TRUTH AND LIBERTY.

NO. 201. FRIDAY, JULY 20, 1894, SALT LAKE CITY, UTAH. VOL. XXVII.

THE SENATE DEBATE.

Tariff and President Cleveland's Letter on the Subject.

"A THEORY AND A CONDITION."

The Galleries Crowded in Expectation of a Pitched Battle Between Giants.

WASHINGTON, D. C., July 20.—Crowds packed the Senate galleries today. The House and Freedmen had yesterday thrown down the gauntlet in the tariff question and a pitched battle was expected.

Blackburn, in a pink negligee shirt, stood, watch in hand, while the judge delivered the invocation, looking like a judge at Kentucky Derby.

Voorhees, chairman of the finance committee, called up the conference report on the tariff bill and yielded the floor to Hoar, of N. J., who read a carefully prepared speech. He hoped, he said, when the bill passed the Senate two weeks ago, it had been perfected, but the events of the last twenty-four hours had convinced the Democratic party with the possibility of the failure of all tariff legislation at this session. If so, the responsibility must be placed where it belonged. He criticised the President for violating the principles of his party, in attempting to interfere with the prerogative of the legislative branch of the government, but declared that he will never be intimidated by threats from the President or by the silence of his party associates at the other end of the Capitol, who had been so uproariously applauded. He called attention to the differences between the situation in the House and that in the Senate. He reviewed the events in the House, which culminated in the passage of the bill with a loss of seventeen Democratic votes. In the Senate every Democrat was needed to pass the bill and the finance committee went industriously to work to harmonize the differences. They had accomplished that in a manner that deserved lasting credit, he said. He discussed a money on the tariff bill as it passed the Senate, which unlike the House bill, he declared, contains no income tax to relate to the industries of the country and is not framed by men from sparsely settled districts who knew nothing of the great commercial interests of the United States. He asserted that the framers of the House bill and a large proportion of the Democratic party were not tariff reformers, they were free traders.

Hill said: "A theory as well as a common new contents us. The theory of the Democratic party is that in the enactment of tariff legislation free raw materials should always be an essential and conspicuous element. The best interests of the manufacturers as well as the consumers of the land demand no golden. This is wise discrimination.

"Until recently I supposed there was no dispute upon this question of principle, but that every Democrat worthy of the name was willing to endorse that if there was one thing more than another in which the Democratic party was committed it was the doctrine of absolutely free materials. A true and honest constitution of every Democratic national platform for twelve years (recently omitted) is to the just and reasonable principle."

Hill read the Democratic national platform of 1892, and continued:

"To repeal the McKinley law in form, simply to re-enact it in effect is keeping the promise to the letter but breaking it in spirit. The platform united with pride and deliberately approved measures for free iron ore, free lead ore, free coal and free wool, which were pending in Congress at the time of the convention. The Democratic position was so plain and so clear that he who runs may read.

"If any Democratic member in any part of the country, forgetting the interests of the whole land and subservient the supposed interests of his locality, promised the people of his district or section that there would be an exception made to the enforcement of the general principle of free raw materials when the Democrats should obtain power, he exceeded his authority and misrepresented our position."

Hill then said the President's letter of acceptance was not that bold, ringing and explicit declaration in favor of the platform that the party had a right to expect, but his "remarkable letter" came to the House yesterday left no doubt of the position now.

Hill read extracts from the President's letter, every word of which he approved, although he would not defend the expediency. He declared the Senate bill violated the Democratic theory of tariff reform by leaving a duty on iron, coal, lead and several other raw materials. He said the President would veto the Senate bill, if passed, and appealed to the senators to surrender while they can do so honorably.

Hill differed from the President in regarding sugar, the tax on which, he declared, was not necessary if an income tax be retained, and the Senate must recede from its amendments.

Vest followed Hill with a scathing straightness of the President whose letter of acceptance pronounced in favor of free raw material, yet who now denounced the free raw materials as "quality and dishonor."

They urged the Senate to insist upon its amendments. He intimated that the secretary of the raw material the senator from New York is for success. He never in the long experience of the Democratic senators heard a voice in behalf of free coal and iron ore.

An angry colloquy between the two senators ensued.

BILLETIN.—Vilas moved that the Senate recede from the Senate differential.

3:05 p.m.—Vilas's motion to strike on the eighth of a cent per pound differential on refined sugar caused great hesitation as on the Democratic side. It was resumed in the hilarity a majority of one.

Mills declared his intention of supporting the motion of Vilas.

Price says he thinks the motion will be modified so that the Republicans will vote against it.

Manderson intends to move as a substitute for all motions pending a motion to instruct the Senate conferees to withdraw from the conference on the chairman of the House conferees have been replaced by some other member of the House than Wilson.

The circumstances are somewhat peculiar. Garfield had been reading about the bullet-proof suits invented and recently tested in Germany. He succeeded in make one like them and having completed it, he put it on and asked his brother to fire a shot at him. The little brother performed the request. The bullet went through the shield and pierced the boy's heart. The shield was made of coffee cards and filled with strips of old barbed wire and wool. The silver to be coined first will be blanks and bullion, of which there is sufficient on hand at the local mint to coin a million dollars. Collection of Fossils

CHAMBERLAIN, S. D., July 20.—Prof. J. E. Hatcher and his party of students from Princeton college, who have just completed a tour through the Bad Lands of this state in search of fossils and petrifications, have met with very good success. The party has been in the Bad Lands between the Cheyenne and White rivers since the 1st of March. Since completing their task the students have carted up an extra load trip to Yellowstone park. The collection of fossils has been shipped to Princeton. It was 9,000 pounds and consists of rare specimens of extinct animals.

The choicest and most valuable specimen was the Elotherium, or extinct pig.

This is the only specimen and only skeleton ever found of this character in that district, and is perfect, unbones being missing. This carcass is much larger than the modern pig, in fact it is larger than the living rhinoceros. Another specimen, the Poebrotherium, a species of the camel, is among the collection. Then there are skeletons of monstrous snail animals and a few fish skeletons, the first found in the Bad Lands. Last year's expedition from Princeton succeeded in unearthing the only crocodile ever found in the Bad Lands.

CHICAGO, July 20.—The Civic Federation of Chicago has started a movement which its promoters hope will lead toward a solution of the labor question and will prevent strikes and all other troubles of the kind. The plan is to hold a congress of representatives of the employers and employes similar to the parliament of religions held in this city last year. A date of the proposed conference has not yet been set.

With them it was not a question of wages. They were dissatisfied with the prison bill of fare and declared that no more work would be performed by them until there was a change of a better table. Warden Janes made an investigation and promised an improvement after which the prisoners, having won their strike, resumed work.

The Principals of the Romance Locked Up in Jail.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., July 20.—A sensational elopement from Knoxville, Tenn., culminated in the squalid sensational arrest here of all the principals in the affair. Mrs. Mattie Landers, a fine looking woman, aged 36, is in jail. Wm. Lovell, a well dressed man of 45, is in a cell at the Seventeenth street police station, and to an adjoining cell is C. S. Jennings, a fashionable looking man. The three were arrested by detectives at No. 1702 West Walnut street, on a warrant sworn out by Mr. W. Landers, of Knoxville, charging them with adultery. Landers, who is said to be in comfortable circumstances financially, came to Louisville from Knoxville two days ago and at once called on the chief of the detectives and told him his troubles. According to his statement his daughter, Nellie, a beautiful young woman of 18 years, had been receiving attentions from C. S. Jennings, against his will. He also stated that he had suspected his wife of being on much too friendly terms with Wm. H. Lovell.

On July 6th he said the whole party eloped, taking with them two small children. Lovell came to Louisville with Mrs. Landers and the two children. The eldest daughter was accompanied by Jennings. The house at No. 1702 West Walnut street was located and they had been living there since. Landers spent nearly two weeks searching for them before he came to this city. He secured the assistance of the detectives, who succeeded in locating the guilty parties. The eldest daughter was not locked up, but left in the care of the younger children.

Coupling pins were drawn and air brakes and hose cut and a torch was applied to many of the cars. An alarm was given and two companies of militia hurried to the scene. The crowd showed a disposition to fight and two volleys were fired by the troops. It is not thought that anyone was seriously hurt.

After dispersing the mob, the troops turned their attention to saving the train. The flames were extinguished and the cars coupled and the train sent on its way with a heavy guard. All trains are now being run under military protection.

Again the Britannia Won.

KINGSTOWN, Dublin Bay, July 20.—The Vigilant and Britannia started in the Royal St. George's day's racing of the Royal St. George yacht club. The Britannia was first over the line, the Vigilant followed almost instantly. The Britannia won.

The race was for a prize of $500 offered by the Royal St. George yacht club. The course was a triangle of about fifty miles. Nat Herreshoff was at the Vigilant's wheel. The Britannia crossed the line 19.32.55, the Vigilant 15 seconds later. The breeze was light, not favorable for the Vigilant. Almost immediately the Britannia increased the gap, though in the last leg of the first round the Vigilant pulled up so that when the east pier buoy was passed, marking the completion of one-third of the race, she was but twenty seconds behind. The next round, however, the Britannia showed 4 in 12 s ahead and the race was plainly hers. Meanwhile the enthusiasm of the spectators suffered some dampening by a succession of thunder showers.

NIGH UNTO DEATH.

Two Walker House Guests Have a Very Narrow Escape.

TURNED A DETECTIVE GAS TAP.

The Victims, City Marshal Brady and "Jimmy" Fisk, of Mt. Pleasant, Sanpete County.

It appears that there was a very bad case of asphyxiation at the Walker House, in this city yesterday, the particulars of which were not forthcoming until today and then they were gleaned only with considerable effort and persistent inquiry.

The victims were Thomas Brady, city marshal of Mt. Pleasant, Sanpete county, and James Jensen, a saloon keeper of the same town, better known as "Jimmy Fisk." The two men came up from their homes to attend the A. O. U. W. excursion at Saltair on Wednesday. They remained at the lake until the last train which came in about midnight. Brady's parents and relatives live in the Tenth ward but as the hour was very late and he had a friend with him they concluded to stay down town for the night and accordingly went to the Walker house where they registered, engaged a room and retired. Nothing more was heard or seen of them until yesterday afternoon at 10 o'clock, when heavy breathing and frequent groans were heard coming from their sleeping chamber. An entrance was forced and Brady found lying prostrate across the mantelpiece and apparently altogether lifeless form of Fisk. Brady had been vomiting and was so enfeebled and so far overcome by the deadly flow of gas which came from the jet in the center of the room as to be unable to speak.

The seriousness of the situation soon dawned upon the attaches of the house and the work of resuscitation began. Brady soon recovered but Fisk's case was more aggravated one and it was a long time before he crossed the danger line. Both men were very sick last night and are feeling anything but well today. They leave the city this evening on the southbound train for home.

They claim that on retiring to bed they turned the gas jet, which, instead of being stopped by a "guard" when the light was extinguished, continued to remove until the flow of gas again burst forth, a fact that they did not discover until after their narrow escape from death. An open window drew off an immense amount of the noxious vapor during the night and doubtless saved the men's lives.

"There is quite an agitation in Australasia at present in favor of the amalgamation of the Christian churches, especially the Methodist denominations, and meetings are being held in various parts of the colonies to discuss the practicability thereof. Great interest is being manifested and several united prayer meetings are being held.

"Miss Lulla Adair, an American lady, is causing a great sensation among the colonists by her daring balloon ascensions.

"People have suffered heavy losses from recent floods caused by an abundance of rain. Train and wagon traffic is temporarily stopped in many places from washouts, slides and damaged bridges. IT TOOK FIRST PRIZE.

Utah Best Sugar Ahead of All Competition.

The Other Western Factories Were Not In It at the Midwinter Fair.

Utah has showed California sugar producers in their own field. The Utah Sugar works made an exhibit at the Midwinter Fair in San Francisco, and so did others. The Utah exhibit was not very large but was artistically arranged, and as the judges above was ahead of all else in quality.

At the tests made for the best grades of test sugar, the judges summoned up and selected a sample that surpassed in quality all others. When the morning of the sugar was examined it proved to be Utah beet sugar.

Hence the label on the Midwinter awards Fair read:—First Prize, for Best Sugar, Utah Sugar Factory company.

That it goes when Utah is fully in the field.

WATER IN ARIZONA.

First Artesian Well in the Territory Made By Mormons,

AT ST. DAVID, 270 FEET DEEP.

A Great Blow to a Fertile But Parched Country—Among the Mormons Near the Border.

ST. DAVID, ARIZONA, June 29, 1894.

Editor Deseret News

As I promised, I will write to you from this the southern county of Arizona, which is near the citizens of Mexico. This county, named St. David, was peopled seventeen years ago by nine families, with Pulitzer P. Merrill at their head. The Mexicans used to say that this was one of the choice places of Arizona, and took it would have been if there was plenty of water for irrigation, for fruit and agricultural products can be raised in abundance, and so the rally season the little are covered with the best of grass.

Owing to the fact that the dam has broken each year, some of the people have become discouraged and moved away in the last four or five years, and there are now about fifty-seven families here. There is about eight miles of land located by the Saints, dotted here and there with flourishing orchards and golden fields, which is a surprise to the traveler as he passes through this dry territory. It has been prophesied by one of the Apostles that this place will become a delightsome city, a choice gathering place for the saints, and with faith in this prophecy those who remain are contented and are waiting for a brighter future after their many hardships.

The surrounding farms, Tombstone and others, are increasing in population very rapidly, on account of the mines shooting up there. This increasing in population of the surrounding country contributes very favorably to us with the steady though slow increase of the little county, and if we take into consideration the latest event here, the opening of a most abundant artesian well (so large, which sends the water down the creek for a mile, and which I understand is the first artesian well ever obtained in Arizona), it may yet change the affairs of the country to a source of later fulfilment of the Apostles' prophecy on the place.

Arizona's people have spent a great deal of money in trying to obtain artesian well water, all to no effect heretofore. Even here several parties have dug, in years past, two and three hundred feet, in search for water of the kind which was never found. This was to be the good luck of two of our young people, Alexander and John McGraw, who are nephews of Joseph E. Taylor, one of the presidency of the Salt Lake Stake of Zion. The fact that this well, which is 270 feet deep, is in sand shoes, promises good supply and steady source of water, as this is the formation in which the numerous artesian wells of New Mexico, Colorado and the Dakotas are dug. It is probable the bed of this water is not limited to the immediate surroundings, but its extension has not been ascertained yet, as this is the only well so far. Yet people calculate to find out as soon as the harvest is over. Everybody is hoping for success. Many people of Arizona are quite elated over this one, and have come to see and examine this as well for themselves.

My stay in this place is at present on account of the slow way of the Mexican mail, as I have to obtain a certificate of our colonization company in that country before I cross the line with the privileges of a colonist. The object of my mission is to establish a place where the Spanish speaking people may be taught the principles of the Gospel and the arts of peace in their own language and in their own land, so that they may have a good opportunity of accepting or rejecting the Gospel.

While waiting for my certificate I went to see some Mexicans who are farming in this place on land they bought from the brethren here. One of the brethren of the same name said the owner is well thought of, but I found him discouraged and anxious to sell his property or abandon it to go back to his country. Some of our people have did not sympathize with the Mexicans, but I am happy to say that we only a small out of 5 yet. It has and a most injurious influence and has produced quite a disturbance in this section. I want to work with the very best of feelings to bring the parties to a good understanding and I found it quite easy, the main thing being the here a knowledge of the language, more than anything else, to understand things properly. I have the satisfaction of leaving them in good feelings and they seem to appreciate that there is some of my race who care their interest. It made them feel quite at home.

While on the subject I will state that the Mormons purchase a great deal of the Indian character, and never lost yet a mule, need or a horse. They are a passionate people to the native and people coming into this country will find it to their interest to make themselves pleasant and congenial with the Mexicans. It will open to them faithful service of better class in their employ. In the custom house in particular, where Mexican officers are sometimes a little hard, travelers will find that by speaking kindly and treating them as friends they are very easily treated and accommodating. I would impress the matter with many facts of my own experience, but this is already quite a lengthy letter, so I will make an end for this time. M. G. T.
