much time or money will be spent in electioneering by either party this fall. There is a sentiment among some in favor of the people meeting as a whole and putting up a joint citizens' ticket, electing the men who are best qualified without regard to party. This idea, however, is not likely to materialize into anything tangible in Logan.

Child Hurt.

A four-year-old son of Mr. O. P. Olsen, of Hyrum, was very seriously injured on last Sunday afternoon. Mr. Olsen had his team in front of his residence while he was talking to some. The little boy climbed into the wagon, and while there something frightened the team, which broke the hitching strap and ran away. In turning a corner the wagon box was thrown off and the boy thrown out. It is to be supposed that one of the wheels ran over him, as one thigh was crushed near the hip joint. Dr. Snow was immediately sent for and rendered the necessary surgical assistance.

Mashed His Toes.

On Monday evening Willard Chatterton met with an accident in Logan canyon that may result in the loss of two of his toes. He had been at work helping to make the new road in the right hand fork, and was loading some logs on a wagon. He had one nearly up when his foot slipped and the log fell on his toes, badly mashing two of them.

News Notes!

Cattle and horses are being driven off of the mountains and into the fields where they act as gleaners.

Duck hunters are having good sport in the sloughs west and north of town. Parties go out every evening and return well loaded.

On Monday afternoon Andrew Fredricksen, a respectable citizen of Logan, died at his residence in the Fourth ward, at the age of seventy-five years. Mr. Fredricksen came to Logan at an early period of its history.

Here, as elsewhere, almost everyone is complaining of hard times.

An "old times" party held in Farley's hall last evening and a very fair attendance. The costumes were motley. All kinds of pressure were accepted in payment for tickets.
