WEBER STAKE SUNDAY SCHOOLS.

Interesting Report of Two Day's Conference in Ogden.

OGDEN, November 12, 1894.

Editor Deseret News:

The annual Sunday school conference of Weber Stake was held in the Ogden Tabernacle on Saturday and Sunday November 10th and 11th. There were present Elders George Goddard, Karl G. Maeser and John M. Whittaker; also Richard Ballantyne and L. F. Moench of the Stake superintendency. The West Weber Sunday school occupied the choir stand and led the singing the first day.

Superintendent Ballantyne called the meeting to order at 10 a. m., after singing and prayer the roll was called and eighteen superintendents answered to their names. There was also a large attendance of officers and teachers.

Elder George Goddard made a few introductory remarks on the remarkable growth of the Sabbath schools, and the importance of annual conferences, after which reports were made by a number of ward superintendents, showing a fair condition of their schools.

Elder Whittaker then addressed the conference on the importance of stability and the necessity of home preparation on the part of teachers in class work, and also the power of example.

Elder Karl G. Maeser spoke upon Sunday school methods of teaching, and the great influence women have, more intellectual work was the work of that teacher who teaches by the force of example and who enters into his work with soul and heart. He showed the importance of teachers' meetings, where place are outlined and all subjects of importance are discussed, explained, and where some academy students failed, and urged the teachers only those to send to the Academy to qualify for Sunday school work whose hearts were in it.

After singing the afternoon meeting was closed with prayer by Wm. B. Maxwell, Patriarch.

At 2 p.m. conference convened again; singing by the West Weber school, and prayer by Counselor Moulton of the Stake presidency.

An excellent class exercise was given by the first intermediate department of the 20th ward school, ably conducted by Teacher W. J. Burton—subject, "Christ and Nicodemus." Reports from superintendents were then made (based) and then superintendent Ballantyne complimented the officers and teachers on the large attendance present and spoke of the importance of departmental teachers' meeting with each other once a week as a means of preparing for class work on Sunday. He quoted from Isaiah to show the strength and comfort of those who walked on the Lord and sought His blessings in prayer, spoke the law of the "waiting hour" and how by visiting the homes of the children a complete enrolment and uniform attendance could be secured.

Elder Maeser was the next speaker. He said officers and teachers should be united not to discourage faithful workers who had not been favored with academic privileges so thereby even those who were doing the best work might be disheartened because of the fear of not being able to carry out the new methods of teaching. If any such have left the schools they should be sought after and invited to return.

Elder Goddard said when the Saints keep the Word of Wisdom there would be but little use for doctors, apothecary shops, tobacconists, whisky dealers or lawyers.

Singing by the choir and benediction by Supt. R. D. Brown.

SECOND DAY.

Present in addition to the speakers of yesterday General Superintendent George Q. Cannon, Elder F. D. Richards and of the Stake presidency, L. W. Shurtliff and N. C. Figgins; also the five city schools en masse except the primaries, which nearly filled the tabernacle so that not little room was left for others.

Elder L. F. Moench called the meeting to order at 10 a.m. The singing, which was done by all the schools, under the direction of Conductor Hinchcliff, thrilled the hearts of the assembly with joy and praise. Prayer was offered by Counselor President L. W. Shurtliff. After singing and a few remarks from superintendent Goddard in relation to reports, the theological class of the Fourth ward gave a class exercise under the direction of the head teacher, Frank J. Stanford; subject—"Christ's death and burial." The statement by Miss Lena Eldredge and the nine answers to questions by members of the class, were really admirable and instructive and showed a thorough knowledge of the subject, reflecting much credit to the teachers.

Elder John M. Whittaker then spoke of the superior advantages of the children over those of their parents, and related a story of a little crippled boy who went to the Salt Lake Temple on crutches and came out entirely well and able to walk or run without them.

After some more reports had been given, Elder Goddard said he was delighted with the theological class exercise as well as with the class exercise of yesterday. He spoke on the necessity of keeping the Word of Wisdom and breaking all sinful habits, and concluded by singing in his happy style, "Cold water is the drink for me."

Elder Maeser said discipline is the climate of the school and will not grow if the climate is against it. Many teachers have knowledge but not discipline. Discipline is seen in the eye and walk of teachers. We must talk with our eyes, as a mother does, more than with the mouth. Wherever the eyes of children are, there are their minds. Talk to the class in your own language and not in the language of the book. Young ladies should teach in the primary grades. If your heart is not with your teaching you will not have the hearts of your children.

Singing by the school and prayer by Supt. Robert Dean.

2 p.m.—After the usual exercises of singing and prayer, the sacrament was administered by the officers of the Second ward, and a class exercise was given by the second intermediate department of the Third ward under the direction of its teacher, Elder Anderson. Then Supt. L. F. Moench presented the general and local Sunday school officers, who were all unanimously sustained.

Miss Angie Hinchcliff read an excellent essay on the causes of the growth and decline of personal influence in Sunday school work.

Supt. Ballantyne then gave his report and stated that there were twenty-seven Sunday schools in the Stake with over 5,000 pupils and 550 teachers. He said that some of the teachers have no excuse to stay and do all prepare their lessons. We need more consecrated teachers and be opposed to the presence of the Stake and the Deseret Sunday School Union users for the privilege of opening a department in the Union Stake Academy for the instruction of Sunday school workers. We could have at least 100 students this winter taking lessons in the Bible, in the theory and art of teaching and in music.

W. A. Nutt, graduate, read an excellent essay, showing the necessity of preparation for class work.

President George Q. Cannon gave much information in regard to the importance of good habits, and that children should be so taught to value the gospel and their standing in the Church that they would be willing to die for it. It were better they should die than lose their standing. He said he felt that there was carelessness among the people—children should be kept out of the way of temptation; teach them earnestly to do right and the impressions made will continue with them all through life; never teach the children to drink tea or coffee, or allow them to use tobacco. He felt that God would not much longer bear with our trifling and follies, and that we would have to suffer the consequences of His displeasure unless we repent.

Singing by the choir, and benediction by Superintendent Ballantyne.

A Teachers' meeting was held immediately after the meeting was closed, when much previous instruction was given by President Cannon, who dwelt chiefly upon the infinite importance of select seed, and said the evil was far too prevalent and must be met.

Thus ended one of the best conferences ever held in Weber Stake.

SHE WAS A HEROINE.

A TALE OF THE DEATH OF PRESIDENT LINCOLN.

"There," said a Lewiston officer, to a woman passing up Fine street, who I personally know is a heroine. I was in the city of Shreveport, Louisiana, on the day that Abraham Lincoln was shot and the woman was the wife of a dealer in shipping," quoths the Lewiston Journal. "They lived in Genoa street in that city and on the top of their house was a flagstaff. When she heard that Lincoln was dead, her husband turned away, she put up the United States flag at half-mast. After breakfast a soldier came up the street and, seeing the flag, went up to the door and requested it taken down. She explained why it was up and refused politely, but decidedly, to take it down. He smiled warningly and went away saying:

"'Well, I have done my duty.'

"A short time after a lieutenant with six soldiers came up the street, and opening the gate, entered the yard.

"'What do you want?' inquired the woman.

"'I want you to take down that flag,' responded the officer.

"Again she explained that Lincoln was dead and she was an American.

"'I can't help it. I have orders to take down that flag and I shall do it,' the officer responded.

"He started to go around the house to enter it where he was encountered by a man named Charles Goodrich from Orinkin, Maine, who said: 'If you take another step toward that flag, I'll dye the ground here the color of your coats.' The officer stepped back to the line and ordered his men to advance. But they noticed at the upraised axe and stood still, seeing the advantage. Charles Goodrich ordered them out of the yard and they went. The next day, when the horrible murder of Lincoln was more fully realized, the mayor sent an apology to the lady, and at the indignation meeting which was held only half she was upbraided for her action. She lives in Lewiston now and one of her daughters married a Lisbon street merchant."
